Big Clearance Sale at The Farmers Exchange

The Farmers Exchange of Columbiana makes announcement in this issue of the Reporter of a Big January Clearance Sale to be begun Saturday, January 5th and to continue for 10 days. The purpose of this sale, Mr. Harwell states, is to clear the shelves of winter goods and so make room for spring stock soon to be coming in.

Mr. Harwell believes that advertising, telling the people what he has, and the price at which his goods are being offered, is an essential part of modern merchandising, and he has practiced that policy consistently since coming to Columbiana a few months ago. The immense patronage that his store is enjoying is doubtless to be attributed in part to this policy.

Mr. ans Mrs. J. A. Finley will move soon into their new home, the place formery occupied by Mrs. Sallie Moore, which they bought recently.

Harpersville Cemetery Improved

Harpersville, Ala., Jan. 1, 1924.
Mr. Editor:

I wrote an article in your valuable paper some time ago concerning the Harpersville cemetery, asking for help to clean off the same. and some responded very liberally by sending me contributions, and our people, the most of them, met me the day appointed to clean it off and worked manfully, but the rain came and knocked up our plans to some extent. We were a part of three days at this work, and while there is still a little work to be done, yet we have it in the best shape that it has been in in thirty years.

When this work is completed, if it ever is, and which I am going to try my best to do and with a little help can be done, the Harpersville cemetery will be one of the prettiest in the county. The following persons sent me the following amounts and I spent it on help:

Wade Posey, Birmingham	$5.00
Prof. S. J. Strock, Woodlawn	2.00
J. F. McGraw, Vincent	2.00
Mrs. Mattie Smothers, Vincent	1.00
Postmaster Sharbutt, Vincent	1.00
E. E. Florey, Vincent	1.00

A. R. Looney, Columbiana	1.00
Mrs. Sallie Florey, Vincent	1.00
Arthur Hatcher Savannah,	1.00
J. M. Morrell, Vincent,	50c
Total	$17.50

Now to each and every one of these we want to thank you and to those who did not help in any way we hope you will be pleased with what we have done and that you may have a prosperous and happy New Year.

NEW COUNTY AGENT BEGAN WORK JAN. 1

A. A. Lauderdale of Auburn, who was recently chosen by State Extension Department and the Board of Revenue as county agent for Shelby county, has come to Columbiana and has already entered upon the duties of his important office.

Mr. Lauderdale is well fitted both by experience and by training for the work of county agent. He was reared on a farm, was graduated from the agricultural high school at Hamilton and from Auburn. At Auburn he made a special study of live stock and since his graduation has been teaching in the animal husbandry department at the college.

Mr. Lauderdale was selected by the authorities for the work in Shelby county because they felt that the place demanded the services of the best man to be found and because in him they found a man who showed by his record that he had made it a rule of his life to do well whatever he had undertaken to do.

The Extension authorities feel that because of its location and other advantages, Shelby county is destined to become recognized as one of the leading agricultural counties in Alabama; and they know by experience that the development which they hope to see can be best done under the leadership of a trained county agent. They regard Shelby county as an opportunity for such a type of Extension work as will be highly creditable to the department and saisfactory to the people for whom the work is done.

They know too by experience, and will say to the people of Shelby county at every opportunity, that the work they hope to see done can not be done unless the! county agent has the swmpathetic co-operation and loyal support of every agency in the county, both among organizations and individuals, that can contribute in any way to the development of the county's agricultural resources

Mr. Lauderdale has been assigned an office in the court house and he will be glad to have the farmers and all others who are interested in the progress of the work he represents call to see him. His plans are to spend Wednesdays and Saturdays of every week in his office so as to have opportunity to meet as many farmers and at the same time become acquainted with conditions and the needs of the county at large.

Alabama Power Company Distributes Dividends

Dividends amounting to over $100,000 were distributed to holders of Alabama Power Company Preferred Stock on January 1st, in accordance with the action of the Company's Board of Directors who declared the fifteenth regular quarterly dividend at their last meeting.

The Alabama Power Commany markets its own preferred stock through an Investment Department maintained for the purpose. The stock was first placed on the market in June 1920 and citizens of the state have each year manifested their faith in the company by increasing their purchases. Thomas Bragg, manager of the investment department, reports that during the year just closed more stock was sold than during 1920, 1921 and 1922 combined, Alabamians purchasing nearly $3,000,000 of Power Company preferred during 1923.

Mr. Bragg predicts that during 1924 the record of this year will be surpassed and Alabama Power Company Preferred will continue to lead in the customer ownership field.

Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Niven had as their guests for the week-end Mr. and Mrs. Harry Falkner of Buffalo, N. Y. and A. T. Veasey, of Altoona, Pa.

E. A. Turner has bought from Mrs. George Mason the vacant lot adjoining the Milner home and will move to it the large two-story building on the Moore corner, which he will convert into a handsome residence.. Mr. Turner bought the building from C. R. Tinney, proprietor of the City Garage, who announces that he will begin early in the new year the erection of a modern filling station on the corner.

EVENTS OF 1923 PASS IN REVIEW

Happenings at Home and Abroad During the Twelve Months That Have Just Closed.

PRESIDENT HARDING'S DEATH

Futile Attempts to Settle German Reparations Problem—France Occupies the Ruhr—Turkey's Diplomatic Triumph—Terrible Earthquake in Japan—American Prosperity and Politics.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

With the exception of Germany, ruined by her own acts, and Japan, shattered by the forces of nature, all the world was better off at the close of 1923 than at its beginning. This is especially true of the United States, Italy, Finland, Czechoslovakia, Turkey, and probably Russia, though the information coming from the land of the soviets has been so colored that it was difficult to determine true conditions there.

Economic recovery of the world was retarded, as it was during the previous twelve months, by failure to settle the matter of the German reparations and by the steady decline of Germany toward the point of absolute collapse. The occupation of the Ruhr by France and the resulting disputes with Great Britain brought on repeated crises each of which seemed to threaten the final disruption of the entente cordiale.

Several proposals for commissions to determine Germany's capacity to pay were made, but each of them required the participation of the United States and each time the American government found unacceptable the restrictions insisted upon by Premier Poincare of France. As the year drew toward its close, however, the reparations commission was preparing to appoint two committees of experts to help work out the problem, and President Coolidge approved of the appointment of Americans on these committees.

Turkey gained power and prestige through the Lausanne peace conference and the resulting treaties with the allies and with the United States. Late in the year she added herself to the list of republics with Mustapha Kemal Pasha as her first president.

Under the leadership of General Primo Rivera and other army officers and aristocrats, there was a house-cleaning in Spain that resulted in the turning out of the crowd of politicians that had for years been battening on the spoils of misgovernment. The so-called democratic government was overthrown and a dictatorial council substituted.

President Harding's death in San Francisco threw all the United States—and indeed all the civilized world—into heartfelt mourning. Vice President Calvin Coolidge, succeeding to the chief magistracy, carried on in general the policies of his predecessor. Mr. Harding had been considered the certain nominee of the Republican party in 1924, and his demise threw open the lists and made the political contest intensely interesting.

INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS

German reparations and complications resulting from the failure to pay them occupied much of the attention of European diplomats. Early in January the allied premiers held a futile conference in Paris, and France prepared for separate action to collect from Germany. About the same time Secretary Hughes announced the United States would not consider Berlin's proposal for a four-power European peace pact and also informally advised France not to occupy the Ruhr. France, however, was determined, and the reparations commission gave her the opening by declaring Germany in willful default in coal deliveries. Germany formally protesting and Great Britain not approving, the French on January 11 began the occupation of the Ruhr, seizing its most important cities one after another. President Harding expressed his disapproval by recalling the American troops from Germany. Chancellor Cuno, with the support of the reichstag, declared a "moral war" of passive resistance and ordered all state employees not to obey the French. The mine owners and later the industrial magnates fell in with this program and for months the French were balked in their efforts to get any considerable revenue from the region. They seized customs, bank funds and railways, and arrested many industrial leaders and officials, but the passive resistance was not broken until late in September. The occupation was assisted actively by Belgium and passively by Italy. Great Britain, though she did not actually hamper the French, gave them no help.

On May 2 Germany made a new reparations offer of $7,500,000,000, with many conditions, and it was immediately rejected by France. England also declared the offer insufficient. Berlin then asked a new reparations conference on the total sum and offered annuities of 1,500,000,000 gold marks. Great Britain invited France and Italy to join her in a reply to this, and submitted a draft of her proposed answer, but this also fell through. The British government thereupon sent a note to France and Belgium declaring the Ruhr occupation illegal and a failure, insisting on an impartial reparations inquiry after the plan suggested by Secretary of State Hughes, and saying France must pay enough of the money lent her to enable Great Britain to pay America. Again no results, Premier Poincare declaring Germany must settle the reparations question before an economic accord could be reached. Chancellor Stresemann, who had succeeded Dr. Cuno, announced the abandonment of passive resistance and said no more reparations would be paid and the treaty of Versailles would be repudiated. He also put an end to the aid which the government had been giving the inhabitants of the occupied regions. Soon after this the industrial magnates of the Ruhr and Rhineland signed a pact with the French for the resumption of work and of payments of material.

In December the reparations commission decided to appoint two committees of experts, one to examine German money in foreign lands and the other to try to devise means by which Germany might balance her budget and stabilize her finances. Poincare now seemed in a yielding mood and President Coolidge announced he approved of unofficial American participation through the selection of Americans as members of those committees.

Turkey's diplomatic victory at Lausanne was not easily won. While the conference there was deadlocked in January Mustapha Kemal mobilized armies to move against Constantinople, Mosul and other points and called three classes to the colors to combat the Greeks in Thrace. The quarreling in the peace conference was incessant. On January 31 the allies submitted a treaty to the Turks, demanding its acceptance within four days. The Turks agreed to sign it if the economic clauses were reserved for future settlement. Lord Curzon departed in a rage, and on February 6 the conference broke up. Diplomatic conversations continued, however; the British indicated they would make concessions, and the conference was resumed on April 23, Russia being excluded. On July 24 a treaty was signed which gave to Turkey nearly all she had demanded, the question of oil concessions being left for later consideration. A few days later the United States and Turkey signed treaties of amity and commerce and on extradition. By October 2 the allied military forces had evacuated Constantinople and the Turks soon after took formal possession of their old capital.

Warfare between Italy and Greece in the autumn was narrowly averted. An Italian military commissioner and his aids were murdered in Albania and on August 28 Italy demanded that Greece apologize abjectly and pay reparations. The Greek reply being unsatisfactory, the Italians promptly bombarded and occupied the island of Corfu. Greece appealed to the League of Nations, which was disposed to take up the affair; but Premier Mussolini declared Italy would withdraw from the league and ignore its decision if it insisted on arbitrating the dispute. The situation was most embarrassing for the league, but the allied council of ambassadors rescued it by assuming jurisdiction and ordering Greece to comply with Italy's demands almost in their entirety. Greece gave in, apologized and paid 50,000,000 lire indemnity, and on September 27 Italy evacuated Corfu.

Mussolini achieved another triumph by an agreement with Jugo-Slavia whereby Italy obtained possession of Fiume.

In January American and British commissions met in Washington to negotiate the refunding of the British war debt to America, and their task was soon completed to the apparent satisfaction of both nations. The Washington treaties on reduction of armament and concerning the Pacific were ratified by Italy in February and by France in July. Through the efforts of an American commission sent to Mexico, the government of our neighbor was finally brought to amicable terms and the long-withheld recognition was accorded by Washington on August 31.

DOMESTIC AFFAIRS

Overshadowing all other events in the United States was the death of President Warren G. Harding. He had long planned a trip through the Middle and Far West and to Alaska in order to talk with the people and get their reactions. Though tired out and far from well, he started on June 20, accompanied by Mrs. Harding and several members of his cabinet. After delivering several important addresses, notably one advocating American membership in the World court, he sailed to Alaska. Returning thence to San Francisco, he fell ill there on July 28. Four days later, on August 2, he passed away. The taking of his body back to Washington, the services there, the trip to Marion, Ohio, and the interment there of the little town's distinguished citizen on August 10 gave the people of the country ample opportunity to show in what high esteem and affection they held Mr. Harding. Literally the entire nation mourned sincerely, and all the other nations gave expression to their grief.

Vice President Calvin Coolidge took the oath of office as President at his father's home in Plymouth, Vt., and assumed his new duties at once, retaining the entire Harding cabinet and announcing that he would carry out the Harding policies where possible. It had been taken for granted that the Republican party would nominate Mr. Harding in 1924, and Mr. Coolidge immediately became a probable nominee. However, before the year closed other candidates came forward, notably Senator Hiram Johnson of California, Governor Pinchot of Pennsylvania and Senator LaFollette of Wisconsin. For the Democratic nomination there were several probabilities, including Senator Underwood and William G. McAdoo, avowed candidates, and Senator Ralston of Indiana, Gov. Al Smith of New York and Governor Silzer of New Jersey. There was much talk of the possible nomination of Henry Ford by one of the old parties or by a third party, and his admirers were exceedingly active.

The Republican national committee, acceding to the wishes of the President, selected Cleveland as the place for the national convention of 1924, and set June 10 as the date for its opening. Previous action by which the representation of the southern states was reduced was rescinded by the committee.

Secretary of the Interior Fall retired from President Harding's cabinet on March 4 and was succeeded by Hubert Work, the latter's place as postmaster general being filled by the appointment of Harry S. New. Attorney General Daugherty, against whom impeachment charges had been made the previous year, was fully exonerated by the house judiciary committee, the report being adopted by the house on January 25. Among the appointments made by President Harding were Robert Woods Bliss as minister to Sweden; Miles Poindexter as ambassador to Peru; R. M. Tobin as minister to the Netherlands; E. T. Sanborn as associate justice of the Supreme court of the United States, and Gen. Frank T. Hines as director of the veterans' bureau. The latter appointment was followed by charges of mismanagement, waste, etc., against the former director, Colonel Forbes, which were investigated by a senate committee.

Having passed the agricultural credits bill and many acts of lesser importance, and killing the ship-subsidy bill, the Sixty-seventh congress came to an end on March 4. The Sixty-eighth congress met on December 3 and the Republican majority was so slender that a bloc of so-called progressives held the balance of power. Speaker Gillett was re-elected and President Coolidge then delivered his first message, in which he declared himself in favor of American membership in the World court, advocated reduction of taxes and opposed the soldiers' bonus.

Two governors got into serious trouble. Walton of Oklahoma, who said he was fighting the Ku Klux Klan, came into conflict with the state legislature and assumed virtually dictatorial powers. Despite his efforts to prevent it, the legislature met in special session, the house impeached him on numerous charges and the senate, sitting as a trial court, found him guilty and removed him from his office. Walton was then indicted by a grand jury. The other state executive in trouble was Gov. W. T. McCray of Indiana, who got into deep financial entanglements and also was indicted.

The Supreme court on April 30 decided that foreign vessels could not bring liquor into American ports, even though sealed, and later the liquor stores of several liners were seized at New York. Foreign nations protested but could not well take any action. However, late in the year the government negotiated an agreement with Great Britain whereby the right of search was extended to about twelve miles from shore, and in return it was expected the ship liquor regulation would be modified. The extension of the search limit was made necessary by the activities of the smuggling fleets which kept the country well supplied with wretched liquor. On May 4 the New York legislature repealed the state prohibition law. In October a conference of governors on law enforcement was held in Washington, and President Coolidge pledged the full aid of the government machinery, but insisted each state must assume its own share of the burden.

President Coolidge had the appointment of one ambassador last year. Col. George Harvey resigned his post at the court of St. James on October 4 and Frank B. Kellogg was selected for the place.

Immediately after its summer vacation the Supreme court rendered an important decision upholding the laws of the Pacific coast states which prohibit aliens from owning land. These laws, of course, are directed against the Japanese especially.

FOREIGN AFFAIRS

Germany's internal troubles, political, economic and financial, were inextricably tangled up with her international woes and brought her to so low a state that her regeneration seemed at times almost hopeless. Royalists, separatists and communists conspired, revolted and rioted. Unemployment increased and in the cities all but the industrial magnates and the profiteers were reduced to near starvation, although the crops were large and the rural districts were overrunning with food stuffs. The government tried to meet the situation by keeping up the flood of paper marks and of course the mark declined until billions could be had for one dollar and those who had anything to sell refused to accept the practically worthless currency. In August Chancellor Cuno presented a "rescue plan" to the reichstag. It was rejected and Cuno resigned, Gustave Stresemann succeeding him and forming the first coalition majority government in Germany's history. He undertook to reform the finances by the issue of a new currency, the renten mark, backed by the country's resources. This was far from successful.

Throughout the year the royalists or nationalists of Germany were exceedingly active, those of Bavaria usually taking the lead. In September the Bavarians actually revolted against the Berlin government and made Gustave von Kahr dictator of the state. The reichstag thereupon gave Stresemann dictatorial powers. A little later the socialist governments of Saxony and Thuringia refused to obey the chancellor, and he subdued them by a show of military force. He yielded to Bavaria's demand for greater autonomy, but this was not enough. On November 8 Hitler, leader of the Bavarian Fascisti, and General von Ludendorff attempted a royalist coup d'etat in Munich and other cities and threatened to march on Berlin. This revolt was rather easily put down by the national police and the workers and Hitler and Ludendorff were arrested. On November 10 Frederick William, the former crown prince, suddenly returned to Germany from Holland.

In October the separatists of the Rhineland got into action and set up a republic which was looked upon with favor by France. However, it was not able to maintain itself very successfully, and there was almost continuous fighting with the national forces. Another separatist movement was started in the Bavarian palatinate, but it failed for the time being.

Late in November Chancellor Stresemann's coalition went to pieces and, being denied a vote of confidence in the reichstag, he resigned. Dr. Heinrich Albert, unpleasantly remembered in America, and Adam Stegerwald both failed to form acceptable ministries, and so Dr. Wilhelm Marx, leader of the Catholic party, was made chancellor on November 29 and got together a cabinet that included Stresemann as foreign minister and that was expected to carry on his policies.

The revolution in Spain, which was connected with the unsatisfactory war with the Moors, took place in September. The revolt, led by General Primo Rivera, Marquis de Estella, was against the cabinet and corrupt politicians and also was an expression of reaction against the growth of socialism and syndicalism among the workers. The king supported it and the cabinet resigned on September 14. A military directorate was established and Rivera was made sole chief of the administration. The new government made itself popular at once by a campaign on profiteering and gambling, by cutting expenses to the bone and by other drastic measures of reform. Trial by jury was suspended because of the corruption of the courts. Altogether, it was a happy revolution for Spain.

Bulgaria also had a revolution, almost bloodless, when Stamboulisky's peasant government was overthrown on June 9 and the premier himself was captured and killed. Professor Zankoff was made head of the new government. In September the Communists and peasants resorted to arms in an attempt to regain power, but they were soon suppressed.

Andrew Bonar Law, prime minister of Great Britain, resigned on May 20 because of the illness that caused his death in October. He was succeeded by Stanley Baldwin, who had been chancellor of the exchequer. On October 1 an imperial conference and an economic conference of the British empire opened in London, and various important measures were debated and adopted designed to bind the component parts of the empire by closer commercial ties, at the same time leaving them their full measure of self-government. These questions brought to the fore the old question of free trade or protection, and since the government had promised there should be no change in the tariff policy during the life of the existing parliament, Prime Minister Baldwin dissolved parliament on November 16 and an election was called for December 6. Former Premier Lloyd George, who had been on a speaking tour of the United States, arrived home just in time to make up his old quarrel with the other wing of the liberal party, and went into the campaign with vigor. When the votes were counted it was found that while the Liberals and Laborites both had won many seats from the Conservatives, no one of the three parties had a majority. The Laborites, however, announced that their leader, Ramsay MacDonald, would undertake to form a government as soon as called upon, whereupon Prime Minister Baldwin declared he and his cabinet would retain office at least until the new parliament had met in January.

During the early months of the year the Irish republicans continued their guerrilla warfare on the Free State, but on April 10, their chief of staff, Liam Lynch, was killed in a fight and on April 27 Eamon de Valera ordered his followers to cease hostilities and negotiate peace. The Dublin government refused to treat with him and on August 15 he was placed under arrest.

Chinese factions fought bitterly throughout the entire year, and in October President Li Yuan-hung was succeeded by Marshal Tsao-kun. Considerable excitement was caused in May by the capture of a number of foreigners by Chinese bandits, who demanded large ransom and immunity. The prisoners included several Americans and English, and for a time armed intervention by their governments seemed likely. However, the Pekin government bought off the outlaws after long negotiations.

In Russia, as the soviet rulers gradually modified their Communistic policies, there seemed to be steady progress toward stability. Most other nations still withheld recognition of the Moscow government, but a number of them made commercial arrangements with the soviet regime. The Russian supreme court condemned Archbishop Zepliak and Vicar General Butchkavich of the Roman Catholic church to death for revolutionary activities. The latter was executed, but Zepliak's sentence was commuted to ten years' imprisonment.

Early in December another revolution was attempted in Mexico, the leader being Adolfo de la Huerta who was offended because President Obregon would not support his candidacy for the presidency. The revolt spread rapidly, but before the month closed Obregon seemed to have the situation well in hand.

INDUSTRIAL AND LABOR

Only one really big strike marred the record of the year in the United States, and that did not last long. The miners in the anthracite fields and their employers tried in vain to fix a new wage scale and working conditions, and on August 21 they broke off negotiations. With the approval of President Coolidge, Governor Pinchot of Pennsylvania undertook to handle the problem, and proposed a compromise on August 29. The strike began officially two days later, but the negotiations were continued. Pinchot's plan was accepted September 8 and the miners resumed work on September 20.

At various times during the year the railway labor board adjusted the wages of certain classes of rail workers, usually raising them. Some of the roads made separate agreements with their employees, giving them increased pay. April 9 the steel industry raised the wages of common labor 11 per cent and adjusted the pay of other classes, and on April 13 the Chicago packing house employees and building trade workers were given an increase. The steel makers had been attacked bitterly for maintaining the twelve-hour day, and on August 2 Elbert H. Gary of the U. S. Steel corporation announced its elimination.

The American Federation of Labor met in annual convention in Portland, Ore., and, among other acts, voted against the formation of a political labor party and also against the recognition of the Russian Soviet government. The advocates of these measures and indeed all the more radical factions in the federation were routed by President Gompers, who was re-elected.

DISASTERS

Unequaled in modern times was the disaster that befell Japan on September 1 when violent earthquake shocks and resultant fires destroyed Yokohama entirely and about two-thirds of Tokyo and ruined many smaller towns. The number of killed was estimated at 225,000, and the injured at more than half that number. Though many of the houses were flimsy, the property loss was enormous. The hundreds of thousands of refugees suffered severely, but the American government and the American Red Cross were swift with relief measures, and other nations joined in the work. Shiploads of food and millions of dollars were rushed to the stricken land, and the Japanese government was materially aided in its task of rebuilding the ruined cities.

Among other serious disasters of the year were: January 3, twenty persons killed by collapse of a bridge at Kelso, Wash.; February 8, mine explosion at Dawson killed 120, and one at Cumberland, B. C., killed 30; February 18, twenty-two patients and three attendants were killed in insane asylum fire on Ward's island, New York; March 10, Greek transport sank with 150 soldiers; April 6, tidal waves in Corea and Japan killed 600; May 14, Hot Springs, Ark., partly destroyed by flood and fire; May 17, seventy-three killed in burning of a schoolhouse at Cleveland, S. A Prosperous New Year

"Christmas Passed Quietly."—

"Christmas passed quietly in our community," is the report that comes from the various parts of Shelby county. No account of any unseemly disturbance anywhere has reached the Reporter but there is much to tell of the joys and pleasures of the Christmas season.

Christmas trees and other forms of Christmas observances were held in the churches and school houses and gay parties in many homes were arranged for the young people.

Hundreds of people came "back home to spend Christmas" and there was joy in many homes because of the "old broken links of affection restored." Many lives will be enriched throughout the coming year because of the memories of these blessed days at home

It is a good sign that people are coming thus to keep the holy Christmas tide in a manner befitting its sacred origin.

Pay Poll Tax to Vote.—

The law of our state makes the payment of poll tax one of the qualifications for voting and the law requires that this tax be paid by February 1st, in order to vote in this year's elections. That means less than a month in which to pay poll tax with the privilege of voting.

The elections to be held this year are important. In addition to choosing a president, vice-president and members of congress, the people will be called upon to fill a number of important state and county offices. In a democracy like ours every election is important because it is in the choosing of their officers that the people determine the character of government we shall have. If we elect good men to office we shall have good government.

An additional reason why every good citizen should pay his poll tax willingly and gladly is the fact that this tax is used altogether for the support of the common schools.

From Mr. Lauderdale

To The Farmers of Shelby County:

On January 1st, I shall take up my duties officially as County Agent of Shelby county. My office is in the Grand Jury Room at the Court House at Columbiana. As far as practicable, I will be in the office on Wednesdays and Saturdays of each week, and will be glad to have you visit me and talk over any problems that you may have, from time to time.

I expect to visit your farm and see you individually and collectively, as soon as possible, in order that I may be of service to you. As there are approximately 2600 farmers in Shelby county, you realize that it will take some time for me to get around, but I trust that you will feel free to come to see me at any time.

A. A. Lauderdale.

NEW YEAR'S GREETINGS

Dear Mr. Editor and readers of the Reporter:

A new year is upon us. It spells opportunity, although we begin the year we have no assurance that we will be here when the year closes. Let us remember that the life that counts for most is lived out in your homes. What you do there is the true index of your real self. We wish for you a new sense of power that you may be able to overcome the wrong and have the courage to uphold the right. Hoping that this year 1924 may be the greatest year of all of our lives, I am yours to serve

J. W. Shaw.

The Brown Mouse

By HERBERT QUICK

Did you ever hear of a mouse that did any good? Neither have we; but it appears that there is a brown one which has a great faculty for stirring up things in mouse society; and when a human is born with some of the characteristics of this little animal, he always manages to make a stir in his circles.

If you are a farmer you are going to revel in this story, for, along with some very delightful romance, it carries a number of ideas that are sure to be valuable in your business. If you are a town person it carries some ideas that will greatly interest you, and you will be charmed by its love story. Read about Jim Irwin, the human brown mouse, who dared to aspire to the affections of the queen mouse of his district.

New Serial Story Starting in Shelby County Reporter

IN MEMORY

Whereas, it has pleased God in infinite mercy to remove from our midst, our friend, Arnold Moore, who died on Dec. 1, 1923. He was reared in Shelby county, though recently moving to Pratt City, Ala where he was employed by the Semet-Solvay Co. Arnold is the third member of his family to cross over the river, a brother and mother having preceded him to the great beyond. He leaves a father and five brothers behind.

He was the oldest child, and since his mother's death had filled a place of responsibility which was growing greater each year. He had pledged himself to stay with his father and help to care for and rear his younger brothers.

He was ever ready and faithful at his work, and won for himself the esteem of those he worked for and with. He was loved by all and was always ready to lend a helping hand: and never turned a deaf ear to his fellow man in time of trouble. He was full of life and was strong was easily led by those of good influence. His thoughts for the future were for larger and better things.

The writer knew him personally and cannot say enough in his behalf. I visited him during his illness and was with him when he passed away. Just before he went a smile was on his face which meant to me that all was well and that the Lord of Lords was waiting to receive him.

Jas. W. Cordell.

IN MEMORY

On Friday evening, November 16, 1923, just as the sun was hiding its radiant beams behind the horizon, the angel of death crept into the home of Mrs. Martha Minor and bore away the gentle spirit of her beloved husband, "Uncle Pickens," as we knew him. This beautiful spirit breathed out its earthly life calmly and peacefully on the breast of the Savior whom it had trusted, and winged its way back to God.

We know that the hands now so cold and still, have not toiled and endured all these years in vain. For now he hears the glad words, "well done, good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joys of thy Lord." He is now singing and rejoicing around the great white throne of God.

His influence throws a golden halo of light around the Christian joys he has implanted in our stricken hearts and may the influence of his Heavenly virtues forever cling around the hearts of loved ones, and may each of us, by example strive to meet in that beautiful home not made with hands.

He was a kind and loving father, a true and affectionate husband. He was a loyal member of the Methodist church and was ever loyal to his church and his God.

Henry P. Hughes.

THE SONG OF THE RYE

I was made to be eaten
And not to be drank;
To be threshed in the barn,
Not soaked in a tank.
I come as a blessing
When put through a mill,
As a blight and a curse
When run through a still.
Make me up into loaves
And your children are fed,
But if into drink,
I'll starve them instead.
In bread I'm a servant,
The eater shall rule;
In drink, I am master,
The drinker a fool.

Mrs. Bradford Recommends Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Phoebus, Virginia.—"Having this opportunity I just cannot refrain from saying a word of praise for the Lydia E. Pinkham medicines. I have used them as occasion required for twenty years, and my three sisters have also used them, and always with the most gratifying results. During the Change of Life I had the usual distressing symptoms—hot flashes, insomnia, etc., — and I am pleased to testify to the wonderful results I obtained from the Vegetable Compound. I heartily recommend it to any woman and I will be pleased to answer any inquiries that might be sent to me through the publication of my testimonial."—Mrs. H. L. BRADFORD, 109 Armstead Street, Phoebus, Virginia.

Consider carefully Mrs. Bradford's letter. Her experience ought to help you. She mentions the trials of middle age and the wonderful results she obtained from Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If you are suffering from nervous troubles, irritability, or if other annoying symptoms appear and you are blue at times, you should give the Vegetable Compound a fair trial. For sale by druggists everywhere.

The Mosquito.

Outside of his fellow man, the mosquito is the most dangerous living creature to man, as more people die each year as a result of its bite than by the ravages of any other animal. The cobra snake of Indian ranks second in the number of people killed, but this is largely due to the superstitious character of the natives of India, who are afraid to kill the snakes.

A Scottish footballer was as bald as a billiard ball, but managed to keep it concealed by means of a cap and wig. In one match, however, as one of his opponents took a redhot shot at the goal, "Wiggly" got his head in the way of the ball and the wig and cap were knocked off. When the first player saw the result of his shot he seemed thunderstruck for a moment, and then exclaimed: "Guid heavens! I've scalped the mon!"

AROUND the NORTH POLE

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)

Valuable information which may help farmers, fishermen and sailors, as well as scientific data that will materially enrich man's knowledge of his spherical home promise to flow from an extended survey of the Arctic regions. Such a survey, to be made next spring, has been ordered by Secretary of the Navy Denby with the authority of President Coolidge, and will be participated in by the National Geographic society.

The expedition is to traverse the most extensive unexplored region that remains on the face of the earth. It lies, roughly, in a large wedge-shaped slice, at the threshold of American territory, between Point Barrow, Alaska, and the North pole. This northern tip of Alaska is separated from the pole by 1,287 statute miles, and the direct path between the two cuts the center of the million-square-mile region of mystery. It is not even known whether this is an area of land or water or both.

Only the edges of the unexplored region have been skirted, but deductions have been drawn from careful observations which seem to indicate that land exists there. This conclusion has been reached by a number of observers from a study of the movement and age of ice and from tide and wave measurements. If land exists there it may harbor minerals of great value as does Spitzbergen in a comparable situation on the other side of the pole. It is entirely possible that islands, if they do exist in the unknown region, may have such an economic value that the planting of the flag of the United States there may be accounted an act of great foresight by future generations.

Animal life abounds in the Arctic, fish are plentiful, and as a multiplying population turns more and more to the sea for its food the submarine life of the Polar regions assumes ever increasing importance. Oceanic mammals, especially whales and seals, emerge into reach of mankind's habitations upon the Arctic's outskirts.

Should aircraft be used to make a reconnaissance flight over the 1,287-mile course between Point Barrow and the pole the flight will be another memorable exhibition of the navy's initiative and daring, but it will be far from the rash adventure the layman might at first imagine.

Indeed, the flyers would have some marked advantages over a similar distance across Altantic ocean waters. The continuous daylight of a polar summer eliminates the handicap that darkness entails in the event of mechanical troubles. In an uncharted region the 24-hour day is especially helpful.

Not So Bad for Flyers.

Flyers would encounter leads of water short distances apart in much of the unknown zone. These would permit planes to alight, and would allow the use of convoy planes to bring supplies, relief, and additional personnel. The ice floes are virtually safety rafts for the flyers. In trouble, a plane alighting in the water always would be in easy reach of ice or, if under sufficient control to land on the ice, it could there make repairs or radio for relief.

The radio, of course, is a prime factor in eliminating hazard in Arctic flying.

Another important advantage the Arctic holds is the eternal calm of the waters. No high seas are ever encountered among the leads, as frequently is the case in the Atlantic.

Comfortable flying temperatures are practically certain in an Arctic summer. The weather bureau has recorded 100 degrees at Fort Yukon, Alaska. In this respect the use of aircraft gives the polar explorer a new-found advantage over the pioneers who had to brave the extreme cold of winter to gain the benefit of unbroken ice.

Not the least important of the scientific data that may be gathered are those in regard to weather conditions, a knowledge of which would be useful in the making of weather forecasts for the United States.

Weather Data Are Wanted.

Most of our weather is not a local matter at all, but results from disturbances that originate perhaps many thousands of miles away and "drift" to us. Thus our weather bill-of-fare is made up largely of a series of moving "lows" and "highs"—regions of subnormal and abnormal barometric pressure—made familiar to many readers by the roughly circular and elliptical lines on the daily maps of the United States weather bureau. Accompanying these disturbances are winds, hot and cold "spells," and rain or snow—the chief factors that make up our weather. Forecasting weather consists largely in detecting new disturbances as they show up on the western and northwestern borders of the country, learning their characteristics, and figuring out the paths that they probably will follow because of the prevailing pressures and temperatures ahead of them.

The great majority of these "lows" seem to originate over the warm sea south of the Aleutian islands in the winter, and over the interior of Alaska during the summer while the "highs" are found farther to the east. But some of the conditions that cause them to be "built up" in those places have their birth farther north in the Polar regions, and a better knowledge of temperature, pressure and wind changes there would undoubtedly facilitate weather forecasting.

In the search for the beginnings of its weather, the United States is not concerned with the entire Polar regions. It is most concerned, it happens, with the unexplored territory which lies north of Alaska. The outstanding and dominant factor in the Arctic's contribution to the world's weather is the draining of its cold air southward. Air is "slippery" and cold air is heavy.

When a pyramid of cold air has been built up near the North pole, the upper part slides down the slope and flows off with a considerable momentum to the south. This is true all around the pole. But there are certain channels in which the flow is concentrated by mountains and land masses. One channel is down the northern arm of the Atlantic between Europe and Greenland, others are up the great river valleys of Siberia; and still others are through Bering strait, over Alaska east of the Canadian Rockies and up the Mackenzie and other valleys of Canada. It is this latter group of cold-air rivers east of Siberia alone that directly influences the weather of the United States.

Daily Radio Reports.

Temperature, pressure and wind conditions—the really vital weather factors—are not known in the region north from Alaska to the pole, and are now merely assumed for scientific purposes largely by inference from observations taken on the famous Fram drift across the Asiatic side of the Polar regions. Accurate observations of the seasonal changes of the factors made on the ground—or rather "on the ice"—would be of great value in filling out science's permanent records. Daily reports by radio for a considerable period from a ship drifting across this region or from some other sort of base established in its heart, would be of incomparably greater value practically, for they might often furnish the unknown factor that would determine next week's weather in Minneapolis, Chicago and New York.

Besides adding to the world's knowledge of the factors that bear directly on weather, a study of the unexplored regions of the Arctic would greatly expand our knowledge of ocean currents

LESSON FOR JANUARY 6

THE CHOSEN LEADER AND THE CHOSEN LAND

LESSON TEXT—Gen. 12:1-7; 13:17-19.

GOLDEN TEXT—"In thee shall all the families of the earth be blessed."—Gen. 12:3.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Abraham, the Pioneer.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Abraham and the Migration to Canaan.

Following Adam's sin and the consequent ruin thereof God gave a promise of a Redeemer (Gen. 3:15). In providing this redemption God used a leader and made him to be the head of the nation through whom the Redeemer was to come and chose a land in which that nation was to live. That leader was Abraham and the land was Palestine.

I. Abraham, the Chosen Leader (Gen. 12:1-3; cf. 18:17, 18).

1. His Ancestors (Josh. 24:2, 14). Abraham's people were idolaters. Very likely as a young man he himself worshiped idols. Tradition furnishes us with some interesting stories touching his struggle against idolatry. He knew how hopelessly disastrous idolatry was to the morals of the people and, therefore, would be able to lead them back to God.

2. His Call (Gen. 12:1; cf. Acts 7:2, 3). God came to him in Ur of the Chaldees and said unto him, (1) "Get thee out of thy country." Abraham had lived long enough to have formed strong attachments to his country. (2) "Get thee out from thy kindred." Abraham was not only to leave behind him his native land but his relatives as well, even his father's house. Since his kindred were idolaters, he must leave them. Abraham was to become a pilgrim, to be without a home. Even in Canaan, the only land he ever owned was a burial place. (3). "Into the land that I will show thee." He was not told what or where the land was. "He went out not knowing whither he went." (Heb. 11:8). While he dwelt in tents during his earthly sojourn, yet "he looked for a city which hath foundations whose builder and maker is God." (Heb. 8:10).

3. What God Promised Him (Gen. 12:2, 3). (1) The Father of a Great Posterity (v. 2). This has been literally fulfilled. So far as the lineal descendants of Abraham are concerned, his posterity is great, but his spiritual seed is almost numberless. We are all children of Abraham by faith. (2). To Have a Great Name (v. 2). No name in all history equals that of Abraham in its honorable influence. His is the name of honor among Jews, Mohammedans and Christians. (3). A Blessing to Others (vv. 2, 3). He was not only to become great and share God's blessings, but to be a blessing to others. This is the prevailing law of the spiritual life—being blessed to be a blessing. He was not to go out primarily for what he could get but for what he could do. Those who respond to this law of the spiritual life become the very touchstone of God, so precious to Him that He will bless those who bless them and curse those who curse them. God makes common cause with His people. To maltreat God's children is to lift the hand against God. No one who goes against Him can prosper.

4. His Obedience (Gen. 12:4-6). Abraham fully obeyed God. At His call he departed, went out, not knowing whither he went.

II. Palestine, the Chosen Land.

Although Abraham was a pilgrim and was permitted to sojourn in the land, the land itself was given to his seed. Israel, God's chosen and most favored nation, the nation to whom He came nearest and gave most, in order that they might pass on His goodness to the other nations of the world, was given the most strategic position in the earth. "Palestine was adapted as no other country to God's great purpose of establishing a pure religion and sending it to all the world. To this end a single nation was selected, trained and placed in the center of the world so that when the time came to publish the true religion all lands could be reached." Full peace and blessing can only come to the world when Israel, the priestly nation, shall come back to her own land.

God's Love.

There are questions which nothing can answer but God's love, which nothing can meet but God's promise, which nothing can calm but a perfect trust in His goodness. There is shadow and mystery upon all the creation until we see God in it—there is trouble and fear until we see God's love in it.—Dewey.

The Past.

O, there are some who want to get away from all their past; who, if they could, would fain begin all over again. . . . But you must learn, you must let God teach you, that the only way to get rid of your past is to get a future out of it. God will waste nothing.—Phillips Brooks.

Hatred.

Hatred of a fellow-being is like a deadly cancer in the soul. It destroys all the finer sensibilities and nobler impulses

HAVE CARDUI TO DAUGHTER

Alabama Mother Had Thorough Confidence in Cardui, as a Result of Her Own Long, Successful Use of It.

Gadsden, Ala.—"My back and hips gave me a great deal of trouble before my first baby was born," Mrs. J. Daugherty recently told a visitor at her home on Route 2, here. "When I became . . . the second time," continued Mrs. Daugherty, "I had the same trouble, only worse . . . Medicines did me no good at all; in fact, I got worse instead of better. Finally, when I had given up hope of ever being well, a neighbor told me about Cardui. My husband got me a bottle and I started on it at once. Immediately I began to improve. I have taken Cardui ever since, when I was puny . . . For female trouble it can't be beat. I gave it to my daughter when she was thirteen. I took it because I suffered so much aching all over—arms, legs and head. My head would ache for weeks at a time. After taking Cardui I have completely recovered."

Cardui is a perfectly harmless, mild, purely vegetable extract of medicinal herbs. One of the ingredients of which it is composed has been known to medical science for over six hundred years and has been recommended by medical writers as being of great value in many female ailments. HIGHWAY SYSTEM IS REORGANIZED

STATE IS DIVIDED INTO FOUR DISTRICTS FOR MAINTENANCE OF HIGHWAYS

DISTRICTS KNOWN AS A, B, C AND D

All Maintenance of State Highways To Come Under Personal Supervision and Control of District Director.

Montgomery.—Reorganization of the system for maintaining Alabama's highways, through the division of the state into four maintenance districts, with a director in charge of each district acting under the instruction of Associate State Highway Commissioner J. Freeman Suttle, who is in charge of maintenance, has been announced by Commissioner Suttle.

The announcement followed a conference between Commissioner Suttle, State Highway Engineer W. S. Keller, Principal Assistant State Highway Engineer Colonel W. A. McCalla, and the directors who will be in charge of the four maintenance districts which have been created. These districts will be known as Districts A, B, C, and D, respectively.

R. D. England, of Marion, has been appointed director of District A, which includes the Sand Mountain section and the Tennessee Valley. W. P. Moon, of Goodwater, was named director of District B, which includes Birmingham and the Birmingham district. T. L. Austin, of Wetumpka, was appointed director of District C, which takes in all of the Southeast Alabama, and D. M. Rencher, of Uniontown, was appointed Director of District D, which includes all Southwest Alabama.

The directors on Jan. 1, took over their new work, and thereafter the maintenance of all highways in their respective territories that have been taken over for maintenance by the state will be under their personal supervision and control. Each will make periodical reports to Commissioner Suttle of the work accomplished.

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF

A hearing on the project of the Gulf Ports Terminal Railway to build a bridge acros Mobile Bay will be held in the United States engineer's office in Mobile during the latter part of January, Major Earl North announced. Elwood McLaughlin, president of the Gulf Ports Terminal Railway company, has been advancing the project for a number of years. He has built a railroad about 20 miles out of Pensacola and proposes to come into Mobile via the bridge.

Gus Martin, an alleged rum runner, was caught with seven gallons of whiskey in an automobile in East Gadsden, and has been locked up in the county jail Sheriff Leath, who made the arrest, states that Martin was asleep in the car when found, having became exhausted by a long ride from the wilds of Cleburne county.

Much interest has been shown at the state capitol in the report that Gov. W. W. Brandon will go into the record in the case of Theo Lacy to consider the granting of a permenent parole to Lacy, who was sentenced for alleged embezzlement of around $100,000 in state funds as chief clerk of the convict department under the O'Neal administration.

Ground has been broken for the new cotton tie buckle plant at Attalla. The site is on Third street and the work of construction is being supervised by Superintendent Todd. It is said that this is to be the first of a series of small plants to be located in the district to consume raw iron and steel made at Attalla.

1923 was the greatest year in the history of the telephone industry in Alabama in the matter of additional investments, new construction work and the number of new telephones installed, Southern Bell Telephone officers said. It is estimated that gross additions to telephone plants in Alabama during the year amounted to more than $1,000,000.

Governor Brandon has accepted an invitation to attend the unveiling of the head of Robert E. Lee at Stone Mountain, near Atlanta, January 19, the birthday of the Confederate army chieftain.

Dora, a fast growing mining town, in the eastern part of Walker county, is making plans to pave the main streets through the city at an early date, according to Dora citizens.

Alabama City raised and destributed $1,000 to its poor Christmas. Four hundred dollars was spent on presents and baskets and $600 was split up into substantial purses for the very old men and women of the mill village.

So far only one Alabama Congressman has opposition for the coming election. Several weeks ago William L. White, of Birmingham, announced his candidacy for the Democratic nomination from the Tenth, opposing Congressman George Huddleston.

The giant five-stage electric pump, Company at Gadsden last May for which was purchased by the Alabama the purpose of pumping out the old Etowah mine, arrived Christmas day and will be intsalled as early as possible. The delay in delivery was due to the fact that the machine had to be built from special plans and specifications. The pump will be used to clear the water out of the mines, which were abandoned 10 or more years ago. When they are dry the Japanese corporation, which owns openings on the same ridge, will be able to work them. The Alabama Company expects the Etowah mines to supply all of its red ore requirements.

The Tuscaloosa county board of revenue has adopted a new road law to protect the roads, following rains, from being damaged by heavily loaded trucks and wagons. The new law became effective January. 1. The law describes the maximum load that may be hauled over the roads of the county following rains amounting to one-tenth of an inch. Another provision of the law prescribes that drivers must not lock the wheels of their wagons when traveling down hill or travel in water ditches along the road. The maximum penalty of violating this law will be a fine of $500 or 90 days on the road, or both.

The International Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers as plaintiff in error has thrown the suit of J. W. Green, of Selma, pending for about five years, into the United States supreme court by petition for writ of error filed with the supreme court of Alabama. In this litigation Green sought damages from the brotherhood for his expulsion from the order and was awarded the sum of $12,500 by the final decision of the Alabama supreme court.

In the first two months of the present year a total of 150 prisoners who were sent to the Alabama penitentiary were convicted of violating the prohibition law. In the entire fiscal year 1922-23 a total of only 370 prisoners were sent to the penitentiary convicted of this offense. The above figures are from a summary for October and November, which has just been compiled and made public from the office of Roy L. Nolen, associate member of the state board.

E. M. Tuttle, well known truck grower of Morgan county, had on the streets a load of cabbage from the third crop grown by him this year. The cabbage, he said, came to maturity this winter without any protection from the weather. The cabbage was grown on Mr. Tuttle's farm at Austinville, two miles from Decatur.

Distribution of the satsuma crop is becoming more extensive every year and new markets are being opened up, which it is predicted will soon demand double Mobile's present output, according to officers of the Gulf Coast Citrus Exchange. The shipping season is practically over, but the fruit will remain in local markets for some time, iti s said.

Rates on gravel and sand to all stations on the Southern railroad between Selma and York and between Selma and Akron, also all stations on the L. & N. between Selma and Beatrice, including the Myrtle branch are reduced in a formal order issued by the Alabama Public Service Commission.

The Anniston branch of the Salvation Army distributed 58 baskets of food for Christmas dinner to as many families, gave Christmas stockings and other treats to 200 children, furnished 109 garments and 16 pairs of shoes to needy persons during the holiday period, according to a report of the commandants given out.

Investigated deaths from natural causes, headed the list in Jefferson county, during the year 1923 with 403, according to the annual report of Coroner J. D. Russum. Accidental deaths followed with 246, homicidal, third with 178, and suicides last, with 16.

The Alabama Company at Gadsden is hurrying the work of repairs on its furnace No. 1 in order to get it back into production not later than February 1, according to information. It is said the company is anxious to have the stack blown in at the earliest possible moment.

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Hollingsworth of 2500 Noble street, Anniston, held one of the most interesting family reunions of the Christmas season. Seven sons, two daughters, five daughters-in-law and 20 grandchildren were in attendance.

An order was issued by the Alabama public service commission allowing the Southern railway to discontinue the station at Millsite in Shelby county.

The Frisco station at Townley was destroyed by fire Christmas night. The Frisco railroad company already had planed to construct a new station and work will probably begin at an early date.

L. F. Wolf, a legless man who drives an automobile entirely with his hands, was presented with a new car by his fellow employes at the Gadsden steel mills Christmas morning. It is said every employe of the plant contributed to the purchase of the car.

Winter Find You Tired and Achy?

Do You Suffer Constant Backache—Feel Old and Worn Out? Then Follow the Advice of These Good Folks!

DO YOU get up these winter mornings feeling tired, weak—achy all over? Are you so lame, stiff and miserable it seems you can never get back in trim? Does your back ache with a dull, constant throb? Sharp, rheumatic pains torture you at every step?

Then you should be giving some attention to your kidneys!

Winter, you know, is danger time for the kidneys. That's because exposure to colds and chills wears down body resistance and throws an unusally heavy strain on the hard-working kidneys. The kidneys are apt to fall behind in keeping the blood-stream pure, and poisons accumulate that well kidneys would have filtered off.

Racking backaches come with stabbing pains; muscles and joints ache constantly; there are headaches, too, with dizziness and distressing kidney irregularites. Nerves are "jumpy"; one feels old—all worn out.

Give your weakened kidneys the help they need. Use Doan's Pills—a stimulant diuretic to the kidneys. Doan's have helped thousands. They are recommended by grateful users everywhere. Ask your neighbor!

"Use Doan's," Say These Good Folks:

S. P. BEXLEY, retired farmer, 502 Fifth Ave., E., Cullman, Ala., says: "I caught a heavy cold and it settled in my kidneys. My kidneys became so weak I was greatly annoyed by the unnatural passages of the secretions. My back pained me and the lameness across the small of it made it hard for me to work. When I stooped, stitches of pain seized me through my back. I used a box of Doan's Pills and they rid me of kidney weakness and lameness in my back and I felt better than ever."

MRS. J. B. WOOD, West End, Guntersville, Ala., says: "I took cold and it settled in my kidneys. The worst trouble was the too free action of my kidneys. I was subject to spells of backache and my back got lame and weak. I couldn't do very much hard work about the house for I tired quickly and was obliged to sit down many times during the day to rest. Dizzy spells were frequent and specks floated before my eyes, blurring my sight. One box of Doan's Pills cured me."

IN MEMORY

On Sunday afternoon, November 4, 1923, the death angel visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. T. C. Rush and took away their little daughter, Myra Frances, who was born February 5, 1923. She had been sick for several weeks and for days seemed to hover between life and death.

It is so hard to give our loved ones up but it is such a sweet consolation to know we can live to meet her. While we sincerely mourn her passing we are cheered and comforted by the memory of this choice spirit and rejoice that it was our privilege to have known her. While she lives beyond enjoying the reward of the faithful, her spirit will live on here to bless many.

In those last hours when the world was receding and the light of this world was fading from her dying eyes, no doubt the little one caught the gleam of the light that streams from the enternal city.

On each side of the new made grave there was an assemblage of friends who watched the little casket borne forward amid a profusion of flowers. Each and every one knew the little heart was forever hushed, knew it had numbered its throbs and gone to rest, we know the little gem is released from trouble and has gone above to shine.

The dear father, mother, brothers and sisters have suffered an irreparable loss. So while we sympathize with those she left behind we need not mourn for the dead. She has gone beyond, we believe to a future of added usefulness.

Finds Dairying a Profitable Side-Line

Auburn, Ala., December 17.—Milking cows and shipping cream is declared to be a "dependable side-line for cotton farmers" by J. J. Boyd, Hackleburg, Ala., in a report to W. L. McArthur, Marion county demonstration agent, of what he has done in dairying.

Mr. Boyd's cream selling experence dates back to May, 1922, when he began shipping his surplus cream from home raised grade Jersey cows after supplying all the milk and other dairy products needed by the family of nine. Four months later Mr. Boyd had paid $65.00 on a separator, and another three months found him with $53.00 in cash on hand, although some of his cows were resting.

Early in 1923 Mr. Boyd increased his herd, and. by April all were on a paying basis. "Since then," said he, "running expenses have been about one-third the income, counting nothing for the growth of cows and six calves kept for future use. The average sales for the first nine months of 1923 amounted to $60.83.

In concluding his report Mr. Boyd said: "With this experience we expect to increase our cream sales, decrease our boll weevil bill, make fertile fields, and keep plenty in the house." Dairy cows were referred to as "the gold mine of the South."

OLD LAND MARK BEING REMOVED

One of the landmarks of Columbiana is being removed this week as the two story building on the Moore corner is being torn down. E. A. Turner who bought the building last week has changed his plans and is having the material hauled to his lot on College street where he will begin soon the erection of a modern bungalow.

This building was put up 43 years ago, and has stood through all the years since. During this time three buildings on the corner now occupied by L. E. Christian have been burned and the corner where the Davis Drug Company now is has been burned twice.

Basket Ball Tournament For Alatama College In February of this Year.

Montevallo, Ala., Jan. 7.—The Basket Ball Tournament at Alabama College in February 1923 developed a great interest in athletic sports for high school girls. It was the first time that anything of the kind was ever attempted in Alabama. With only fifty days for advertising and for teams to get ready, twenty-seven responded to the invitation and played a series of games, Selma, Alabama, making the highest score and winning the loving cup. In the spring of 1923, a Girls' State Basketball Association was formed, and only teams that joined that association are allowed to enter preliminary contests for participating in the state contest at Montevallo in 1924. Teams were not allowed to join the association after October 1923. However, in the short time allowed, eighty high schools enrolled for their teams to enter the contests in their separate districts Each Congressional district will be entitled to send two teams to Montevallo, making twenty teams in all.

The interest manifested through out the state is far greater than it was last year. Preliminary games are being played in the various districts, so that in a short time winning teams will be announced. The tournament will be held February 21, 22 and 23. A beautiful trophy will be given again this year to the winning team.

In addition to the Basketball Tournament, there will be three other contests, in Home Economics, Expression and Art. Each high school wishing to enter any of these three contests may do so by sending two pupils; or, in case of Home Economics and Art, if it is not convenient to send pupils, their exhibits can be sent. These exhibits will be displayed by the College, the exhibits competing in the contest as if representatives of the school had been present.

R. C. Mooney of Wilsonville was among those in town Tuesday. Mr. Mooney stated that he was receiving most encouraging reports from the pen of pullets he shipped to the Missouri Experiment Station some weeks ago. He thinks if his hens keep up the record they have made so far, his pen will come out near the top at the end of the year.

Judge and Mrs. L. B. Riddle moved Saturday into their new home on College street, which they reecently bought from E. A. Turner.

Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Lauderdale are occupying the home on Main street from which the family of Judge Riddle recently moved. Mr. Lauderdale is the new county agent for Shelby county.

Prohibitionists Asked To Support Musgrove

Prohibitionists is Alabama are called upon by the headquarters committee of the Alabama Anti-Saloon League, to support the candidacy of L. B. Musgrove for the Democratic nomination for president in the Alabama primary to to be held March 11, in a statement given out Monday by J. Bibb Mills, secretary, acting for the committee

"The liquor interests of the country are beginning openly to make the fight we had anticipated the statement said. "Their fight will be for modification of the present prohibition and enforcement laws. Senator Underwood has never said he would oppose it.

"The Association Opposed to Prohibition is actively supporting Seenator Underwood. We had hoped that he would make a statement satisfactory to the prohibition forces of the country, but he is bidding for the wet vote.

"Col. L. B. Murgrove, a prohibitionist, has filed his name as a candidate for the presidency in the presidential primary to be held March 11. The only way the Democratic voters of Alabama can express their preference for a dry candidate for president will be to support Colonel Musgrove."

STATE FARM BOARD FORMULATES PLANS

FUNDS MAY BE TRANSFERRED FROM ONE AGRICULTURAL DEPARTMENT TO ANOTHER.

CODE PROVISIONS ARE CLARIFIED

New Arrangements Make Code As a Whole Far Easier to Administer, It Is Declared.

Montgomery—Problems faced by the state board of agriculture in devising ways and means for the administration of the provisions of the agricultural code, have been greatly clarified, if not solved, by the decision reached by the state budget commission in conference with the board.

Exercising its powers, the commission will authorize, when such action is needed, the transferring of funds from one subdivision of the work of the agricultural department, outlined in the code, to another subdivision where the need for funds is greater. The agricultural code, as finally adopted by the legislature, carries an arrangement whereby the appropriation included, is apportioned among the several subdivisions.

Under the authority granted by the budget commission, which will sit with the state board of agriculture at all times when such matters are up for consideration, the board of agriculture will be able through the transfer of funds from one subdivision to the other, to administer the law far more satisfactorily and progressively. Through this arrangement, adequate provision can be made for the guaranteeing of pure seed for planting, also for the protection and further development of the bee-keeping industry in Alabama, it is stated. In a word, the arrangement makes the provisions of the code as a whole far easier to administer, it is declared.

It was decided by the board that standards for containers for fruits and vegetables, will not be adopted for the state this year. A survey of the situation as to such containers is now being conducted by the United States Department of Agriculture, and a report of this survey will be made some time during the next 12 months. A meeting will then be called at which shippers of vegetables and fruits in all parts of the country will be represented, before the federal standards are finally prescribed.

ALABAMA H[illegible]INGS.

Because of some [illegible] as to the title of 40 acres in the heart of the city of Flomaton, Ala., Representative Lester Hill, of the Second Alabama district, has introduced a bill in Congress giving a perfect title of the equitable owners. There is some doubt, according to information possessed by the representative as to whether the government in fact owns it. It has been in possession of suitable owners for many years. As it is in the heart of the business section, it is very valuable property.

The road from Gadsden to Springville, via Attalla, is now practically impassible, and about 40 automobiles are said to be stalled, according to an automobile man. He reports that the cars were abandoned after many efforts to get through. One man traveling to Mississippi, after burning out his connecting rods several times, parked his car in a nearby barn and took a train. The number of abandoned cars is being increased daily, it is reported.

The Associated Charities has been organized for Colbert county, with Mrs. H. L. Halsey, president, and Miss Fay Wells, secretary-treasurer. The committee on investigation is composed of W. T. Burkett, chairman; R. H. Beasley and Mrs. George Jenkins. A meeting will be held at an early date, and it is expected this organization will be the avenue through which charity will be dispensed in Colbert county.

The farmers of Lowndes county have concluded their holiday celebrations and have begun preparations for 1924's crop by clearing the ditch banks growth, reopening ditches, strengthening terraces and repairing outhouses and fences. Occasionally the familiar sound of "Gee" and "Haw" can be heard where the land for spring oats is being prepared. It is estimated that about the same acreage for all minor crops will be planted.

Plans are being formed by the American Legion for avenues of memorial trees on two of the principal roads leading in and out of Birmingham. Each of these trees will be dedicated to one of Jefferson county's dead, who either fell in France or died later of the effects of wounds received.

G. L. Oliver, district passenger agent of the Atlantic Coast Line railroad, has been appointed district agent at Washington and will be succeeded in Montgomery by Mark H. Bradley, who has been connected with the Savannah office.

Tuscaloosa had 43 more fires during the year just closed than in 1922, according to reports made public. Despite the increase in the number of fires, the losses were less than in the preceding year and less than any year since 1919. The 1923 fire losses amounted to $55,884.60.

The state highway department will advertise for bids on another link of the paved highways which is to connect Birmingham with Montgomery before the expiration of the month of January, according to information. The new section will be in Chilton county, and will extend half way across that county, from the Shelby county line to Lomax, a distance of 17 miles. The entire distance through Chilton county was considered too much to be handled as a single project, being 34 miles, and was divided into two sections, to be handled as separate projects.

R. B. Pinson, a 72-year-old farmer, who lives on the Eulaton pike a few miles west of Anniston, has demonstrated conclusively that farming can be made profitable in this section by clearing from a small farm $259.60 with an outgo of less than $10. Mr. Pinson had on his credit at a local bank on the first day of the year that amount of money from his 1923 operations, besides 50 bushels of corn, two and one-half tons of hay, 90 dozen bundles of oats and a large number of chickens and plenty of produce about his home.

The state board of agriculture has adopted uniform grades, the same as those applied to by the federal government, for cabbage, sweet potatoes, Irish potatoes and peaches, effective Feb. 2, and adopted tentative grades for strawberries. The board will meet Jan. 28 at Mobile, that city being selected for the meeting owing to the large trucking industry in its vicinity. The board on this occasion will make a survey of the satsuma, potato and cabbage areas of Mobile and Baldwin counties.

The Curry community, 10 miles north of Jasper, is a fast growing section of that part of the state. The new Curry consolidated high school was one of the first in north Alabama. This school would be a credit to any of the county high schools in the state. One of the features of this school is the vocational training, consisting of real farming, which provides practical agricultural experience. The Curry district is composed of seven large school districts, being the largest district in the state.

The Oak City Furniture factory, with capitalization of $25,000, Tuscaloosa's newest manufacturing enterprise, has just started operation and commenced making porch swings at the rate of 150 to 200 per day. Eight thousand are to be manufactured in the present lot and this will keep the plant busy for some time. The output of manufactured goods will be gradually increased, according to the demands and will be shipped to all parts of the country.

A number of first year students in the State Secondary Agricultural School, who were taking non-vocational agriculture during the first term, have asked permission to change to the vocational agriculture course the second term, thus making the largest number of boys in the vocational department in the history of the school.

A few rifles and boxes of ammunition stored at nitrate plant No. 2, Muscle Shoals, during operations at the plant, have been shipped to Augusta, Ga. All military equipment has been removed from the reservation. This is the result of orders to clean up the plant of all unnecessary equipment.

Magnificent total of $45,250,000 in bank clearings, an increase of $5,000,000, was reached in Anniston during the last year, according to figures given out by the three national and one state bank. An increase of $1,488,127.90 in deposits over the previous year was also shown in the unofficial estimates.

Copies of the revised game and fish laws of 1923 have been received from the printer at the office of the state conservation department. They will be sent to anyone requesting same, I. T. Quinn, state commissioner of conservation, announces.

R. B. Wallace, of Browns, has filed suit in the circuit court of Dallas county for $1,000 damages against the Alabama farm bureau for alleged failure to carry out their specified provision in a contract to handle and market hay.

J. F. Anderson, manager of the Hays Cooperage company's plant at Attalla, lost his left foot when he fell across a circular saw. It was cut off just above the ankle. Mr. Anderson was directing some work near the saw when he stepped back and touched it.

J. C. Harrison, well-known newspaper man of Montgomery and formerly welfare work director of the state convict department, has been appointed deputy state prison inspector by Dr. Glenn Andrews, state prison inspector.

The crosstie and lumber markets in Cleburne County is practically at a standstill, on account of the bad condition of the roads, which are almost impassable.

One hundred cases of fine whisky and five cases of champagne, a portion of the liquors seized by federal authorities during the recent "clean-up" raids, will be distributed to orphanages, hospitals and other institutions of the city.

Secretary of State S. H. Blan has filed his quarterly report for the last quarter of 1923, showing receipts of $10,235 during the quarter as compared with $3,870.85 for the final quarter of 1922. This shows a gain of $6,364.15 for the quarter in 1923 over 1922.

Gay Party Frocks for Girls

Accessories for Evening Wear

SANTA CLAUS brought to many a little miss, home for the holidays, a pretty party frock and added a crowning glory to her joyous vacation. If the kind old saint selected the dress pictured here he is to be congratulated for his good taste. It takes an expert to design anything so frankly simple, so high class and so entirely little-girlish.

Having once given it a good looking over almost any fairly well-equipped needlewoman can make a replica of it. She is to start by selecting a crisp taffeta silk in a light color or in a pretty changeable weave. There is nothing to the design but a plain, rather full skirt with a deep hem, and this it set onto a loose, longwaisted bodice, with full short sleeves and round neck. The neck is bound with a bias fold of the silk, the sleeves finished with a narrow hem, and a wide sash with bouyant bow at the back is made of the taffeta. The sash does not extend across the front of the dress, but starts at the sides under a fold of the silk. The important requisite for success in making this dress is neat sewing. It is a piece of handwork which does not present any difficulties except excellent craftsmanship with the needle.

Big rosettes of narrow, cream-colored val lace provide the telling decoration and are posed in an original and effective manner. The lace is gathered and sewed to a soft net foundation, row after row. At the center three ribbon or chiffon roses in pastel colors find themselves placed against a perfect background. Ends of narrow ribbon falling from the center of the rosette at the front of the dress are of black velvet.

Silk stockings in flesh color or in a tint to correspond with the dress, and black strap slippers are altogether what they should be for a young miss. There is a challenge in her eyes—and probably the handsomest of all boys is about to dance with a pretty girl in the prettiest of dresses.

Wherever fashionables foregather in the evening to see and be seen, the onlooker cannot fail to notice an increase in the elegance and dignity of women's costumes. Beginning with velvets and rich brocades in wraps and gowns, this advance in formality of the evening mode is revealed in every item of the toilette, and is most notable in headdresses, coiffures and coiffure ornaments. But other accessories keep step with the pace set by headwear and fans, bags, jewelry, are all just as carefully selected. In fact, even a simple gown of silk or velvet becomes the foundation of a toilette classed as splendid, when the accessories worn with it have a flavor of splendor.

The coiffure and the headdress are the most important things to consider in the evening toilette. This more formal aspect of the evening mode is bringing in distinctive coiffures and elaborate headdresses. Where hair has been sacrificed to the bobbed vogue—the headdress or hat must make up the loss and they cover the head and rivet attention on themselves. Two examples of this are shown in the illustration—a hat of gold ribbon and velvet that leaves only a little hair, revealed at the sides, and a close-fitting cap of colored beads that conceals even more of the hair, but makes up for it with long, pendant loops at the sides.

Other types of fashionable coiffure ornaments include jeweled coronets, large decorative combs, wreaths of metallic leaves and headbands of metallic ribbons studded with novel jewels or ornamented with metallic flowers. They are compelling much attention and will continue to while the feminine world is allowing its hair to grow or striving for distinction.

Hair difficulties are solved by day by hats and by headbands of wide ribbon. Sometimes the latter fasten at the back under the hair and sometimes at the side in a big bow, as shown in the picture.

LESSON FOR JANUARY 13

THE LONG SOJOURN IN EGYPT

LESSON TEXT—Gen. 47:1-12.

GOLDEN TEXT—The Lord shall preserve thee from all evil; he shall preserve thy soul.—Ps. 121:7.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—From Slave to Prime Minister.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Joseph and the Migration to Egypt.

The seed promised Abraham, through which the world was to be blessed, was fulfilled in the giving of Isaac. Of Isaac's two sons, Jacob, the younger, was chosen. To Jacob was given twelve sons. They became the heads of the Twelve Tribes of Israel. Joseph, a son of Rachel, Jacob's beloved wife, was especially loved by his father. Because of the partiality shown by Jacob, Joseph's brethren hated him. This hatred was fanned into flame by his making known to his brethren certain dreams. Therefore, when his father sent him to inquire after the welfare of his brethren, they sold him a slave to Midianite merchantmen who in turn sold him to the Egyptians. Under a false charge, made by Potiphar's wicked wife, he was cast into prison. Through the interpretation of a dream of one of Pharaoh's servants, and later Pharaoh's dream, Joseph was providentially exalted to be Prime Minister of Egypt. He put on a great conservation scheme, which provided against the bitter famine which came upon all that country. This sojourn in Egypt taught Israel in a new way to trust God, welded them into a nation, transformed them from a nomadic to a settled life, and gave them acquaintance with the material advancement of their time.

I. Joseph Presents His Father and Five Brethren to Pharaoh (Gen. 47:1-6).

1. Pharaoh's Invitation (Gen. 45:16-19). Jacob and his sons were in Egypt by Pharaoh's invitation. Joseph went out to the land of Goshen to meet them. Though now occupying an exalted position, Joseph was not ashamed of his father even though he was a plain country man.

2. Joseph's Tact (vv. 1, 2; cf. 46:30-34).

(1) In introducing his father and brethren in a personal way, thus capitalizing his own influence in favor of his kin. Paraoh had high regard for Joseph; therefore would do much for them for Joseph's sake. God does much for us for Jesus' sake.

(2) In having his father and brethren come to Goshen (Gen. 45:10). Since possession is "nine points of the law," they were already in Goshen before asking Pharaoh for permission to occupy it (v. 4).

(3) In coaching his brethren (Gen. 46:34). He taught them beforehand what to say, because he knew how awkward they would be in the presence of the great king. Our Joseph, Jesus Christ, teaches us how to pray and what to pray for.

(4) In choosing five, not all (v. 2). In all probability he chose the five who would make the best appearance. He knew the great importance of first impressions.

3. Their Request to Pharaoh (vv. 3, 4). Joseph anticipated Pharaoh's questions and put the proper words into their mouths to use in making their desires known to Pharaoh: "Let thy servants dwell in Goshen."

4. Pharaoh's Response (vv. 5, 6).

(1) His gracious offer. They were to enjoy the best of the land according to their choice. He dealt with them very liberally.

(2) Positions of trust offered to capable men among them. He knew how capable Joseph was and surmised that some of his brethren might be likewise gifted. This gracious offer was because they were related to Joseph.

II. Jacob Blessing Pharaoh (vv. 7-10).

Though Pharaoh was the great king and Jacob now a supplicant at his feet receiving natural blessings, yet morally Jacob was above Pharaoh and therefore conferred blessings upon him. This humble saint of God is higher in dignity than earth's greatest king. Jacob discloses his own estimate of the earthly life of the believer. He calls it a pilgrimage of short duration.

III. Joseph Nourishes His Father and Brethren (vv. 11, 12).

1. He placed them in the best of the land, according as Pharaoh had commanded (v. 11).

2. He nourished them (v. 12). Since there was no bread in all the land to be obtained except as dispensed by Joseph, he distributed to them according to their needs. Our Joseph, Jesus Christ, supplies all our needs according to his riches in glory.

SYSTEMATIC HOUSE-CLEANING PLAN

Vacuum Cleaner Saves Time and Labor.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Save labor in the weekly house cleaning by having a definite plan, the United States Department of Agriculture says. When this is done, the same work will not need to be repeated. For example, when rooms near together are to be cleaned on the same day, it is often easiest to get all of them ready, then clean them all, and finally put them all in order.

Dust Small Things First.

Small pictures and bric-a-brac should first be dusted. If not removed from the room entirely they should be placed in a pile and covered. Furniture, mirrors, and pictures should be dusted and covered with cloths. Draperies and portieres should be taken down or pinned up. Radiators, registers, grates, stoves, or fireplaces should be cleaned.

Walls, ceiling and baseboards should be brushed and dusted, and floor and floor coverings cleaned according to the kind. The object of sweeping and dusting is to remove dust, not to scatter it. In sweeping, the strokes should be firm and even. Keep the broom or brush on the floor most of the time instead of flirting it through the air. The dust cloth should be held in a fairly compact mass, so that the surface to be cleaned is wiped or polished and at the same time the dust is held by the cloth. While the dust is settling, remove spots from the woodwork and wash windows if necessary.

The covers may then be taken from pictures and furniture. They should be shaken out of doors if possible. Then the room and furniture should be dusted thoroughly, beginning at the top of the room and working down.

Use of Vacuum Cleaner.

When a room is cleaned with a vacuum cleaner, the order of proceeding is different. The room is first dusted, then the vacuum cleaner is used on upholstery, hangings, walls, and carpets or rugs, and finally the floor is dusted. By this method of cleaning fewer articles need to be moved, no dust is scattered, and more dirt is actually removed. A vacuum cleaner, therefore, saves time and labor.

WOMAN HEADS HOME ECONOMICS BUREAU

Dr. Louise Stanley Is Recipient of Unusual Honor.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

For the first time in the history of the United States Department of Agriculture a woman, Dr. Louise Stanley, has been recently made chief of a bureau—the newly created bureau of home economics. The desirability of appointing a woman to this position will be appreciated when it is understood that the work of the Department of Agriculture is intended to serve the needs of the whole farm family in agriculture and home economics. While many of its bureaus give their attention to matters which chiefly concern the farmer, such as crops, live stock, soil conditions, insect pests, or general farm management, it is part of the function of the department work as laid down by law, also to help the woman on the farm.

Dr. Louise Stanley, Chief of Bureau of Home Economics.

In many rural homes it has been found that the life of the mother is a continual round of drudgery. This is sometimes due to failure to understand the best ways of doing housework to save labor and strength. Frequently it is due to lack of conveniences. The bureau of home economics wants all women to be informed of the best and most modern practice in regard to everything connected with home-making. This does not necessarily mean urging people to buy expensive new equipment. It is possible to make housework so interesting and so dignified that it is a satisfaction, instead of drudgery, to do it. The bureau of home economics believes that it takes brains to manage a home to the best advantage of the whole family, and that what a mother does should be recognized and appreciated. At the same time, with more information as to what other housekeepers and scientific workers have found out about good household management, the proper feeding of the family, the best utensils and equipment to buy or the most durable materials for clothing, every mother can render better service to her family with less effort on her own part. To supply information on all such questions and to make investigations which will lead to continued improvement in household methods, the new bureau of home economics was established.

Printed leaflets, known as "Farmers' Bulletins" and dealing with a great many topics of interest to housekeepers, may be had free upon application to the United States Department of Agriculture. Those on food subjects contain good recipes which have been thoroughly tested.

For the present year the new bureau of home economics will continue work already begun in nutrition, food preparation and other household problems. After next July scientific studies will be made to learn how the family income should be spent, what woman's work in the home is actually worth if wages were paid, how to select clothing and dress materials to best advantage, how to choose the most nourishing foods, how much housing ought to cost, the best kind of equipment to buy, such as furnaces, hot water heaters, stoves, refrigerators, the best plan for a kitchen. As these studies are completed information relating to them will be circulated in the newspapers and magazines and in the form of farmers' bulletins.

COOK RABBITS LIKE CHICKEN

Those Raised Especially for Market Are Apt to Be More Tender Than Wild Ones.

Rabbits may be served in any way chicken is liked—fried, fricasseed, smothered, baked, in a casserole, in pie, croquettes, or hash. While wild rabbits are often relished, those especially raised for the market are apt to be more tender and will cook in less time. The bureau of home economics, United States Department of Agriculture, recommends the following way of preparing an excellent casserole of rabbit:

Clean and disjoint the rabbit into as many pieces as desired. Sprinkle with salt and pepper and dredge with flour. Fry to a delicate brown, preferably in sausage or bacon fat, though any clean cooking fat may be used. When the rabbit is done, put the pieces in a casserole and pour over them a gravy made from four tablespoonfuls of the fat in which it was fried, blended with four tablespoonfuls of flour and four cupfuls of stock or boiling water, seasoned well with salt, pepper and worcestershire sauce. If the casserole is prepared early in the day it may be reheated in the oven for dinner. It should be boiled in the casserole from half an hour to an hour, or until the meat is very tender.

TERRACING THE FARM

(By A. A. Lauderdale, County Farm Agent.)

At this season of the year we are not so busy with other farm operations and most of our fields are clear of crops, so it is the opportune time to do our terracing.

The fertilizer bill is probably our biggest single item on the farm, and we should plan to make that as small as possible and yet get the maximum yield. We can reduce our fertilizer bill by growing legumes on the farm, but we should make every effort to keep the fertilizer constituents from washing away. It is much easier to maintain fertility than to build it up.

Soil erosion, or washing away of the earth by water, costs the farmers of the United States millions of dollars each year, and we are losing our share. This erosion is most effectively prevented or controlled by proper terracing.

It is considered bad form to suggest things not to do, but there are at least two mistakes in running terraces that should be avoided. They are the "natural eye" and "parallel" terrace lines.

A terrace should have from 0 to 6 inches fall per 100 feet, and the eye is too inaccurate to keep within these limits. Parallel terraces are convenient, but they fail miserably in accomplishing the purpose of terracing.

The best instrument for running terrace lines is a good telescope farm level, properly adjusted. There may be cases where it is necessary to use some other means of running the terrace lines and in that case, we can construct a home-made level.

Before starting to terrace, walk over the land to be terraced, noting the grades, old washes, possible outlets and type of soil. From the above information, you can determine the vertical fall between the terraces, and the amount of fall needed in the terrace; this will depend on the type of soil and slope of land. Where the soil is sandy, the terraces may be further apart.

All soils that wash under our heavy rains need terracing, but the type of terrace to use depends on the type of soil and slope of land. The broad-base or Mangum terrace is ordinarily best, although more expensive; this terrace can be cultivated across after it is well established, thereby preventing short rows.

For the first year or two after construction, terraces require considerable care and attention after heavy rains. All broken places should be repaired immediately. After they become firm about the only attention required is a good back furrowing each year.

In conclusion, DO THE WORK RIGHT, for a poorly made terrace does more harm than no terrace at all.

DOGWOOD

Our Sunday school is doing good work; Luther Roman is superintendent.

Edgar Beasley and Harrison Looney motored to Pea Ridge last Sunday and report a fine time.

Rabbit hunting is the order of the day.

Believe me, J. H. Beasley has some good rabbit dogs. They have killed over 200 in the past six weeks.

We are sorry to state that Rev. J. T. Caffee has moved from our midst. He has gone into the Salem community.

Mr. and Mrs. William Alexander are all smiles over their Christmas present, a fine baby girl.

W. M. Beasley and family of Summer Hill visited their parents Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Beasley Sunday.

Garland Dooley of Wilsonville, spent Sunday here with his uncle J. H. Beasley.

Dogwood mines are running full blast, six days in the week.

A daughter was born to Mr. and Mrs. Bill Caffee on December 28.

Rev. Sam Henson of Blocton, will fill his regular appointment here next Sunday. Every body come out and hear him preach.

We are sorry to state that John Roper is on the sick list this week.

We are glad to welcome Luther Bearden who has moved back into our community.

$100,000 PEACE PLAN PRIZE AWARDED

Advocates Entering World Court and Cooperation With League Without Full Membership at Present—Suggests League Membership Be Opened to All Nations and Provides for Development of International Law.

The American Peace Award brought forth 22,165 plans and many thousands of letters. Since many of the plans were the composite work of organizations, universities, etc., a single plan often represented the views of hundreds or thousands of individuals. The content of these plans is therefore an index of the true feeling and judgment of hundreds of thousands of American citizens.

These plans come from every group in American life. Some are obviously from lifelong students of history and international law. Some are from persons who have studied little, but who have themselves seen and felt the horror of war—or who are even now living out its tragedy.

But among them all are these dominant currents: that, if war is honestly to be prevented, there must be a face-about on the part of the nations in their attitude toward it; that by some progressive agreement the manufacture and purchase of the munitions of war must be limited or stopped; that while no political mechanism alone will insure cooperation among the nations, there must be some machinery of cooperation if the will to cooperate is to be made effective; that mutual counsel among the nations is the real hope for bringing about the disavowal of war by the open avowal of its real causes and open discussion of them; and finally that there must be some means of defining, recording, interpreting and developing the law of nations.

The only possible pathway to international agreement with reference to these complicated and difficult factors is through mutual counsel and cooperation which the plan selected contemplates. It is therefore the unanimous opinion of the Jury that of the 22,165 plans submitted, Plan Number 1469 is "the best practicable plan by which the United States may co-operate with other nations to achieve and preserve the peace of the world."

It is the unanimous hope of the Jury that the first fruit of the mutual counsel and cooperation among the nations which will result from the adoption of the plan selected will be a general prohibition of the manufacture and sale of all materials of war.

Statement of Jury of Award

The Jury of Award realizes that there is no one approach to world peace, and that it is necessary to recognize not merely political but also psychological and economic factors.

The Question to Be Voted Upon

The substantial provisions which constitute the plan selected by the Jury of Award, and upon which the vote of the American people is asked, are hereby submitted by the Policy Committee as follows:

I. ENTER THE PERMANENT COURT

That the United States adhere to the Permanent Court of International Justice for the reasons and under the conditions stated by Secretary Hughes and President Harding in February, 1923.

II. COOPERATE WITH THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS, WITHOUT FULL MEMBERSHIP AT PRESENT

That without becoming a member of the League of Nations as at present constituted, the United States Government should extend its present cooperation with the League and propose participation in the work of its Assembly and Council under the following conditions and reservations:

Safeguarding of Monroe Doctrine

1. The United States accepts the League of Nations as an instrument of mutual counsel, but it will assume no obligation to interfere with political questions of policy or internal administration of any foreign state.

In uniting its efforts with those of other States for the preservation of peace and the promotion of the common welfare, the United States insists upon the safeguarding of the Monroe Doctrine and does not abandon its traditional attitude concerning American independence of the Old World and does not consent to submit its long established policy concerning questions regarded by it as purely American to the recommendation or decision of other Powers.

No Military or Economic Force

2. That the only kind of compulsion which nations can freely engage to apply to each other in the name of Peace is that which arises from conference, from moral judgment, from full publicity, and from the power of public opinion.

The United States would assume no obligations under Article X in its present form, or under Article XVI in its present form in the Covenant, or in its amended form as now proposed, unless in any particular case Congress has authorized such action.

The United States proposes that Articles X and XVI be either dropped altogether or so amended and changed as to eliminate any suggestion of a general agreement to use coercion for obtaining conformity to the pledges of the Covenant.

No Obligations Under Versailles Treaty

3. That the United States will accept no responsibilities under the Treaty of Versailles unless in any particular case Congress has authorized such action.

League Open to All Nations

4. The United States Government proposes that Article I of the Covenant be construed and applied, or, if necessary, redrafted, so that admission to the League shall be assured to any self-governing State that wishes to join and that receives the favorable vote of two-thirds of the Assembly.

Development of International Law

5. As a condition of its participation in the work and counsels of the League, the United States asks that the Assembly and Council consent—or obtain authority—to begin collaboration for the revision and development of international law, employing for this purpose the aid of a commission of jurists. This Commission would be directed to formulate anew existing rules of the law of nations, to reconcile divergent opinions, to consider points hitherto inadequately provided for but vital to the maintenance of international justice, and in general to define the social rights and duties of States. The recommendations of the Commission would be presented from time to time, in proper form for consideration, to the Assembly as to a recommending if not a law-making body.

Author's Name Not to Be Revealed Until After Referendum

In order that the vote may be taken solely upon the merits of the plan, the Policy Committee, with the acquiescence of Mr. Bok, has decided not to disclose the authorship of the plan until after the referendum. The identity is unknown to the members of the Jury of Award and the Policy Committee, except one delegated member.

THIS WOMAN RELIEVED FROM SUFFERING

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. A Remarkable Story

Dover, Del.—"I wish every woman would take your wonderful medicine as it has done so much good to me. I had cramps and faint spells and very bad pains. One day I was over to my neighbor's house and she told me I ought to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. So I went to the store on my way home and got a bottle, and took the first dose before supper. I have been taking it ever since, and you can hardly believe how different I feel. I had just wanted to lie in bed all the time, and when I started to brush up I would give out in about ten minutes. So you know how badly I felt. I used to go to bed at eight and get up at seven, still tired. Now I can work all day and stay up until eleven, and feel all right all the time. My housework is all I do in summer, but in winter I work in a factory. I have told a good many of my friends, and I have had three come to me and tell me they wouldn't do without the Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. SAMUEL MURPHY, 219 Cecil St., Dover, Delaware.

Liners Carry Own Gardeners.

Nearly every large liner making a business of carrying passengers carries one or more gardeners. Without them it would not be possible for such liners as the Majestic, the Mauretania and Aquitania to be such floating palaces or floating gardens. Huge quantities of cut flowers and many potted plants are used on these liners on every voyage. They have discovered that roses are not good sea travelers at all, regardless of expert care, but that chrysanthemums and carnations thrive on the rolling main.

BLACK-DRAUGHT FOR 30 YEARS

"It Did Me Good," Says Painter, Who Used It for Headache, Indigestion and Liver Trouble.

Bowling Green, Ky.—"I don't just remember how many years I have used Black-Draught," says Mr. Frank Burnett, a painter and song writer, of 200 Park street, this city, "but I've used it longer than I've known my wife—that is over thirty years—and I've found it a wonderful friend."

"When a young man," he says, "we kept Black-Draught in our home and I would take it for headache, indigestion and liver trouble. It did me good. I used it on until we married, and then my daughters grew up and they used it, and we hardly know how to get along without it.

"I am a painter and the paint affects the stomach. When I need anything for stomach trouble, I take a good dose or two of Thedford's Black-Draught and I am all right . . . It relieves indigestion and cleanses the liver best of anything I ever used."

Thedford's Black-Draught has been a well-known, successful liver medicine for over eighty years. Made from selected medicinal roots and herbs, and containing no dangerous mineral drugs, it is nature's own remedy for a tired, worn-out liver.

The SANDMAN STORY

KING IN NAME ONLY

KING OBERON is the husband of the Fairy Queen, but though he is King his power is very limited, for the only time he has any power at all is between night and day.

This of course makes him very discontented, for while he is a King there is not much fun in being one if you cannot rule somebody or something.

The fairies were all very respectful and addressed him as "Your Majesty" always, but it was to their Queen they looked for orders and not to King Oberon.

The Queen had to be very careful of her subjects and of herself as well at the hour between day and night because her King was always looking for a chance to display his power, which was of so short duration.

Once he had used this power to send all the fairies flying over a deep, wide river which he knew would frighten them very much because the fairies do not like the water, and he had sent all the Goblins running toward them when they reached the opposite bank, hoping to scare them so they would drop their wands into the river.

King Oberon is a very meek husband when he has no power, but during his hour the Queen has a great deal to contend with, and one day she decided something must be done to make him behave when the hour between day and night came around.

King Oberon had always had a very easy time living in the fairy palace. He was waited upon and never had to do any work at all. But one day the Queen ordered him to scrub the palace inside and out.

Of course he made a great fuss and said he was a King and it was degrading for him to work, but the Queen only answered that he must work or she would use her power to make him something else than a Fairy King.

This so scared Oberon that he took off his crown and kingly robes and called for a pail and brush and went to work.

All day he scrubbed and into the night, for the Queen would not let him rest. "You will have time to rest," she told him, "when your hour comes to rule."

At last his hour arrived, but he was so tired he could only drop his scrubbing brush and fall asleep upon the ground, for he was still scrubbing the outside of the palace when his power began.

King Oberon slept all through the hour he might rule, and the minute it ended the Queen awoke him and set him to work again.

He was only allowed to stop for his cup of dewdrop tea and lunch which the fairies brought to him, and then the Queen ordered him to work again.

All day, day in and out, he worked, sleeping only when his hour to reign came around. At last he begged the Queen to be merciful and let him go back to his old way of living.

"I will see how you behave," said the Queen. "If once you dare to use your power to bother my fairies or to bother me, back to your scrubbing you go."

Meekly King Oberon put on his robes and placed his crown on his head and mounted his throne and there he sits day by day—a King in name only. And when the hour between day and night arrives King Oberon is in bed sound asleep, for he knows that once he displeases his Queen again he will work for the rest of his days. And what is the use of being a King, he thinks, if you can't sit on a throne? Even if he has no power it is better than scrubbing.

Trilby Clark

South Australia is the birthplace of Trilby Clark, the "movie" star. Her parents were among the early settlers of that distant land, and she had considerable experience in musical comedy and dramatic stock productions there before coming to the United States. Aside from taking part in a war propaganda picture in Australia, she was new to the screen until she landed in Hollywood. Miss Clark has brown eyes, Titian hair, fair complexion, is five feet four in height and her favorite exercise is horseback riding.

Chevrolet prices are not the lowest on the market, yet Chevrolet economical transportation averages lowest in cost. This average cost considers the purchase price, interest on investment, depreciation and all operating and maintenance costs.

A detailed comparison with any other car in the low priced field will convince you that Chevrolet is the best buy because of its superior quality and because the purchase price includes full equipment.

More than a million Chevrolets are now in use. Twelve huge plants are now building them at the rate of twenty-five hundred per working day. Nearly one-half million Chevrolets were bought in 1923—far exceeding in number the sales of any other quality car.

The Why of Superstitions

By H. IRVING KING

FOOLING GHOSTS

AN OLD-TIME superstition which is still occasionally met with in the rural districts is that a funeral procession should not return from the cemetery to the house by the same route which it traversed before.

In Virginia there is a prevalent superstition among the colored population that after a funeral from the house the position of the door-knobs should be changed. The Virginia negro frankly says that this change is made so that "the ghost cannot find his way in." The first superstition mentioned is of a kindred nature and had originally a like purpose. It was to throw the ghost of the departed off the trail so that he could not find his way back to the house. Along the Carolina coast a stake is sometimes driven through a grave as soon as a body is buried to keep the ghost of the deceased from "ha'nting."

Among the peasants all over Europe there are similar superstitions to these and among all savage tribes kindred precautions are taken to keep away the spirits of the departed. The customs under consideration are not related to the superstitious—which are many—concerning the protection against ghosts by means of "charms" but have to do with primitive man's conception of the spirits of the dead as entities which could be "physically" controlled by sympathetic magic and easily deceived by the more vigorous spirits embodied in the living. That primitive idea is the basis of the modern superstitions mentioned above. The old English law—enforced in comparatively recent times—which directed that a certain class of malefactors should, after execution, be buried at a crossroads with a stake driven through the grave was but a legal enactment of this primitive superstition.

YOUR HAND

How to read your characteristics and tendencies—the capabilities or weaknesses that make for success or failure as shown in your palm.

CARRIAGE AND MOTIONS OF THE HANDS

WHILE the characteristics, tendencies, propensities, etc., of a person may be read best from the lines, the mounts and the signs of the hands, all taken together and to each assigned its proper significance, much may also be learned from the manner in which the subject carries his or her hands and moves them. Of course, this must be studied when the subject does not know that he is under observation, since otherwise he may hold his hand, or move it, in a strained, unnatural manner.

For example, when the person is of an open, frank nature, he will have little to conceal, and will open his hand or palm freely to the gaze. The hand of one whose thoughts and life need concealment will close more or less tightly, and the fingers will endeavor to hide the palm, as it were. Note, therefore, whether the subject seems bent on hiding his palm, even before he knows that he is under observation, and deduce therefrom a secretive nature.

"What's in a Name?"

By MILDRED MARSHALL

FACTS about your name; it's history; meaning; whence it was derived; significance; your lucky day and lucky jewel

JOAN

JOAN is the feminine counterpart of John, and yet it has never had the common vogue of that most popular of male proper names. Joan signifies "gift of the Lord" and there is considerable question as to whether its origin was English or Teutonic.

At any event, the name first made its appearance as Joanna and is said to have originated with "Joanna," holy woman of the Gospel. She was never canonized, so it is believed that the name was adopted rather in honor of one of the Saint Johns than as a tribute to her, particularly as there are 30 feasts of Saint John on the Roman calendar and only two in honor of Joanna.

In the Twelfth century the name began to be used with inexplicable frequency in southern France, when ladies named Juana in Spanish, and Jehanne or Jeanne in French, married into every royal family of the time. The first English princess so called was the daughter of Henry II. Indeed, almost every king had a daughter Joan or Jhone.

Joan Makepeace was the name given to the daughter of Edward II when the long war with the Bruces was partly pacified by her marriage. Another famous Joan was Jean Beaufort, the maiden romantically beloved by the captive James I. As his widow she so fiercely revenged his death, it will be recalled.

Curiously enough, Hannah is derived from Joan through the German favorite peasant name, Johanna. Hannah, however, is purely English. For a time Joan, favorite name of queens, lost vogue in England and descended to the cottage and kitchen. It became the name for domestics, and in this day of servant problems one might well understand how it came to mean "gift of the Lord."

Joan's talismanic jewel is the heliotrope or bloodstone. It is an opaque stone, deep green in color, and sprinkled with red jasper as with blood. It promises staunch affection and true love for the wearer, whose lucky day is Saturday and whose mystic number is 4.

Rosicrucians Secret Order of 14th Century

The Rosicrucians were a secret fraternity alleged to have been founded during the latter part of the Fourteenth century by Christian Rosenkreuza, German mystic, who dwelt for a time in India and Egypt, where he acquired a profound knowledge of the occult arts.

The Rosicrucians, like the alchemists, pretended to transmute metals, to prolong life and to possess knowledge of what was occurring in distant places. They first became known to the world early in the Seventeenth century, through the publication of certain documents said to have been issued by them; but according to many authorities, their existence was extremely doubtful.

The Rosicrucians were also called the Brothers of the Holy Cross, from the notion that the name is derived from "crux" (cross), and "rosa" (rose). Brewer, however, says that the word Rosicrucian comes from "ros" (dew) and "rosa" (rose). "Dew was considered by the ancient chemists as the most powerful solvent of gold, and cross in alchemy is the synonym of light, because any figure of the cross contains the letters L X V ('light')."—Detroit News.

Diameter of Universe Is 10,000 Milky Ways

The diameter of the universe is the length of 10,000 milky ways. And this milky way yardstick is 30,000 times the distance that light, traveling 186,000 miles per second, covers in one year. Light comes from the sun to the earth in about eight minutes.

This is the conclusion of Prof. Archibald Henderson of the University of North Carolina, given in a communication in Science, the official organ of the American Association for the Advancement of Science. He assumed that space and the universe are constructed according to Einstein's general relativity theory.

"It would take a ray of light, traveling at the rate of 186,000 miles per second, 1,000 million years to go around the universe," Professor Henderson says. "To go around the universe it would take the fastest airplane three quadrillion years; the fastest automobile five and a half quadrillion years, and an express train, traveling at the rate of sixty miles an hour, eleven quadrillion years."

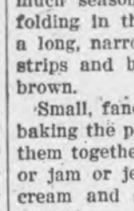
In the best of organized kitchens there will be an occasional bit of left-over pastry and one is often puzzled as to how to utilize it. Here are a few suggestions:



Tarts are delicious tidbits and may be prepared "on purpose" or with left-over pastry. Roll out very thin and cut with a biscuit cutter into rounds, in even numbers. Take half of the rounds and with a large thimble make small holes in the circles of pastry—three makes an attractive number. Bake the tarts, spread jelly on the circles and cover with the perforated ones.

If one has less time, roll and cut the pastry into triangles and squares, sprinkle with sugar and cinnamon and bake. These may be served with a hot sauce as dessert if liked.

Pastry shells may be made to use filled with preserves, jams or with sweetened fresh fruit. Roll the pastry and line muffin pans or cover the bottoms, then bake.

Roly Poly.—Roll out a small circle of pastry, making as large a one as the size of the family warrants. In the center place chopped apples and raisins, using three times as much apple as raisins. Roll up, place in a deep baking dish and cover with enough brown sugar to sweeten; add a tablespoonful or two of butter. Pour over boiling hot fruit juice, cider, or boiling water to cover, and bake in a moderate oven for at least an hour. Usually there will be sauce enough to serve; if not, serve with cream and sugar.

Cheese Straws.—Roll the pastry very thin, cover with grated cheese, season with a dash of cayenne; soft cheese may be used but will need much seasoning. Fold up in thirds, folding in the cheese, roll again into a long, narrow sheet, cut into narrow strips and bake in a hot oven until brown.

Small, fancy cakes may be made by baking the pastry cut into circles; put them together with a filling of cream, or jam or jelly. Cover with whipped cream and serve for a most dainty dessert.

One of the advantages of living long in the world is that one steadily acquires an increasingly interesting point of view. Even in middle life one begins to see for one's self the evolution of things. One gets a glimpse of the procession of events, the march of the generations.—Cornelia A. P. Comer.

SEASONABLE DISHES

These dishes are served and enjoyed any time of the year, but are especially favored during the winter months:

Chili Con Carne.—Take one-half pound of fresh lean and fat pork, one and one-half pounds of round steak, three good-sized onions, two cans of kidney beans, one chili pepper, two quarts of tomato, salt, pepper, and chili powder—two or three tablespoonfuls.

Chop or grind the meat—it is much nicer chopped—brown the meat with the chopped onions, then add all the other ingredients except the beans, which will be added just long enough to heat thoroughly. Cook slowly for three hours, stirring often. Remove the chili pepper after the dish is well seasoned with it, or it may be too hot.

Sweet Potatoes, Southern Style.—Boil or steam three medium-sized sweet potatoes. Pare, slice and place in rows of overlapping slices in a shallow baking dish. Add to one-half cupful of water one cupful of brown sugar and two tablespoonfuls of butter, mixed with one-half teaspoonful of cinnamon. Cook these for ten minutes until sirupy. Add one-fourth of a teaspoonful of salt and pour over the sliced potatoes in the baking dish. Bake covered 15 minutes, then bake five minutes until lightly browned. Serve from the baking dish.

Braised Duck and Apples.—Truss a duck as for roasting and place in a roasting pan with slices of bacon under and over it. Place around it six small sour apples, cored and pared, and six medium-sized potatoes. Sprinkle over all a teaspoonful of dried herbs. Pour over one cupful of rich, highly-flavored stock, cover the pan and let cook in a moderate oven for two hours. Serve with very fine chopped celery mixed with one-fourth as much grated horseradish. Heat the relish for a minute in the braising pan, after the duck and apples have been removed.

Curried Vegetables.—Cook one cupful each of potato and carrot, diced, in salted boiling water. Drain and add one cupful of peas and curry sauce. Prepare the sauce by cooking two tablespoonfuls of butter and a sliced small onion until yellow, add two tablespoonfuls of flour mixed with salt and pepper and one-half teaspoonful of curry powder, pour over one cupful of milk. Cook until smooth, strain over the vegetables, sprinkled with parsley.

DAIRY POINTS

Speedy Justice Recently Meted Out to Scrub Sire

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

In a special "court" convened in Howard county, Md., the last of October, A. S. Bull, known familiarly as "Scrub," was found guilty of robbing hard-working farmers and their families and was sentenced to be barbecued immediately. It was brought out by County Agricultural Agent M. H. Fairbank, who acted as prosecuting attorney, that the accused had been depriving the people of this farming community of many luxuries and even some of the necessities, taking the butter from their bread and cream from the milk.

According to a representative of the United States Department of Agriculture, "Scrub" was well represented by counsel appointed by the "court," but no arguments could prevail against the overwhelming evidence presented by the prosecution and the damaging testimony of a large number of farmer witnesses who had been robbed and had seen their neighbors robbed in the same manner by this old offender.

The jury was unanimous for conviction, and J. R. Dawson, of the dairy division, United States Department of Agriculture, delivered the funeral oration. Scrubbull meat is not of the best, but it was well cooked, and a hungry crowd enjoyed it, in a measure, because they had a sense of doing a good thing for the community. The trial was followed by a sale of pure bred bulls.

One of the unusual features of the trial was a brass band which provided appropriate music during the day. Interest in the "trial" was shown by a large attendance from adjoining counties.

Dairy Cows Improved by Advanced Registry Test

"No one thing has done so much to increase the productivity of pure bred dairy cattle in New Jersey as advanced registry testing," says W. R. Robbers, dairy expert at the agricultural experiment station, New Brunswick.

"The average production of all cows has been given by the United States census as 4,000 pounds of milk a year. Pure bred herds under the advanced registry tests soon develop cows which produce twice that amount of milk without additional feed cost.

"Care in the management of cows increases their productive capacity. It is the care incidental to advanced registry testing which often results in the cow doing much better during her second testing period than her first.

"By means of these tests and the records kept the hopelessly unproductive cows are detected so that the dairyman can eliminate them from the herd.

"It has long been recognized that the bull is the most important factor in improving the herd. Through advanced registry it is possible for the dairyman to observe whether or not the daughters of the bull are better than their dams. In this way superior bulls are discovered and are chosen to raise the standard of the herd.

"The advisory experts maintained by the department of dairy husbandry at the State College of Agriculture, New Brunswick, are always glad to answer questions on advanced registry or any other phase of dairying."

Feeding Test Made With Corn Silage and Fodder

The dairy cow has long found favor because she is able to convert large quantities of bulky roughage into a concentrated and highly nutritious product. There are, however, certain roughages on which a cow produces much better. As the business of dairying is to produce milk profitably rather than merely to convert fodder into milk, a comparison of the common farm roughages is valuable.

A careful feeding test was made at the Iowa experiment station with corn silage and fodder, alfalfa and timothy hay, and a combination of corn fodder and timothy hay.

The use of corn fodder in place of corn silage reduced the milk production 6 per cent, and the fat production 3 per cent. When silage is worth $4.50 a ton, an acre of corn yielding eight tons, if converted into silage, is worth $36, while if converted into fodder the value is reduced to $16.21.

When alfalfa hay was replaced by timothy in a good dairy ration, milk and butterfat production was reduced 7 per cent. When both alfalfa hay and silage were replaced at the same time by fodder and timothy hay, the milk yield dropped 18 per cent and fat 14 per cent.

If possible get the corn crop in the silo. Timothy hay should be sold and clover or alfalfa bought to take its place.

Wash Milk Cans Clean.

THAT LITTLE COLD MAY START A BIG TROUBLE

Stop It Now With Cheney's Expectorant and Save Needless Suffering.

That little cold you took yesterday may seem a small matter to you now; but if you don't do something to check it and get it out of your system there's no telling how it will end. Many a severe, if not fatal, case of pneumonia or tuberculosis began in just the same way.

How foolish then to take any sort of risk by neglecting that cold till it fastens itself on your vitals, and becomes so deep-seated that nothing but the most severe treatment will serve to get you back to health.

You can stop it now with Cheney's Expectorant. A dose every few hours will knock it right out and end the trouble almost before it has begun. It expels the germs from your system and you feel fresher and stronger and better.

Three generations of people have been brought up on Cheney's Expectorant and have an abiding faith in its efficiency because they know what it will do.

Cheney's Expectorant expels the cold by reaching and correcting the cause. It is equally effective for coughs, bronchitis, croup, whooping cough, and all other affections of the throat and lungs.

Will He Withdraw His Endorsement?

Congress is now in session.

Is it the intention of certain members to hamper the railroads by the enactment of further restrictive legislation—especially aimed to decrease the revenues of the railroads—or will they be disposed to grant the railroads a legislative holiday?

The Railroads have accepted the provisions of the present Transportation Act; and—although they have not been able to earn the rate of return permitted therein—they are spending more than $1,000,000,000 for the improvements called for by increased traffic.

Nearly all of this billion dollars is borrowed money—borrowed in good faith, with the help of Uncle Sam's endorsement, in the form of the assurance that the Railroads would be allowed to earn a fair return, based on the value of their property; and be able to pay for needed improvements.

Further legislative curtailment of railroad revenues at this time, would result in frightening off private investors upon whom the railroads must depend for new capital; this would serve to stop the construction of needed improvements; the efficiency of the railroads would be destroyed and there would come inevitably a breakdown and bankruptcy of the transportation system; and finally Government ownership with its attendant evils.

Although the L. & N. Railroad has not been able to earn the "fair return" permitted by the Transportation Act, it has, within the past year, contracted to spend for new equipment, second tracks, bridges, etc., more than $52,000,000—thus acknowledging its obligations to the public and manifesting the purpose of the management to fulfill them.

The L. & N. joins the other Roads in asking that they be let alone; that they be not further hampered, by unwise legislation, in their efforts to keep pace with and to assist in the Nation's progress.

COTTON CAN BE GROWN WITH PROFT UNDER BOLL WEEVIL CONDITIONS

Essential Elements of Success Have Been Overlooked

By Roland Turner, General Agricultural Agent, Southern Railway system).

One important fact that stands out in connection with cotton raising since the advent of the boll weevil is that good, carefully selected land, well fertilized and properly cultivated, is very much more sure to produce a normal yield than the average field. The importance of good land, liberally fertilized and well cultivated, or of good farming, in meeting the weevil problem, we think, has not been sufficiently stressed generally throughout the cotton belt. Much has been said about poison but little is said regarding the very large proportion of all lands planted to cotton each year that do not promise a yield sufficiently large to justify the use of poison in the most limited quantities for effective control of the weevil. Undoubtedly the most practical means of insuring a good crop of cotton is to select land for the crop that is naturally best adapted to cotton, that is, high, well drained, dry land that has been put in good mechanical condition through the plowing in of humus-making materials as legumes or animal manures; land that warms up early and upon which cotton makes rapid growth from the very beginning. This character of land fertilized liberally, coupled with the very best and most approved cultural methods, practically insures success. The writer has observed throughout the cotton belt that farmers here and there succeed in every community every year, regardless of weather conditions and that the principles suggested above are uniformly followed by these farmers who make outstanding successes in raising cotton.

The past season we observed a crop of 100 acres on a South Carolina farm from which the farmer had picked 115 bales. This crop was upland a sandy clay soil with a yellow to red clay subsoil; was high and naturally well drained and would be classed as rather poor upland soil. The farmer had plowed in the previous fall, a crop of cowpeas; had followed in the spring with a thorough discing and bedding in the usual way, applying 750 pounds of a good, high grade fertilizer per acre, putting all the fertilizer in before planting. The cotton stalks on this crop were but little more than knee high. The proportion of fruit to stalk or size of plant was about the best we have ever seen. The cotton which had been planted in 3½ foot rows was chopped to a stand of 1 to 5 stalks in the hill, the width of a hoe. Frequent shallow cultivations were given and continued some weeks after the usual "laying by time." Although this farmer used poison, making three applications of a homemade syrup mixture, it was interesting to note that he was of the opinion that he would have made a good crop without any poison but that he considered the poison simply as insurance. He said, "you know that there is no kind of poison that will make cotton. It requires good cotton land in good condition with plenty of fertilizer and good cultivation to lect some good early maturing variety and secure the best selected seed of this variety you can get. The annual loss sustained by farmers from planting poor seed is enormous. A careful checking of make cotton. Poison may save some cotton but it never makes any." It is remarkable and, we think, regrettable that the many conferences and meetings that have have been held in the South in the past for devising ways and means of meeting the boll weevil menace, and assuring the future of the cotton raising industry, have practically ignored the principle this South Carolina farmer and other farmers here and there throughout the cotton belt have so successfully based their fight on the boll weevil upon. The force of the logic of these successful cotton farmers seems almost irresistable and the soundness of the principles upon which they are proceeding is confirmed by the actual results being obtained in practically every cotton-growing community each year. We would then suggest these general principles for meeting the weevil situation and maintaining the supremacy of the South in world cotton production, as well as insuring a more profitable farm crop in cotton for the farmers of the cotton belt.

First—Select your best land for planting, that is, land that warms up early and upon which cotton has always seemed to do better than upon other portions of the farm.

Second—Break early, preferably in the fall or winter. Thoroughly harrow and pulverize well before bedding up. Use a liberal amount of fertilizer best suited to your soil and conditions. A high grade fertilizer with a heavy content of quickly available nitrogen is probably best.

Third—Plant early but not too early. Cotton should be planted at such time if possible as to insure that it will come up quickly and grow off rapidly. Care should be taken to plant good seed. Se-

CONVICTS MUTINY AT ALDRICH MINES

Damage that is estimated to run as high as $30,000 was done to the Aldrich mines Friday of last week by a group of convicts, 63 in number, employed in the mines who mutinied at 7:30 o'clock Friday morning and continued to defy the authorities throughout the day and until late Friday night.

The men used dynamite freely and wrecked a great deal of valuable machinery, much of it beyond repair.

It is said that the men gave as reason for their action a determination to have the warden at the mines "fired" because he had administered punishment to some of them number Thursday night for violating the rules.

It is said that some of the leaders of the mutiny were among those who gave similar trouble at Banner mines in Jefferson county some time ago. The mutineers were overcome Friday night when 18 men armed with rifles went down into the mines and forced them to surrender.

SHELBY DEMOCRATS IN SESSION TUESDAY

The meeting was entirely harmonious throughout and in the short time it remained in session transacted a considerable volume of important business.

There was a good attendance of representative citizens who are not members of the committee and their presence was responsible in part for the high degree of enthusiasm that characterized the session.

Mrs. J. L. Davis is spending some time visiting relatives in Dothan and Panama City, Fla.

COUNTY AGENT GETS CORDIAL RECEPTION

All Classes of Business Men Promise Co-operation and Support

The new county agent for Shelby county agent Lauderdale, who entered upon his duties January 1, is receiving a cordial reception from farmers and business men in every part of the county. Though the weather hav been unfavora- and the roads are bad. Mr. Lauderdale has visited several communities and is fast becoming familiar with conditions in Shelby county.

It was the privilege of the editor of the Reporter to go with Mr. Lauderdale to Calera on Friday and to introduce him to a number of the business men and farmers of that community. To a man they expressed themselves as being pleased that the county again has a farm agent and they heartily pledged to him their co-operation and support. An invitation was given Mr. Lauderdale by L. P. Thornburgh, pres., and G. M. Averyt, secretary of the Commercial Club of Calera, to attend one of their meetings soon and present to the members an outline of his plans for the coming year.

On the following day Mr. Lauderdale paid a visit to Wilsonville, where he met a number of business men who were enthusiastic in pledging him their support. It was urged upon Mr. Lauderdale that he do everything possible to encourage more farmers in that community to go into the dairy industry; the experience of those who are already keeping cows being such as to prove that the dairy cow can help to improve conditions in Shelby county just as she has done in many other parts of the country.

W. H. Pope, of the J. F. Pope Company, agreed to furnish the material, both fertilizer and poison, for a demonstration plot of cotton, the land to be selected, prepared, fertilized, cultivated and the poison applied under the direction of the county agent.

Mr. Lauderdale is greatly pleased with the hearty reception he is receiving and he feels very much encouraged both by conditions in the county, and the attitude of the people toward his work, to believe that substantial results may be obtained.

C. L. McDaniel of Shelby, who is recovering from a recent illness was in town a few hours Monday.

When Judge L. B. Riddle closed the door of the probate office Monday afternoon he had completed the first year of his term as probate judge of Shelby county. It was on January 15, 1923, that he and his associates who had been chosen in the fall elections took the oath of office and entered upon their respective duties.

Judge Riddle entered upon the duties of his office with the realization that he had become the servant of the people of Shelby county to whom a sacred trust had been committed, and with the firm purpose to so conduct the affairs of his office as to make it render the highest degree of service possible to every citizen of the county.

The office of probate judge is essentially a place for a trained business man, for it is in this office that a large part of the business of the county is transacted. Deeds and mortgoges are filed for record here and the records kept. Marriage licenses, privilege licenses, automobile licenses, hunters' licenses, etc., are all issued from this office. It is the duty of the probate judge to administer the estates of deceased persons so as to protect the interest of widows and orphans, to appoint administrators and pass upon their work, to decide contests of wills, and to appoint guardians for minor heirs. In the discharge of these duties the highest requirements of efficiency and integrity are made.

In addition to the duties mentioned above, the probate judge is the judge of the county court and in that capacity must sit in the trial of those who violate the law. He is also the judge of the juvenile court, charged with the responsibility of finding means to check tendencies to crime in the youth.

Judge Riddle is assisted in the office by Miss Dixie Bates, his chief clerk and his daughter, Miss Wilma Riddle. These two with himself do all the work of the office and when they left the office at the close of the day Monday there was not a single piece of work unfinished on any desk. This has been the rule throughout the year and but few days have closed but that every desk was clean. Careful reports are required to be made to various state departments of government each month. It has been the rule of the office to make these reports on the first day of each month regardless of the effort required, a practice that, state officials say, is observed by but few probate offices in the state. For this promptness Judge Riddle's office has fequently been complimented by the state officials.

In a later issue the Reporter will endeavor to give an outline of the work done in the probate office during the past year.

RAILROADS FILE COTTON TARIFFS

ONLY ONE ROAD OUT ON CONCENTRATION PRIVILEGE RATES

NEW TARIFF EFFECTIVE FEBRUARY 1

Commission To Confer With L. & N. Officials Regarding Certain Minor Details.

Montgomery—Five railroads operating in Alabama have already filed with the Alabama Public Service Commission tariffs containing cotton concentration privileges and rates as provided by the commission's formal order for the placing in effect of such privileges and rates, issued some time ago.

George H. Wilcox, of Birmingham, assistant freight traffic manager of the Southern Railway system lines, personally presented the Southern's tariff embodying these new privileges and rates on cotton, the tariff was approved and will go into effect on Feb. 1, 1924, the effective date of the commission's order already referred to.

The Southern's new tariff is applicable at Anniston, Attalla, Birmingham, Decatur, Demopolis, Mobile, Selma, Sheffield and Talladega. Provisions of the same tariff will be extended for application in Montgomery over the lines of the Western. Tariffs published by the carriers covering this subject are to be reciprocal in operation.

Other railroads which so far have complied with the commission's order as to establishment of cotton concentration privileges and rates by the filing of tariffs for approval, are the Western Railroad of Alabama, the L. & N., the Central of Georgia and the Seaboard Air Line.

All have been approved except the tariff of the L. & N., received at the commission's office. It was stated that it is the desire of the commission to confer with the L. & N. officials regarding certain minor details of the new tariff before it is finally approved.

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF

Mrs. P. F. Snow, of Heflin, has in her possession a Masonic apron which was worn by her father when master of the Zebulon (Ga.) Lodge in 1869. The apron is of silk and the square and compass shows that this old relic has been carefully preserved. The apron, which must be more than 75 years old, Mrs. Snow claims, was sent to her by her mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Jones, of Leoma, Tenn.

Edward V. O'Connor, 53, editor and publisher of the Mobile Times-News, and a correspondent for a number of newspapers and widely known throughout the state, died shortly after 4 o'clock, Jan. 10. He had been ill for two weeks. Deceased was a native of Mobile and began his newspaper career as a newsboy and worked his way up.

With his wedding less than a month off and facing what he expected to be a hard fight to establish his profession in a community hitherto unentered, Charles L. Fisher, 26, chiropractor, was found hanged with a strip of bed linen in his room at the Birmingham Y. M. C. A. Death, according to Coroner Russum, was caused by strangulation, self-inflicted.

A large road roller and scarifier built for Madison county by the Bucklow Springfield company, has been added to the county's road building equipment. It is expected that next spring and summer will see more repair and construction work on the roads than has been done in a long time because some of the roads have been almost ruined this winter.

Construction in the near future of a new addition to the Bessemer post office will be advocated by Senator Oscar Underwood and Congressman George Huddleston, according to postal officials and members of the Chamber of Commerce, who have been pushing a request for an additional building.

Alderman J. W. Harris was appointed mayor pro tem, Patrolmen Ed McKenny and A. H. Collier were released from the department in order to reduce city expenses, and Mack Hinton was re-elected as jailor and E. L. Newsome as street overseer, at the first 1924 meeting of the Phenix city council.

Farmers of Butler county are thanking the weather man for the exceedingly cold weather that has just passed that section. They claim that the freeze pulverized the land to a great extent thereby increasing its fertility. The freeze also had good effect on the boll weevil destruction, as well as many other injurious insects.

Harry B. Wheelock, of Birmingham, was elected president of the Alabama chapter of the American institution of architects at the annual meeting.

Sale of the new issue of Huntsville municipal school bonds in the sum of $150,000 has been set by the city council for February 12, and until that time bids for the issue will be received. The bonds are to run for 30 years and bear interest at the rate of 5 per cent. The money will be used in the erection of three new school buildings and repair of the schools now in use.

Mandamus proceedings were filed in the circuit court of Lee county by C. G. Carmack, a resident of Russell county, against C. B. Gullatt, mayor of Phenix City, and J. W. Anthony, W. A. Barnes, J. W. Harris, E. L. White and W. M. Bullard as aldermen of Phenix City, alleging that the mayor and aldermen had failed or refused to designate wards for the territory formerly embraced in Girard, and which, by the action of consolidation, became a part of Phenix City and to elect representatives or aldermen from that section of the city as required by law.

John Sparrow, 65 years of age, head of Sparrow Advertising agency and for years prominently connected with newspaper and advertising work in Birmingham, died at 10:05 o'clock Thursday night, Jan. 10, at his residence, 1524 Water street, from a fracture at the base of the skull, sustained when he either fell or was struck by an automobile at the American Trust & Savings bank corner during the wind and rain storm of Thursday afternoon.

Elmore County has suffered heavily from the effects of the recent freeze. Many truck growers have their gardens blasted and all heretofore growing stuff are lying blackened and dead. Thousands of beautiful cabbage, some already beginning to head, are lying limp and flat. The continued warm weather during November and December caused vegetation to put on a fresh growth, and when the freeze struck this part of the state, everything was blighted.

On Friday, January 25, citizens from various sections of Lauderdale county will gather at the Florence Chamber of Commerce for a farm conference. Business men, farmers, bankers, newspaper men and the public at large, will be present at which time a program will be outlined for 1924. There will be present men who have had years of experience in the farm work at Auburn. The farm bureau will also be represented.

Burling Brown, negro, was killed, and Tom Garrison, another negro, seriously injured when a sewerage ditch in Montgomery caved in. Brown was buried by the dirt, while only Garrison's head was above ground after the cave-in. The ditch had been excavated to a depth of 12 feet and four negroes were continuing the excavation when about five feet of dirt fell upon them. Two escaped by running.

It is predicted that Jasper, which has spent more than half a million dollars on hospitals and 200 new homes and business houses the past year, will spend $1,000,000 during the ensuing year for new homes and business houses.

Mobile is going after conventions in 1924 and to this end every civic club in the city has been asked to lend a hand in bringing conventions to this city, according to action taken by the convention committee, Mobile Chamber of Commerce, of which Capt. Leon Schwarz is chairman.

The Sumter County Board of Revenue has offered the position as farm demonstrator to Mr. Bonner, of Columbus, Marion County, Miss. Mr. Bonner was highly recommended to the board, being a graduate of the A. & M. College of Mississippi, and a practical farmer of several years experience.

Judge Henry A. Pearce, of the Dothan circuit, has again been assigned to preside at the trial of Robert J. Lancaster, former national guardsman, at Hamilton, on Jan. 21, according to announcement made by Chief Justice John C. Anderson of the Alabama Supreme Court.

Filling stations and gasoline dealers of Gadsden have started a movement for Sunday closing. They are asking that all places selling gasoline be closed from 10:30 o'clock to 1:30 o'clock on Sundays and it is reported that most of the oil companies are quite willing to change.

During the recent cold wave, according to reports from North Alabama, many sweet potatoes have been lost through freezing. It is estimated that in Walker county 10,000 bushels of potatoes were frozen. One farmer sold an entire truck load in Jasper for 60 cents per bushel.

The excess of escapes over recaptures of convicts from the Alabama penitentiary for 1923 was eight, according to figures from the office of the state board of administration. A total of 59 convicts escaped during the 12 months and there were 51 recaptured.

More than $7,800 was on deposit with the wardens of the various state prisons on January 1, 1924, representing the savings of convicts, according to figures compiled in the office of Roy L. Nolen, associate member of the board of administration.

Mrs. Cirol Sperry Bourne, of Mobile, wife of former United States Senator Jonathan Bourne, of Oregon, and owner of one of the largest plantations in Alabama, has instituted suit for divorce on grounds of desertion. The couple were married here in 1918.

Automobile traffic which was suspended during the severe cold weather has been resumed and tourists are passing through the state in large numbers en route to points south.

Mobile's Mardi Gras carnival of 1924 was given unanimous indorsement by the board of directors of the Mobile Chamber of Commerce. After giving indorsement, members of the board of directors offered support along other lines in an effort to encourage the carnival movement and to make the 1924 carnival the greatest in the history of the event.

THE BROWN MOUSE

By HERBERT QUICK

(Copyright by The Bobbs-Merrill Company)

"YOU MARRY! HUMPH!"

A noted book by a noted man is "The Brown Mouse" by Herbert Quick. It's a story of the fascination that lies both in farming and teaching—if you look for it the right way. It's read everywhere because it's a charming story, yet it's so practical that it's come to be a sort of text book. Its ideas have been adopted far and wide as a part of the legitimate advancement of the sciences of farming and teaching.

A Scotch scientist crossed the Japanese waltzing mouse on the common white mouse and got a brown mouse which was different from any other mouse in the world. Well, young Jim Irwin is the brown mouse. He's a field hand—and a latent genius. Jennie Woodruff likes him, but can't see a husband in him. A practical joke results in Jim becoming the village school teacher. Thereupon Jim proceeds to rock the boat so hard that the waves scare the community and the ripples run state wide.

Experience is a great teacher. Herbert Quick has been farmer, schoolmaster, lawyer, editor, public servant, social worker, war worker and several other things. Now he's probably more novelist than anything else, with a dozen good books to his credit and the output getting better and better. "Vandemark's Folly" was a huge sucess and "The Hawkeye," his latest, appears to be even more successful. You see, Herbert Quick knows what he's writing about.

A Maiden's "Humph!"

Jim brought from his day's work all the fragrances of next year's meadows. He had been feeding the crops. All things have opposite poles, and the scents of the farm are no exception to the rule. Just now, Jim Irwin possessed in his clothes and person the olfactory pole opposite to the new-mown hay, the fragrant butter and the scented breath of the lowing kine—perspiration and top-dressing.

He was not quite so keenly conscious of this as was Jennie Woodruff. Had he been so, the glimmer of her white pique dress on the bench under the basswood would not have drawn him back from the gate. He had come to the house to ask Colonel Woodruff about the farm work, and having received instructions to take a team and join in the road work next day, he had gone down the walk between the beds of four o'clocks and petunias to the lane. Turning to latch the gate, he saw through the dusk the white dress under the tree and drawn by the greatest attraction known in nature, had reentered the Woodruff grounds and strolled back.

A brief hello betrayed old acquaintance, and that social equality which still persists in theory between the work people on the American farm and the family of the employer. A desultory murmur of voices ensued. Jim Irwin sat down on the bench—not too close, be it observed, to the pique skirt. . . . There came into the voices a note of deeper earnestness, betokening something quite aside from the rippling of the course of true love running smoothly. In the man's voice was a tone of protest and pleading. . . .

"I know you are," said she, "but after all these years don't you think you should be at least preparing to be something more than that?"

"What can I do?" he pleaded. "I'm tied hand and foot. . . . I might have. . . ."

"You might have," said she, "but, Jim, you haven't . . . and I don't see any prospects. . . ."

"I have been writing for the farm papers," said Jim; "but . . ."

"But that doesn't get you anywhere, you know. . . . You're a great deal more able and intelligent than Ed, and see what a fine position he has in Chicago. . . ."

"You Marry! Humph!"

"There's mother, you know," said Jim gently.

"You can't do anything here," said Jennie. "You've been a farm-hand for fifteen years . . . and you always will be unless you pull yourself loose. Even a girl can make a place for herself if she doesn't marry and leaves the farm. You're twenty-eight years old."

"It's all wrong!" said Jim gently. "The farm ought to be the place for the best sort of career—I love the soil!"

"I've been teaching for only two years, and they say I'll be nominated for county superintendent if I'll take it. Of course I won't—it seems silly—but if it were you, now, it would be a first step to a life that leads to something."

"Mother and I can live on my wages—and the garden and chickens, and the cow," said Jim. "After I received my teacher's certificate, I tried to work out some way of doing the same thing on a country teacher's wages. I couldn't. It doesn't seem right."

Jim rose and after pacing back and forth sat down again, a little closer to Jennie. Jennie moved away to the extreme end of the bench, and the shrinking away of Jim as if he had been repelled by some sort of negative magnetism, snowed either sensitiveness or temper.

"It seems as if it ought to be possible," said Jim, "for a man to do work on the farm, or in the rural schools, that would make him a livelihood. If he is only a field-hand, it ought to be possible for him to save money and buy a farm."

"Pa's land is worth two hundred dollars an acre," said Jennie. "Six months of your wages for an acre—even if you lived on nothing."

"No," he assented, "it can't be done, and the other thing can't, either. There ought to be such conditions that a teacher could make a living."

"They do," said Jennie, "if they can live at home during vacations. I do."

"But a man teaching in the country ought to be able to marry."

"Marry!" said Jennie, rather unfeelingly, I think. "You marry!" Then after remaining silent for nearly a minute, she uttered the syllable—without the utterance of which this narrative would not have been written. "You marry! Humph!"

Jim Irwin rose from the bench tingling with the insult he found in her tone. They had been boy-and-girl sweethearts in the old days at the Woodruff schoolhouse down the road, and before the fateful time when Jennie went "off to school" and Jim began to support his mother. They had even kissed—and on Jim's side, lonely as was his life, cut off as it necessarily was from all companionship save that of his tiny home and his fellow-workers of the field, the tender little love-story was the sole romance of his life. Jennie's "Humph!" retired this romance from circulation, he felt. It showed contempt for the idea of his marrying. It relegated him to a sexless category with other defectives, and badged him with the celibacy of a sort of Twentieth-century monk, without the honor of the priestly vocation. From another girl it would have been bad enough, but from Jennie Woodruff—and especially on that quiet summer night under the linden—it was insupportable.

"Good night," said Jim—simply because he could not trust himself to say more.

"Good night," replied Jennie, and sat for a long time wondering just how deeply she had unintentionally wounded the feelings of her father's field-hand; deciding that if he was driven from her forever, it would solve the problem of terminating that old childish love affair which still persisted in occupying a suite of rooms all of its own in her memory; and finally repenting of the unpremeditated thrust which might easily have hurt too deeply so sensitive a man as Jim Irwin. But girls are not usually so made as to feel any very bitter remorse for their male victims, and so Jennie slept very well that night.

Jim Irwin was bony and rugged and homely, with a big mouth, and wide ears, and a form stooped with labor. He had fine, lambent, gentle eyes which lighted up his face when he smiled. He was not ugly. Jim Irwin possessed charm. That is why little Jennie Woodruff had asked him to help with her lessons, rather oftener than was necessary, in those old days in the Woodruff schoolhouse when Jennie wore her hair down her back.

But in spite of this homely charm of personality, Jim Irwin was set off from his fellows of the Woodruff neighborhood. He was different. In local parlance, he was an off ox. He was as odd as Dick's hatband. He ran in a gang by himself. He had always liked to read, and had piles of literature in his attic room which was good, because it was cheap.

Very few people know that cheap literature is very likely to be good, because it is old and unprotected by copyright. Jim had Emerson, Thoreau, an Encyclopedia of English Literature, some editions of standard poets in paper covers, and a few Ruskins and Carlyles—all read to rags.

In fact, Jim had a good library of publications which can be obtained gratis, or very cheaply—and he knew their contents. He had a personal philosophy, which while it had cost him the world in which his fellows lived, had given him one of his own, in which he moved as lonely as a cloud, and as untouched of the life about him.

By every test of common life, he was a failure. His family history was a badge of failure. People despised a man who was so incontestably smarter than they, and yet could do no better with himself than to work in the fields alongside the tramps and transients and hoboes. Save for his mother and their cow and garden and flock of fowls and their wretched little rented house, he was a tramp himself.

His duties, his mother, and his dead father's status as an outcast took away his citizenship in Boyville, and drove him in upon himself, and, at first, upon his school books and later upon Emerson, Thoreau, Ruskin and the poets, and the agricultural reports and bulletins.

All this degraded—or exalted—him to the position of an intellectual farm-hand, with a sense of superiority and a feeling of degradation. It made Jennie Woodruff's "Humph!" potent to keep him awake that night, and send him to the road work with Colonel Woodruff's team next morning with hot eyes and a hotter heart.

Colonel Woodruff's gray percherons seemed to feel the unrest of their driver, for they fretted and actually executed a clumsy prance as Jim

"Fellers Have Put Up a Job on You, Jim."

Irwin pulled them up at the end of the turnpike across Bronson's Slew—a peat-marsh which annually offered the men of the Woodruff district the opportunity to hold the male equivalent of a sewing circle while working out their road taxes. Columbus Brown, the pathmaster, prided himself on the Bronson Slew turnpike as his greatest triumph in road engineering. The work consisted in hauling, dragging and carrying gravel out on the low fill which carried the road across the marsh, and then watching it slowly settle until the next summer.

"Haul gravel from the east gravel bed, Jim," called Columbus Brown from the lowest spot in the middle of the turnpike. "Take Newt here to help load."

Jim smiled his habitual slow, gentle smile at Newton Bronson, seventeen, undersized, tobacco-stained, profane and proud of the fact that he had once beaten his way from Des Moines to Faribault on freight trains. A source of anxiety to his father, and the subject of many predictions that he would come to no good end, Newton was out on the road work because he was likely to be of little use on the farm. Clearly, Newton was on the downward road in a double sense—and yet, Jim Irwin rather liked him.

"The fellers have put up a job on you, Jim," volunteered Newton, as they began filling the wagon with gravel.

"What sort of job?" asked Jim.

"They're nominating you for teacher," replied Newton.

"Since when has the position of teacher been an elective office?" asked Jim.

"Sure, it ain't elective," answered Newton. "But they say that with as many brains as you've got sloshing around loose in the neighborhood, you're a candidate that can break the deadlock in the school board."

Jim shoveled on silently for a while, and by example urged Newton to earn the money credited to his father's assessment for the day's work.

A slide of earth just then brought down a sweet-clover plant growing rankly beside the top of the pit. Jim Irwin pulled it loose from its anchorage, and after looking attentively at the roots, laid the whole plant on the bank for safety.

"What do you want of that weed?" asked Newton.

"He thinks we're bullheaded mules and that all the schools are bad."

ROAD BUILDING

Begin to Repair Highway When Opened for Traffic

A man who spent $25,000 for a house and contents and refused to spend a hundred dollars to stop the leak in the roof, which spoiled both, would be considered a fool. But there are many counties and many states which spend from ten to twenty-five thousand dollars a mile for a good road, and refuse the hundred dollars a year needed to keep it in perfect order.

The time to begin to repair a good road is the day it is opened for traffic. Homely philosophy says that a stitch in time saves nine, and road experience proves that a bucket of oil, a little sand, a few rocks and a man with a shovel now can save the expense of a whole road gang and expensive machinery later.

The modern road consists of a foundation course of stone, a smaller, lighter course on top, a wearing course of still smaller stones, a binder of oil and sand, and perhaps a top dressing of the same. As long as the structure is complete, the road will wear. But let time, or a too heavy load, or frost, or some other cause, dig a hole through the wearing course into the foundation, and the "bad spot" will begin to "ravel." Stones will break away and roll in the ditch, the surface will disintegrate and in a comparatively short time a large and rough hole appears.

A good road is no better than its worst mile. A mile of holes and ruts cuts down the usefulness of ten miles of good road. To repair a large hole costs much money. To inspect the road often and stop up the little hole when it starts is very inexpensive. The greatest city fire in history could have been put out by a child with a cup of water if found in time. So can the worst possible damage to roads be inexpensively prevented, if the maintenance is begun in time.—Good Roads.

World's Speed Record in Hard Road Construction

A mile of concrete highway was laid down every hour of a six-day week ending October 11 in Illinois to establish what the engineers of the state division of highways believe to be the world's speed record in hard road construction.

The last of the reports of the division engineers covering the progress of the work in all parts of the state the week ending October 11 revealed what Superintendent of Highways Frank T. Sheets described as a "phenomenal achievement previously deemed almost impossible." A total of 57.7 miles of standard 18-foot pavement was laid during the six-day period by 118 large mixers working on the state system. Nine thousand six hundred men and 2,200 teams were employed in the work.

Chief Highway Engineer Clifford Older declared that the record showed the road building organization at its best and was undoubtedly the greatest accomplishment in highway construction down to the present time. "The figures indicate," said Mr. Older, "that the combined outfits working on Illinois state roads laid one mile of completed pavement an hour, about 88 feet per minute.

"And this does not represent a spasmodic effort," Mr. Older continued. "We have been constantly hitting between forty-nine and fifty miles per week during the season. Governor Small personally inspected the figures and commended the highway division as the "greatest road building organization in the world."

Build Automobile Roads and Make Streets Better

Following similar action by municipalities in India, Australia, and Japan, cities in China are putting into practice the latest methods adopted by American highway engineers for the construction of automobile roads and modern paved streets. According to C. Harpur, commissioner of public works at Shanghai, Chinese highway bureaus are beginning to replace their waterbound macadam streets with asphaltic concrete. In Shanghai last year five and one-fourth miles of asphaltic concrete pavement were constructed. Nearly three miles of this are on roads approved for new lines of railless tramcars. The mileage of streets traversed by Shanghai's tramway system is about twenty-six.

Last year the tramcars of Shanghai carried 126,684,226 persons, or 19,500 persons per route mile per day, a passenger traffic unequaled, it is said, even by the surface lines of New York city, London, Chicago, Paris, or Berlin. Handcarts licensed in Shanghai last December numbered 2,164, while the wheelbarrows licensed totaled 13,941. There are now 334 motor trucks using Shanghai streets.

Travel Records Were Broken.

All travel records to Yellowstone National park were broken during the season which closed on September 20. There were 91,244 automobile tourists in 27,350 cars this year, as compared with 67,507 tourists in 18,235 cars last year. There were 117 makes of cars in the park, and six makes of motor cycles.

WAYS WITH FISH

A white-meated fish makes a most delicious dinner dish when boiled. Wrap in cheesecloth and simmer until tender in boiling salted water seasoned as one likes, with a little parsley or onion, or use fish stock in which to cook the fish. Remove from the cloth, and serve on a hot platter with

Venetian Sauce.—Melt one-fourth cupful of butter, add four tablespoonfuls of flour and stir until well blended; then pour on gradually while stirring constantly, two cupfuls of boiling water. Bring to the boiling point, add the juice of half a lemon, one-fourth of a cupful of capers, one teaspoonful of chopped parsley and two tablespoonfuls of finely-chopped pickles. Again bring to boiling point, season with salt, and two tablespoonfuls of butter added bit by bit.

Salmon Souffle.—Season one can of salmon (flaked) with salt, paprika and two teaspoonfuls of lemon juice. Cook one-half cupful of soft bread crumbs with one-half cupful of milk five minutes. Add the salmon and the yolks of three eggs beaten thick, then cut and fold in the stiffly beaten whites of the eggs. Turn into a buttered baking dish, set into a pan of hot water and bake in a moderate oven. Serve with Spanish Sauce.—Melt three tablespoonfuls of butter, add three tablespoonfuls of flour, stir until well blended, then pour on gradually one cupful of milk and one-half cupful of cream. When boiling add one-half cupful of pimentos put through a sieve, one teaspoonful of salt, a little red pepper and a dash of paprika.

Salmon may be served as salad, with lettuce, as stuffing for green peppers, creamed in timbale cases, scrambled with eggs, in chowder, with egg sauce and boiled potatoes, or molded in fish aspic. These are but a few of the many ways to serve canned salmon.

Salmon Loaf.—Take one can of salmon, one-quarter cupful of bread crumbs, one egg, one-half cupful of milk, three-quarters of a teaspoonful of salt. Free the salmon from the bones and skin and shred, using a silver fork. Cook the bread crumbs with the milk until smooth; add the seasoning, salmon and egg and, when well-mixed, turn into a well-buttered mold. Set in a pan of hot water and bake in a moderate oven until firm. Serve surrounded with cooked peas, either buttered or in a white sauce.

That serveth not another's will;
Whose armour is his honest thought,
And simple truth his utmost skill!
—Henry Wotton.

FOOD FOR THE FAMILY

On a cold night there is nothing more appetizing than a good baked potato. One may vary the serving by using the following:

Stuffed Baked Potatoes.—Scrub the potatoes well with a vegetable brush and bake until soft. Cut off a slice from the top, scoop out the potato, mash and mix with one cupful of finely-minced, cooked beef, adding more seasonings and refill the potato skins above the edge of the openings. Set into the oven to brown. Serve garnished with parsley.

Veal Cutlets With Horseradish Sauce.—Wipe a slice of veal and cut the meat into pieces. Cover with boiling water, simmer until the meat is tender. Drain, sprinkle with salt, dip into egg and crumbs and fry in deep fat. For sauce melt two tablespoonfuls of butter, add one tablespoonful of flour and one cupful of water in which the veal was cooked. Add one-fourth teaspoonful of salt, a few drops of onion juice, a few grains of red pepper, one teaspoonful of grated horseradish and one-fourth cupful of cream.

Spanish Steak.—Take two pounds of round steak, cut into four-inch squares; on each square place a slice of breakfast bacon, roll up and skewer with tooth pick. Place the meat rolls in a saucepan, cover with boiling water, add a chopped onion, three carrots sliced thin, a pint of tomatoes, one tablespoonful of salt, a half-teaspoonful of pepper, and cook one and one-quarter hours. Serve hot.

Prune Salad.—Soak one-half pound of prunes over night and then simmer until tender. When cool pit them, and stuff with walnut meats. Shred a bunch of lettuce, make nests and put on each plate four or five of the stuffed prunes. Add mayonnaise and serve.

On a cold day a good, old-fashioned dinner dish is side pork and baked potatoes. After the pork has been fried until crisp and brown, prepare a gravy with some of the fat, adding two or three tablespoonfuls of flour and milk, cooked until smooth. Season well before serving.

Cannot Praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Enough. Sick Women Read This Letter

Charleston, S. C.—"I was completely run-down and not able to do my housework. I just dragged myself around and did not have energy enough to get up when I sat down. I read advertisements of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in your books and learned about it. I got benefit from the very first bottle. I continued to take it for some time, and now I am doing all my own work, even washing and ironing, and never felt better in my life. I tell all my friends that the change in my health is due to but one thing and that is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I cannot praise it enough."—Mrs. ANNIE YOUNG, 16 Amherst St., Charleston, S.C.

The reason for such a letter from Mrs. Young is apparent. She got well and is grateful. Recently a nation-wide canvass of women purchasers of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was made, and 98 out of 100 reported that they received benefit from taking it.

Just because the Vegetable Compound has been helping other women is a good reason why it should help you. For sale by druggists everywhere.

SUBSCRIPTION. the year $1.50

Entered at the Columbiana, Ala., Postoffice as second class mail, under act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

We Enter a New Year.—

With this issue the Reporter enters upon its New Year. Last week's paper was No. 52; this paper is No. 1. We are grateful for the hearty and friendly support that has been given the paper during its first year of endeavoring to serve the good county of Shelby and its interests.

When the paper started in Shelby county a year ago it had in the county 226 paid subscribers. Today it has over 850 paid subscribers in the county and 200 that live in other counties and states. This is a wonderful record and it has been made possible only because the Reporter has found so many loyal enthusiastic friends.

For this support we are indeed grateful and we enter upon this second year of service with our pledge renewed to do all within our resources to build a paper good enough to represent Shelby county and the people of Shelby county.

—O—

E. C. Burton a Progressive Farmer.—

On one of his rounds last week the county agent stopped to see an old neighbor of his, E. C. Burton, who owns the Lapsley place near Calera. Mr. Burton moved from Marion county four years ago intending to specialize in the dairy business. In spite of his very disastrous experience with the cattle tick he is still carrying on.

Mr. Burton has one of the most attractive home sites in all Shelby county. It was built as a summer home years ago by Mr. Lapsley, a prominent citizen of Selma, who later made it his permanent home. The fields lie well and can easily be built to a high state of fertility. One plot, of fourteen acres is an ideal site for an orchard. On this plot 100 trees have been planted and they show healthy growing condition. More trees will be planted soon. Besides these there are a number of old trees including some fine pear trees. One peach tree that looks to be at least 40 years old never misses a good yield. This orchard plot is covered with bur clover and from part of it fine yields of hay from Johnson grass and Lespedeza are obtained every year.

Mr. Burton has some fine cows, some Duroc-Jersey hogs and some white Leghorn hens. He is making plans to utilize one field that has a lasting water supply for a permanent pasture. It was practically agreed between Mr Burton and the county agent that this field should be made a demonstration pasture, to be planted and cared for as Mr. Laudeerdale may suggest.

Mr. Burton believes as do many other good farmers in Shelby county that with getting forever rid of the cattle tick, as is planned for this year, and with the building of good roads, Shelby county will one day come into its own and will be recognized everywhere as one of the best counties in the whole state of Alabama.

The Reporter has made arrangement with the publishers of all leading magazines, by which we can order your subscriptions. Ask for complete magazine catalogue. The Reporter can order your magazine at the lowest prices. Let us have the order today.

Live Stock Farming Depends On Pastures

(By A. A. Lauderdale, County Agent, Shelby County)

Livestock is the basis of success in the most prosperous farming sections of our country. The problem of successful livestock raising in Alabama is largely dependent on the establishing of good permanent pastures. Farm animals and live stock in general, depend on green feed for their substance during the greater part of the year. In this respect, Alabama has the advantage over most northern states; if properly managed, good pastures can be had from 8 to 10 months in the year. If plenty of good grass can be secured without much expense, satisfactory financial returns may be realized from the farm animals.

Permanent pastures need moisture. Most of the farms in Shelby county have good places for pasture without sacrificing land suitable for field crops. The best crop producing land is usually too dry to make the best pasture.

The following are some of the requirements of a satisfactory pasture:

1. An abundance of nutritious and palatable grass for the maximum period.
2. Good fence.
3. Aaequate supply of fresh water.
4. Plenty of shade, well distributed.
5. Free from poisonous or undesirable weeds, mires or bogs.

We should endeavor to satisfy these requirements as far as possible. A good pasture should carry from one to two cows per acre from 8 to 10 months in the year.

The best grasses to use for pastures are: Carpet gross, Dallis grass, Bermuda grass, lespedeza or Japan clover and white clover.

Carpet grass does well on the lighter sandy soils if there is sufficient moisture. The roots live through the winter, and make early grazing in the spring. It reseeds and also spreads from runners on the ground.

Dallas grass has a wider range of adaptability than carpet grass, but it does best on heavy soils. The roots live through the winter and make early grazing in the spring nd throughout the entire summer.

Lespedeza is a legume, and is, therefore, a soil builder, as well as a nutritious grazing plant. It is an annual and re-seeds each year. it will furinsh good grazing from June until frost. It is a good crop for the higher as well as the lower lands.

Bermuda is a nutritious, palatable grass, and is well suited to our good uplands. It will furnish grazing from June until late fall. It is usually more satisfactory to plant cuttings in the spring, either in rows or broadcast and covered, than to plant seed, as germination is rather poor.

White clover is a good addition to our heavy fertile soils. It will furnish both early and late grazing, and will also re-seed in the late spring.

All pasture grass should be planted on a good firm seed bed, as they are small and will likely die from lack of moisture before they are well rooted. The pasture should be seeded in February or March.

To get quick, satisfactory pasture, we should plant 10 pounds of lespedeza, 5 pounds of carpet grass and 3 pounds of Dallis grass seed per acre.

Let us help nature a little and have better pastures, better livestock, and happier folks in 1924.

Cotton Can Be Grown

the average cotton field in September will show a percentage of stalks with no fruit. Eliminate these by careful seed selection. If you have failed to do this it will pay you well to secure planting seed from someone who was careful in selection.

Fourth—Cultivate shallow and often. First cultivations may be made with harrow or weeder. Be sure and leave a good stand. Sufficient evidence apparently has been accumulated to convince anyone that 3½ foot rows spaced the width of a hoe two or more stalks to the hill, is the best spacing. Continue cultivation until crop is practically matured and keep clean as possible. A crop is always delayed if not actually stunted when cultivation gets behind and the crop gets grassy, even though you clean it out later. To delay the growing and fruiting under weevil conditions nearly always results in serious loss.

Fifth—Fight the boll weevil with determination. By (a) clearing all rubbish and brush about the farm. Use fire freely on hedges and ditches about the farm but do not burn off stubble, stalks, etc. from your fields. Plow this under and let it rot and add plant food to your soil. By (b) keeping a close watchout for weevil which may be expected to appear as early as cotton begins to grow. The weevil will be found in the buds of the cotton plants and may be seen very plainly from three to five yards by one who will look carefully and who cares for his welfare and that of his family. It will pay handsomely to destroy these old weeevils either by picking them off or by poisoning in the bud of the cotton with calcium arsenate, because they are the ancestors of all the thousands and millions that may later destroy your crop. If you killed all these as they came from hibernation you would have no young weevil to bother your crop for there are no young ones in the spring and cannot be until your crop has squares large enough to accommodate the weevil's egg or in which she may make a nest for such length of time thereafter as is required for the development through the several stages to the adult which is in the early summer about twenty-one days. This means there can be no weevil attack your cotton except those that have successfully hibernated or passed the winter about your farm until fully one month after your cotton has begun to square, because the cotton square must be about ten days old before it is large enough to accommodate the egg and immature stages of the weevil. If this idea shall be thoroughly gotten over to the cotton grower it will very greatly reduce the danger of his serious loss from weevil damage.

Let's not fail to get the significance of the fact that every year under all weather conditions that have existed there are in practically every local community farmers who are able to make good yields and profit on the cotton crop. A careful study of these instances will conclusively prove that the principles above suggested are fundamental and that if and when followed success is practically assured. It is a fact, of course, that acreage should not be larger than can be handled. Every crop should be pitched so as to insure ample grain and forage for all live stock and ample food for the family. If these supplies are produced we will need much less cotton, because most of our cotton has always gone to pay our bill for these necessaries. Also if ample feed and food crops are planted the cotton acreage will incidentally be reduced to a point conforming with the advice of experts regarding cotton acreage under weevil conditions. Plan for a cash income from month to month as nearly as possible throughout the year. A few milk cows and the sale of cream will fit in admirably on most farms. Feed the skim milk to good brood sows and pigs. Avoid debt for current expenses of the farm and family.

Above all, fertilize the cotton heavily. 600 to 1000 pounds per acre will, if used on the right kind of land practically insure a successful crop if properly cultivated and if the necessary precautions against boll weevil are taken. While poisoning the cotton boll weevil is a success and is entirely practicable, it is not a remedy available to the 60 percent or more of the annual cotton acreage in the belt which does not promise a yield under normal conditions sufficiently large to prove profitable and, of course, upon which the use of poison cannot be justified even though the remedy be ever so effective.

SOUTHERN RAILWAY SYSTEM

For the future of the South

BECAUSE of the remarkable development of its natural resources, the South today is taking a new leadership in the economic progress of the nation.

But this leadership, if it is to be maintained, must have a more enduring foundation than the possession and exploitation of material things.

The South of tomorrow will be made by the children of today. The boys now in school and attending the churches will be the captains of industry and the leaders in the professions a few years hence.

Citizenship is in the making in the schools and the churches.

A great responsibility rests upon the shoulders of the teachers of the South—in the pulpit and in the class-room.

But the compensation accorded the great majority of them is inadequate.

The Southern Railway System, which pays three million dollars per annum in school taxes, voices not only its own best interest but the ambition of its 60,000 employees in respect to the future of their children and their section, when it expresses the view that greater rewards should be offered the men and women who are building Southern citizenship of tomorrow.

Mid-Season Afternoon Frocks

Pretty Caps and Headbands

FASHION has presented a fascinating throng of afternoon gowns this season. More than in anything else—unless it is a beautiful hat—women take pleasure in a successful gown of this kind. It is a pleasure which must be shared by designers, since they find in these dresses opportunities to use all the means at hand, for telling elaboration and for the expression of original and clever ideas. They have had the short-sleeved and the long-sleeved modes to interpret—it appears that the midseason finds long sleeves leading—by a nose.

Chiffon velvet has been a favorite all season. Nothing drapes more effectively and nothing gives colors a better opportunity to reveal their beauties. The gown at the right of the two shown in the illustration shows a fine handling of it. In sapphire or Egyptian blue it is especially effective, but so it is in certain shades of brown. The model is cleverly draped and fastened at the side with handsome clasps. Steel or silver in the clasps look well on blue and ivory, topaz or gold on brown. In either case a dark fur contributes a rich finish—fitch recommended on brown and viatha squirrel or dark natural squirrel or blue.

The gown at the left is developed in blue satin with cuffbands and a girdle across the front of brilliant embroidery—in black, red and gold. The embroidered bands are edged with fur and a long sash of the satin is posed under the girdle at the right side. This model is best suited to a slender figure—it has a slightly bloused bodice and a full, draped skirt. The other dress is adaptable to either slender or full figures, since its drapery is arranged in lines that are almost unbroken.

Latest Frocks Have Long Sleeves.

"Oh, what a difference in the morning!" between the woman who looks like a wreck of the dream she was the night before and the one who manages to look pretty at the breakfast table. When we consider what breakfast caps and headbands for morning wear will do to help out in a good cause, we feel like giving them a rising vote of thanks. And now along come the new ones, gay and dainty—some that conceal the lack of hairdressing and make up for deficiencies, and some that point with pride to a well-made coiffure. Their name is legion and in any store that carries them they make up an alluring company.

Just the same things that have been used are again used to make the last arrivals in morning headwear, nets and laces, ribbons, little flowers and occasional ornaments. It is in the manipulation of ribbons that these new things are particularly interesting. An example appears in the pretty breakfast cap pictured, which is simply a full cap of cream colored net with a band of closely shirred, narrow satin ribbon edged with frills of val lace, about the face. But twisted satin ribbon divides the crown in two, lines of it crossing at the center, and loops of it are posed against the cap at the left side, where three strands of ribbon are braided together to form a hanging loop. A band of this narrow ribbon is knotted at intervals and tacked over the upper frill of lace.

Narrow black velvet ribbon, wider satin ribbon and lace edging form the pretty headband shown. Little chiffon roses are set along the velvet band, alternating with knots in the ribbon and satin ribbon forms ties that fasten the band at the back of the neck.

Chiffon, georgette, thin silks and satins are used, with laces and ribbons, in many ways for making these becoming bits of finery. They are things that can be bought everywhere so that no one need be without these flattering accessories.

LESSON FOR JANUARY 20

MOSES CALLED TO DELIVER ISRAEL

LESSON TEXT—Exod. 3:1-12.

GOLDEN TEXT—By faith Moses, when he was come to years, refused to be called the son of Pharaoh's daughter; choosing rather to suffer affliction with the people of God, than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season.—Heb. 11:24, 25.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Moses, the Liberator.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Moses and the Deliverance From Egyptian Bondage.

After Joseph was dead, there was a change of dynasty (Exod. 1:8). The new king, noting the rapid increase of the Israelites, counseled the exercise of prudence lest when war broke out they join the enemy and fight against the Egyptians. One of the methods to curtail this increase was to enslave the people. Failing in that, an edict was issued that every male child should be drowned. While the oppression of God's people was heading up, God was providing a deliverer. Moses, that deliverer, was first trained at his mother's knee, then at Pharaoh's court and finally under God's immediate hand in the desert.

I. The Lord Spoke to Moses From the Burning Bush (Exod. 3:1-6).

It was while keeping the flock of his father-in-law in the desert that the Lord appeared to Moses in the vision of the burning bush. This bush, enveloped in flames, yet unconsumed, symbolized the people of God enswathed in the very fire of God, or God dwelling in the midst of an elect people. Moses stepped aside to behold this strange sight and was taught the essential lesson of the proper approach to God. The Lord did not leave him long in suspense. He told him he was the God of his fathers, the Covenant God. As soon as he knew it was God speaking to him, he hid his face.

II. Moses Commissioned as the Deliverer of His People (Exod. 3:7-10).

1. God's Active Interest in His People (v. 7). In the preamble of this commission, God said to Moses, (1) "I have seen the affliction of my people"; (2) "I have heard their cry"; (3) "I know their sorrow."

2. God's Gracious Obligation to His People (vv. 8, 9). (1) To deliver them out of the hand of the Egyptians. (2) To bring them up out of the land. (3) To bring them into a "good land and a large."

3. God's Commission to Moses (v. 10). "Come now therefore, and I will send thee unto Pharaoh that thou mayest bring forth my people, the children of Israel, out of Egypt." This call seems to have been a great surprise to Moses. At any rate, he realized his unfitness to undertake such a task.

III. Moses' Objections Patiently Heard and Removed (Exod. 3:11; 4:10).

1. Personal Unfitness (v. 11). He realized his insufficiency for this task. Moses did not refuse to go, but pled his difficulty before the Lord. God answered this difficulty by assuring him that He would be with him. The token of His presence would be His worship with the people of Israel on this mountain.

2. The Difficulty of the People to Understand Moses' Relationship to God (vv. 13, 14). Moses knew how unwilling they were to acknowledge him as their deliverer 40 years before. Since God reveals Himself under a new name as He assumes a new relationship to His people, Moses inquired as to what that new relationship would be, and His corresponding name. The Lord promptly met this difficulty revealing to him a name different in many respects from all others previously given. This new name is, "I Am." This name is from the Hebrew word, "to be." It indicates (1) God's self-existence—the One whose very nature it is to be—the cause of all being. (2) His self-sufficiency. He said, "I Am That I Am." Since God is the unique One, He could not go outside of Himself to explain Himself; (3) His unchangeableness. What He always was and is, He evermore shall be.

3. Unbelief on the Part of the People (Exod. 4:1). This difficulty the Lord met by supplying him with credentials which could not be gainsaid. He was given the power to perform supernatural wonders (Exod. 4:2).

4. Lack of Eloquence (Exod. 4:10). This difficulty the Lord met by providing an assistant in the person of his brother Aaron. Moses was to be in the place of God to Pharaoh and Aaron was to be his prophet (Exod. 7:1, 2).

Odd Marriage Customs of Russia and Egypt

A queer marriage custom exists among the Circassians of the Caucasus mountain district of southern Russia. At the time of his daughter's betrothal the father pays only half of her dowry to his son-in-law. The other half is not due until the birth of the first child. Then the woman is given her long veil to signify that her dowry has been paid in full.

It is not until after the wedding ceremony that the Egyptian sees the face of the woman he marries. She is always heavily veiled and seldom appears outside her home. Many women make a profession of matchmaking, and often a man entrusts his choice of a wife to one of these, who conduct matrimonial negotiations for a price.

On the day before her marriage the Egyptian girl goes to her bath, under a canopy drawn by four men. After this, the bride and groom give a dinner to their friends. When the feast is over a quantity of henna paste is spread over the bride's hands, and the guests make her contributions by sticking coins into the paste, until her hands are covered.

Radio Station Uses Mountains for Mast

A wireless station using mountain peaks for antennae masts has recently been put into service in Upper Bavaria. The wires are supported by strong cable and extend from one peak, 5,100 feet high, a distance of about a mile and a half across country to the top of a smaller hill of some 2,820 feet elevation. The station is designed to communicate directly with the Far East. Special arrangements were necessary for the fixing of the cable ends and to allow for its stretching. The end of the cable is fastened to a small carriage weighted with stones and running on rails. When the cable is bent by snow or wind the carriage is pulled forward. When the stress ceases it rolls backward on its sloping railroad.

Why Doctors Warn Against Coffee or Tea for Children

THE reason is simple. Coffee and tea contain drugs which tend to irritate the delicate nervous system of children, and so upset health.

The Federal Bureau of Education includes in its rules to promote health among growing school children, the warning that "children should not drink tea or coffee at all."

Why confine the warning to children?

You are careful to protect the health of your children; why, then, take chances with your own health, when a change from coffee or tea is made so easy by Postum.

Postum is a delicious, pure cereal beverage—ideal for children and satisfying to adults.

Fantastic Abyssinia

Pitaonan Yfrau, Chief of the Abysinian Imperial Guards.

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)

Abyssinia's application for membership in the League of Nations has been tabled by that body because slavery with all its horrors is practiced as flagrantly today in this native, independent, Christian state as it was 100 years ago on the west coast of Africa.

Slavery is only one phase of the garish life of this topsy-turvy nation of 11,000,000 black-skinned people, who are as obtuse and unusual as those in Alice's Wonderland. In Abyssinia customs identical with those of the prehistoric lake-dwellers, a Christian faith established before the German and British barbarians were converted by missionaries, and a feudal government exist side by side, though not always in peace, while a European traveler reports that upon entering the thatched-roof palace in Adis Abeba he found the hard-working Abyssinian "Prince of Wales," Ras Tafari, eagerly studying a recent work on bolshevism.

Liberia, Egypt and Abyssinia are the only three independent native states in Africa. Liberia owes its independence to the protection of the United States, Egypt to an agreement with England, while Abyssinia owes its freedom from control to its own fighting men, and geography.

The two continents in the southern hemisphere are twins by virtue of their general outline. If Abyssinia were lifted out of the Dark Continent and dropped in relatively the same position in South America, it would form a great cape jutting off the northeast extremity of Brazil. Although the southern limits of this African state are within 300 miles of the equator and its capital is in the same latitude as the Canal zone, its climate is not tropical but similar to the American or English summer season.

Knighthood in Abyssinia.

Cervantes poked fun at the dying feudal system with all its trappings of knighthood in his great work "Don Quixote." Abyssinia today awaits a Cervantes to write a story of its feudal customs, that may easily possess all the humor of "Don Quixote."

Let us sit by the side of the road while an Abyssinian knight marches on to battle. Here he comes, a big, broad-shouldered black native, whose features are more Semitic than negroid. He struts down the trail, and well he may, for he carries nothing. A scant piece of dirty calico about his waist and thighs is his campaign coat. His wolly hair shines like that of a freshly barbered beau of an American town, but his tonsorial aids are not so attractive to the nose, for the Ethiopian fighting man rubs rancid butter on his head to make his hair glisten and protect him from the sun. Behind him comes his Sancho Panza, a black negro squire who does not even gain the state of Don Quixote's able assistant because he is a slave. But this slave is more than a squire; he is a walking arsenal. In submissive silence he carries the heavy matchlock rifle of his lord and knight. And around his waist ammunition belts, fortunately without many cartridges. He also bends under a load of knives, a spear, a shield, perhaps a primitive sling, and a pack containing native bread and other food for the noble knight. They pass and disappear down the trail behind a wild coffee bush. Thus the black Don Quixote and his trusted squire enter the lists of battle, for knighthood of a fashion still flourishes in Abyssinia.

One traveler through the country said that he believed there were more slaves in its capital, Adis Abeba, than there were freemen. Servants of Europeans living in the country have their own slaves, and sometimes it is impossible for Americans or other foreigners to keep from owning slaves, because if a slave happens to be given to a resident of the country, there is no known method by which he may be emancipated. If he is set free he is subject to capture and enslavement by someone else.

Slavery Is Flourishing.

In fact, so many of the people of the outlying districts have been captured, chained together and taken in droves into the great slave market at Jimma, that it is possible to march for mile after mile, day after day, through a once flourishing agricultural district without seeing a man, woman or child.

Slaves are mainly captured from among the subject races in territory bordering on Egypt which was conquered by the famous King Menelik and his predecessor. Hundreds of villages of Shangallas, as this strongly negroid type is called, have been emptied by the slave traders. So complete has been the reduction of this territory that certain traders, according to information emanating from the dark continent, went into British territory on their man hunts.

Although practically every map to be found will show the name Abyssinia in strong black-faced type across a large section of northeast Africa, officially there is no such district and no such nation. The word Abyssinia means "mixed," and was applied to the heterogeneous population of this plateau by the Arabians. In all state documents Abyssinia is called Ethiopia and the natives Ethiopians. The estimate of the Arabians is relatively true, some authorities estimating that the true Abyssinian Christmas number only 3,000,000, less than one-third of the total population. There are a large number of tribesmen called Somals and Gallas, most of whom are Moslems. There are also many Falashas, said to be Jews. The Shangallas, most negroid of all the tribes, are pagans. The Abyssinians compose the office-holding and dominant population. They subscribe to the Coptic Christian church, whose Rome is ancient Cairo on the Nile.

Raw Meat a Delicacy.

Old-time circuses were never complete without a side show barker who shouted out an introduction to "Bosco, the dog-faced boy—he eats raw-w-w meat—just inside the tent!" To the Anglo-Saxon mind eating raw meat is only worse than eating horse-flesh or cat-flesh. Not so to the Abyssinian. Raw meat is a treat to him—a delicacy to be indulged on feast days.

Other customs of the country are equally strange and some equally unlovely from the point of view of civilized nations. In one section it is fashionable for women to pierce their ear lobes and insert blocks, gradually enlarging the opening to as great a diameter as the lobe can be stretched. They do the same thing to their lower lip. Abyssinians pay but little attention to New Testament injunctions. Instead they follow the old Mosaic law of an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth. It is not uncommon to amputate a hand or a foot of a detected thief.

Airplanes and epidemics are regarded as evils of the same magnitude by the native minister of war. Smoking is practically nonexistent, one king having rather successfully enforced the prohibition law by cutting off the lips of those caught using the weed. Bars of salt and cartridges are the currency of the Abyssinians, salt being regarded as very precious. The natives say of the spendthrift, "He eats salt." Curiously enough, they have a practice that is modern with civilization, the taking of finger prints. Very few natives can read or write, so a shipper will have the bill of goods for a caravan prepared for him and sign it, not with an X but with his finger print.

DAIRY

Fit Methods to Follow in Production of Cream

Since at the present time, our farmers who are milking a few good dairy cows, are generally better fixed, financially, than those following almost any other line, it seems that we should pay particular attention to the handling of the product, that it may be put on the market in the best condition possible and thereby bring the biggest returns.

Methods which will aid in producing a good product:

Keep the barn and cows clean. Remove manure from stable twice daily. Wipe udder and flanks with a damp cloth, before milking.

Milk with dry hands, into a small top milk pail.

Separate while warm, to insure less waste in the skimmilk.

Wash separator thoroughly after each separation. Use a brush rather than a rag. First use warm water and washing powder, then scald all parts thoroughly.

Do not separate into vessel containing the cooled cream. Cool freshly separated cream before adding it to previous skimming.

Stir cream thoroughly every time a fresh supply is added, using a stirrer manufactured for the purpose.

A cooling tank should be on every farm. Run the water pumped for live stock through the cream tank and then into the stock tank.

Keep cooled cream in a sanitary place which is cool, sanitary, free from odors and well aired.

Cream should be delivered to market at least three times a week in summer and twice in winter.

Cream should not be allowed to freeze.—L. K. Crowe, assistant professor, animal husbandry, Colorado Agricultural college.

Brass Letters on Cans Will Prevent Much Loss

When the owner's initials or number is painted on his cream cans, they have to be remarked frequently, as the marks become dim, due to washing and shipping. In order to avoid this I solder brass letters to the sloping part of the can, just below the neck, writes W. R. Taylor of Missouri in the Rural New Yorker. Copper or brass letters can usually be purchased at the variety stores, but if not to be obtained they can be cut from a piece of sheet brass or copper with a pair of tinner's shears and a narrow chisel. Letters or figures made of aluminum will not do, as they are very difficult to solder. Cans so marked can always be easily identified and thus loss will be prevented. The lids should be stenciled or marked to correspond.

Dairy Cow Is Necessity, Claims Florida Expert

"As feed prices continue to soar, and the price of land increases, so will the dairy cow replace to a very large extent the beef steer, the sheep, and the pig as a producer of human food," says John M. Scott of the University of Florida experiment station. "And about the only rival the dairy cow has is the busy hen."

The dairy cow and the hen are the only two farm animals that produce good, nourishing food day after day, when properly cared for. They provide foods that are indispensable in the home.

"What is home without milk and eggs?" asks Mr. Scott. These items enter so largely into the preparation of food for the family, the cow meaning life itself to thousands of children.

"We owe the cow and the hen a debt that can be paid only by giving them the very best of care that they may produce the maximum amount of food," says Mr. Scott. And neither of them are now receiving the attention that will be theirs when their full value is realized.

Cow Is Highly Nervous and Is Easily Excited

The cow is a highly-strung nervous organism and easily excited, shocked or affected in one way or another to the resultant lessening of her milk flow. Turning her out on a cold, windy or wet day to drink ice-cold water causes a serious shrink in milk production. Weigh the milk night and morning, without fail, every day of the year and watch the record. That tells the story of such shrinks.

"Miss America" Declares Tanlac Wonderful Health Giving Tonic

Miss Mary Katherine Campbell, twice proclaimed "Miss America," has taken TANLAC and endorses it in a statement recently given to the women of America. In this statement, Miss America declares that Good Health is the basis of all Beauty, and advises women who would be beautiful to "first find good health."

Her complete statement as given is as follows: "I consider it a great privilege to be able to tell the thousands of women everywhere what a great tonic TANLAC is. Health is the basis of all beauty. Without good health, one is apt to be rundown, nervous, underweight, high-strung, anemic. Indigestion drives the roses from a woman's cheeks and robs her of that radiant quality of womanhood that is real beauty.

"I have taken TANLAC and I do not hesitate to say that it is a wonderful health-giving tonic. It has brought relief and good health to many women, and with good health one may have a measure of beauty that will overcome shortcomings in face and figure.

"Rosy cheeks, sparkling eyes, a well-rounded figure, a lovable disposition, go hand in hand with good health. To those searching for beauty, I would say—'First of all, Find Good Health.' The TANLAC treatment has proven itself a boon to womankind, and I recommend it."

Miss Campbell has written a booklet on Health and Beauty which may be secured by filling out the coupon below.

Farmers and Factories Build Communities~

Farmers are community builders. They produce wealth from the soil. When farmers are prosperous, people in other lines of business prosper and the whole community is benefited.

Factories are community builders also. Since a great part of their output is usually sold in other sections of the country, factories bring lots of money into the communities in which they are located. They furnish employment to many people; and their payrolls circulate among the tradesmen, artisans, and professional men, bringing increased prosperity to all.

The Louisvillle & Nashville Railroad, thru its Immigration & Industrial Department, has for years been assisting in community building in this territory by getting industrious and desirable farmers from other sections of the country to locate somewhere along or near its tracks; and by means of personal instruction in the field and the issuing of special bulletins on the growing of certain crops, etc., has helped these newcomers to achieve success.

Thru the efforts of this Department, many factories have been located along this railroad and much wealth has thus been added to this territory.

An extensive campaign of advertising, setting forth the advantages of this territory for farmers and factories is now being carried by the L. & N. in farm and industrial magazines with national circulation.

The work of its Immigration & Industrial Department is but one example of the L. & N.'s constant effort to further the progress and prosperity of the wonderful Southland territory served by the L. & N. Railroad.

ATTEST:

A. W. Tucker, J. F. McGraw, J. E. Adams, Directors.

F. E. Boyd says: "Potash is most profitable ingredient in fertilizer mixtures for cotton, in Alabama."

IN an article in BETTER CROPS, F. E. Boyd, Agronomist of the Alabama Extension Service, gives figures that prove potash profitable.

He says:

The principal field crop in Alabama is cotton. During the 1923 season, 76.7 per cent of all the fertilizers used were applied to this crop. When a bale of cotton (seed, lint and stalk) is produced on a given area of land, it removes from the soil 28 pounds of phosphoric acid, 75 pounds of nitrogen and 54 pounds of potash. Either the soil must give up these fertilizer elements or they must be supplied in commercial form. The average acre of land devoted to cotton in Alabama contains in the surface seven inches less than 1,000 pounds of phosphoric acid and even less nitrogen. The potash content of this land varies from about 2,500 pounds in the Coastal Plain region to approximately 25,000 pounds per acre seven inches in the heavy clay lands of east and north Alabama.

With the above analyses figures as a basis, farmers have been led to believe that, when buying fertilizer ingredients for cotton, it was not necessary to include any potash for the clay lands of the northeast two-fifths of Alabama, and not much, if any, on lands with red subsoils throughout the Coastal Plain section of the state.

Since it is generally conceded by all farmers that phosphoric acid and nitrogen are essential for the normal development of the cotton plant, and that potash, being present in such abundant quantities in most soils, is not so essential and can be easily left out of the mixture, it shall be the purpose of the remainder of this discussion to show what potassic fertilizers have done and are capable of doing for the farmers of Alabama.

The Alabama Experiment Station, in cooperation with 143 "dirt" farmers representing every soil division in the state, conducted from 1911 to 1922 more than 200 regular cotton fertilizer tests. These tests covered a period of 12 years and included years before and after the appearance of the boll-weevil, with high and low rainfall and other conditions that might be expected during any 12-year period.

Based on these tests, the Alabama Station recommends for cotton a minimum application of 200 pounds acid phosphate, 100 pounds nitrate of soda and 100 to 200 pounds of kainit, or its equivalent, per acre. At this rate per acre, and at the present cash price of fertilizer materials, the total cost of fertilizers for 20 acres of cotton is $95.00 or $108.00, depending on the amount of potash used. Kainit is valued at $13.00 per ton and seed cotton at 9 cents per pound.

On the gray lands with yellow subsoils of southeast Alabama, one and two tons of kainit on 20 acres increased the yield of seed cotton 1,460 and 3,060 pounds, valued at $131.40 and $275.40, respectively. Compare these values with the total cost of all fertilizers for 20 acres. On Coastal Plain soils with red subsoils, one ton of kainit increased the yield of seed cotton 1,280 pounds, worth $115.00, which is more than enough to pay for all fertilizers applied to 20 acres. Additional kainit did not produce profitable increase.

The Black Belt of lime lands of middle Alabama show a response of 1,120 pounds additional seed cotton for one ton of kainit and 1,640 pounds for two tons of kainit. At 9 cents per pound the above increases more than pay for all acid phosphate, nitrate of soda and kainit applied to 20 acres.

There are two divisions of soil in Alabama (Piedmont and Appalachian Plateaus) on which potash does not increase the yield sufficiently to pay for all fertilizers applied, but on these divisions the return per dollar invested in potash is $2.91 and $5.68, respectively, for an application of one ton of kainit to 20 acres. Extra kainit was not profitable.

In north Alabama throughout the Limestone Valley region, there are isolated areas of gray and yellow chert-free lands with yellow subsoils on which potash gives largest returns in the state. One ton of kainit increased the yield 2,240 pounds seed cotton, and two tons kainit 3,200 pounds seed cotton per 20 acres. These yields are worth $219.60 and $288.00, respectively. The return per dollar invested is $16.09 and $11.08, respectively. The heavy red clay lands found in the Limestone Valley region of north Alabama, according to the farmers of that section, do not need commercial potash, but the accurate tests show that one ton of kainit, costing $13.00, increased the yield of seed cotton 1,300 pounds, worth $117.00.

There are other results from various subdivisions in line with data given above. In studying the returns per dollar invested in the various fertilizer materials, it was found that the profit from potash was greater than from either phosphoric acid or nitrogen, with the exception of the Piedmont Plateau soils.

Potash is very essential, and the most profitable ingredient in fertilizer mixtures for cotton in Alabama. Apply 65 cents' worth of potash per acre and it will make enough additional cotton to pay for all the fertilizer materials added, except on the two soils noted above.

If you buy mixed fertilizer insist on a high potash content. It pays!

Your dealer has Genuine German Potash salts in stock, either in the form of mixed fertilizer or in 200-pound sacks.

Calcis Citizens Order Farm Terracing Level

As a result of Mr. Lauderdale's visit to Calcis where he gave a demonstration in terracing Tuesday, the citizens of that community, placed through him an order for a farm terracing level to be used in an energetic campaigh for improving the lands in that community. This makes four such levels that have been ordered since Mr. Lauderdale began his work a month ago.

FAITHFUL MINISTER CALLED BY DEATH

Rev. C. S. O'Hara, for many years one of the most active ministers in Shelby county, and one of the best known citizens, died Tuesday morning at ten o'clock at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Falkner, in Ensley.

Mr. O'Hara had not been well for some weeks, but his illness was not thought to be serious and his death came unexpectedly.

Mr. O'Hara was 79 years old, he was born and reared in Shelby county and made his home here continuously until about 10 years ago. He was for over 30 years the clerk of the Shelby Baptist Association and served a large number of churches in this and adjoining counties, his service in the ministry covering a perior of 55 years. He was universally beloved and is regarded as one of the most useful men the county has ever produced.

Mr. O'Hara served for two terms as tax collector of Shelby county. He is the last of three brothers all of whom died within the past 8 months. He is survived by four sons, one daughter and a large number of other relatives. Mrs. J. B. Pitts of Columbiana and Mrs. J. N. Wyatt of Siluria are his nieces.

Funeral services were held in Ensley and the remains brought to Columbiana Thursday for interment. in the local cemetery.

VINCENT BANK GIVES TERRACING LEVEL

Mr. J. F. McGraw, chairman of the Board of Revenue, and director of the Citizen's State Bank at Vincent informs the County Agent that the Vincent Bank has agreed to buy a farm terracing level.

The County Agent is very much pleased with the fine co-operative spirit manifested by Mr. McGraw and others.

This level, like those purchased by other banks, will be kept at the bank and loaned out to farmers in that vicinity. This is a splendid opportunity for terracing the farms, and should be taken advantage of.

Judge Riddle Proposes Farmers' Prize List

Realizing the importance of a better agriculture in Shelby county, some of the business men have expressed their interest in a very substantial way. There is an opportunity to develop the agricultural industry and make Shelby county one of the leading counties in the state in this regarad.

When our business men stand ready to assist in every way possible, it is certainly up to us to join hands and bring about the development of their ideals.

Certain banks of the county, as they have had the opportunity, have already shown a substantial interest in the farmers of the various sections by purchasing farm levels to be used in terracing the land. in order that soil fertility may be maintained.

Judge L. B. Riddle has proposed that prizes be offered as follows: For the largest hog under one year old; For the best yield of corn per acre; For the largest number of bushels of sweet potatoes per acre; For the largest number of cans of tomatoes from ⅛ of an acre For the best poultry showing; For the highest yield of milk from 2 cows, over 6 month's period. This prize list to be arranged by a special committee.

Judge Riddle offers to head this prize list with $25, and feels that other business men will be glad of the opportunity to contribute to such a cause. With a fine spirit of co-operation and hearty support like this, we see great things ahead for Shelby county in an agricultural way.

"It is not the work of one man
That brings us to the goal
But the everlasting team work
Of every bloomin' soul."

SEVEN MEN 5 STILLS TWO CARS IN 2 DAYS

Sheriff Falkner and Deputies Falkner, Crumpton and W. J. Dennis,, assisted by State Officer Gardner and Federal Agent J. W. Adkins, had two exceedingly busy days Saturday and Sunday, and as a result of their activities have to their credit the arrest of seven men charged with violating the prohibition laws, the capture of five distilling outfits, and the seizure of two Ford cars. Practically all this work was done in the neighborhood of Pelham.

On Saturday the officers captured a 50-gallon copper still and poured out 100 gallons of beer. The still was located 3 miles east of Pelham and was being operated by one man who made his escape. Four miles east of Pelham they captured another outfit of 300 gallons capacai'e and poured out 40 barrels of beer. The same day they captured a 400-gallon box still 7 miles north east of Pelham taking 32 barrels of beer and 15 gallons of liquor, Warsaw Bryant who was at work at the still was placed under arrest.

On Sunday the officers captured two stills in the same pit, one 200 gallon capacity and the other of 100 gallons located 3 miles east of Pelham. They also took 15 barrels of beer and about 5 gallons of liquor. The same day they captured two Ford cars, each carrying a small quantity of liquor and with each car arrested three men. C. W. McLeod, Bill Creamer, Wm. Brogdon J. W. Connell, R. G. Collins and Walter A. Jones.

On the 23rd the officers arrested James Ruffin, a negro, who had in his possession, two suit cases, containing 7 gallons of liquor.

Other recent activities of the officers in other parts of the county have not been reported. In Beat 2, they captured a 25-gallon copper still with complete outfit; in another raid they took a large new still that had never been put into operation with 15 barrels, and three 750-gallon vats of beer, a tent and a camp cooking outfit. On the same day they took 20 barrels on a site where a still was being put up.

"Contempt For Law and Enlightened Citizenship Do Not Co-Exist."

A clear and forceful charge was delivered to the grand jury Monday morning by Judge E. S. Lyman after that body had been organized with Richard M. Borum, of Harpersville, serving as foreman.

After instructing the jury as to its duties and obligations Judge Lyman spoke emphatically of conditions tn the county that result from the violation of the prohibition laws and referred to the fact that recent tragedies costing the lives of four citizens, were closely connected with such violations. "But for the liquor traffic, these men would be living today," he said.

"There is no remedy for this intolerable condition," Judge Lyman declared, "save through the means the law has provided, and I charge you to stop at nothing short of your full duty to end this disgraceful situation we now occupy."

"It is one of the not understandable things to me," he continued, "that many of our citizens who believe in the proper enforcement of all other laws, not only wink at and encourage, but actually engage in ,this worst of all traffics. They cannot, I fear, much longer retain their reputations as good citizens and occupy their present attitude, the most dangerous, both to society and to themselves that they could assume. Contempt for law and enlightened citizenship do not co-exist—one or the other must triumph."

Sheriff Falkner was commended for his faithful service in these words: "Bad as the condition in our county now is, it is not as bad as it has been, owing to the diligence, the activity, the fearlessness and the integrity of our sheriff, whom it gives me peculiar pleasure to commend, along with his faithful deputies.

The recent mutiny of convicts at Aldrich mines was dicussed at length and the jury charged as to careful investigation to be made of that occurence.

Following the judge's charge the jury entered at once upon its duties and during the remainder of the day examined a number of witnesses, including officers of the state convict department, officials and employes of the mining company and a number of the convicts who are charged with being responsible for the mutiny that resulted in damage to the property of the mines amounting to $30,000.

PRETTY CAPS AND JACKETS; HEAVY KNITTED CREPE DRESS

IT IS always carnival time in the realm of pretty furbelows. Here is where designers may turn their fancies loose for gay rioting and then mirror their pretty antics and capers in all those feminine belongings that are created to be more or less useful but always ornamental. Breakfast caps and negligees belong in this decorative throng—and therefore have far more license in styles than garments worn outside the home.

But the average woman requires some practical qualities along with gay frivolity in things to be worn in the bosom of her family. The breakfast-time outfit shown here is the sort that will meet her requirements. The short coat or jacket is made of crepe de chine with a gathered panel at the front of net-top lace. This makes a fine, soft background for a decoration of satin ribbon in contrasting color, placed across the panel, below the bust line, and falling at the sides in a loop and end. A small spray of little silk roses, posed over the ribbon, proves itself the best of all finishing touches. Ribbon and georgette crepe are combined in a pretty drapery to finish the sleeves.

Breakfast Cap and Negligee.

Cotton voile in the plain and figured patterns makes delightful little coats of this kind and there are many other dainty and gay fabrics that are suited to them.

The cap shown requires light satin ribbon laid in fine plaits for the crown and side band and narrow lace for frills. The gathered lace makes a small rosette for the center of the crown and edges the band. A narrow satin ribbon is laid about the band and at each side there are rosettes which are fashioned from ruffles of the narrower ribbon and of lace, centered with small silk flowers and outlined with swansdown.

This swansdown border and others made of ostrich or marabout feathers, are about the last word in trimmings for caps and negligees. They are used in white or pale tints of the light colors liked for negligees.

If, among milady's frocks, there be not counted a knitted dress or two, it is time to reason why. Certain it is that, once having glimpsed the exquisite creations heralded as winter-resort modes, the desire for possession will be deeply implanted in the heart of every woman who loves and appreciates pretty clothes. Few there are who will be able to resist the allurements of one-piece or two-piece, and even three-piece dresses knitted of yarns, zephyrs, fiber and silk, patterned so artfully in color harmonies so gorgeous, that most extravagant word pictures fail to do them justice.

Agreed, that before the season is over, or rather is scarcely begun, most of us will be coveting a knitted frock, the problem of kind, color and cost presents itself. In regard to the latter here is some heartening news: Never, in all the seasons past, has it been possible to buy such attractive knitted models for so little money. Of course one may run up into as many figures as one may wish, for knitted fashions are tuned to every pocketbook.

Color plus clever styling feature present-day knitted dresses. Per example, the model of heavy knitted crepe pictured herewith is right up to the moment in every style detail. Its coloring is wonderfully effective, being tan interworked with rose in an unusual open stitch at vantage points in the waist portion and at the hem of the skirt. There is a subtle expression of up-to-dateness in the bateau neck, with its narrow collar, in its slender silhouette, and in the narrow tie cord which fastens about the hipline in a series of loops and ends.

Latest Style in Knitted Dress.

Among new models offered, a particularly welcome idea is that of two-piece knitted suits which comprise skirt and separate coat. These adroitly introduce color and clever treatment of stripes and checks. Gray, patterned with white; henna with amber; navy with oriental shades, are a few of the happy combinations available.

BONUS BILL DEAD FOR THE PRESENT

WASHINGTON OPINION IS THAT DEMAND FOR TAX REDUCTION KILLS IT THIS SESSION.

By EDWARD B. CLARK

Washington.—Preponderance of opinion in Washington seems to have it today that the bonus bill is dead past resurrection for this session at least.

Scores of senators and representatives who have believed that the fairly quick passage of a bonus measure was necessary because of the seeming public demand, now appear to have changed their minds. The American people almost en masse have petitioned congress, individually and collectively, for tax reduction, and as congress is not at all certain that tax reduction can be accomplished if bonus legislation is to become a fact, it looks as if the hopes of the ex-service men for favorable action on either measure at this session are not to bear ripened fruit.

It is not altogether certain, apparently, that even tax reduction can be accomplished. Certain it is that the road ahead of it is like those rough roads in Flanders which led to the front line trenches where the fighting was the hardest. In congress there are many minds about the form which tax reduction should take. A bill is certain to go through the lower house, or virtually certain so to do, but it is likely to be so changed from its original form by amendments that it will bear little resemblance to the Mellon plan and therefore it may meet with the disapproval of the President, even if it shall survive in the senate.

Compromise Is Necessary.

It is a bromide that there is nothing certain but death and taxes. The saying can be varied a little to say that there is nothing certain about taxation in its present aspect. It must be understood that in the majority party in the house of representatives there are 40 or 50 members who do not approve of the Mellon plan as it has been presented. In order to secure the votes of this faction the Republican leaders will find it necessary to compromise with their initial endeavors and to insert in the bill some things of which they do not approve and which it is known the administration does not approve.

There is only one hope which the friends of the Mellon plan in congress have that they can accomplish what they wish. This hope is based on the possibility that in the Democratic ranks there may be found a sufficient number of members who think the Mellon plan the only sound one and who will be willing to support the endeavor to enact it into law.

Naturally enough, the Republicans do not care to have the Democratic support unless it is absolutely necessary to offset defections in their own ranks. The Republicans want tax reduction legislation to be presented to the country as a purely Republican achievement. They cannot so present it unless they change the present form of the bill to suit those Republicans who do not agree with the majority of their party that the Mellon plan is all that it should be.

The house will pass the tax reduction bill under a rule limiting debate. It definitely will be known just when the bill is to come to a vote, but it cannot definitely be known until the last day of the bill's consideration in the house just how many amendments must be accepted to bring into line the opponents of the measure as it stands.

Likely to Be Long in the Senate.

Over in the senate it will be impossible to fix the date for the passage or rejection of the bill. Every major revenue measure which ever has been presented to the senate has taken weeks and sometimes months, many months, of consideration and debate before reaching the hour of the voting.

The opposition to certain features of the Mellon plan on the part of some of the Republicans of the senate is more bitter in its nature than the antagonism which has been shown thus far in the house of representatives. The senators in antagonism know the advantage which comes to them through ability to prolong debate, to tire out the legislators and thus to force compromises to their liking. It looks today as if, when the tax measure finally reaches the day when it can be presented to the President for signature or the veto, it will have lost much of its original appearance and will be of such patchwork quality that it will receive the frown rather than the smile of Calvin Coolidge.

If a tax bill which promises some kind of real reduction in taxes finally shall be passed and approved by the President, it is pretty well known that instantly the majority in house and senate will start to study the financial situation of the government in an attempt to find out whether it will be possible, under the diminished revenue, to pass a bonus bill. It is certain that the political leaders do not think that it will be good policy to kill all hope that a bonus measure may be a legislative fact of the next session.

There are scores of senators and representatives who have made personal pledges to vote for a bonus bill. They will not have to break their pledges, of course, unless the bill is presented to them for a vote.

Watching Butler in Philadelphia.

Service men in Washington are watching with keen-eyed interest the outcome of the efforts of Brig. Gen. Smedley D. Butler, one of Uncle Sam's marines, to change the condition of things in "corrupt and contented" Philadelphia.

There are some service friends of the general here who think that perhaps he is talking a bit too much, but at the present writing his work is outstripping his talk and therefore the criticism may pass. General Butler certainly has done things in the past and no one seems to believe that his career of doing is ended.

Service men before this have tried their hand at police work in American cities. There was, notably, the case of General Bingham, who was commissioner of police in New York under McClellan's administration. General Bingham was not spectacular, but he managed to do some good work and the proof that it was good was found in the opposition which he met with from the politicians.

Butler, the marine, always has been spectacular, but not in a studied way. As a fighter he was a whirlwind spectacle and if any one doubts the nature of his fighting he can read the record of it from the ribbons on the blouse of his marine uniform. He not only has the Distinguished Service Medal but the Medal of Honor for that kind of personal gallantry which is above the call of duty.

Some folks wonder why the Quaker body has not dropped Butler from its membership. He writes his religion down as that of a Quaker and when he goes to church he attends the "Friends' Meeting." He is not, however, a turn-the-other-cheek kind of a religionist. By the way, Smedley D. Butler, fighter, not only is a Quaker but his middle name is Darling. Incongruity is said to be humor's chief ingredient.

Hartigan's Job in Chicago.

Years ago in Chicago the mayor appointed a West Pointer, Thomas L. Hartigan, to the position of drill instructor of the police force. Everybody in the city knew "Tom," who now is a flourishing lawyer in the Philippine Islands where he went years ago as a major of the Thirtieth infantry. Major Hartigan had nothing to do under his appointment with the cleaning up of vice conditions in the Lake City. His duties were those of a drill master only and he had some time of it.

In the old Second armory, on the lake front he assembled in drill squads form the policemen of Chicago of all ages in their turns. Many of them were "bepaunched." The drill master was trim, for in that day he had the cadet figure.

The sight of the 300-pounder and worse coppers doing "second exercise" in a vain attempt to put the palms of their hands on the floor without bending their knees was too much for the risibilities of the citizens of Chicago.

The result was that "Major Tom" modified his drilling endeavors somewhat, but history records that despite earnest and conscientious effort he never succeeded in giving the members of the police force of Chicago the wasp-like waists and flat backs which mark the physical makeup of the cadets of Uncle Sam's great school.

In those old Chicago days Peter Finley Dunne, otherwise "Mr. Dooley," had given the name "Casey" to the entire police force of Chicago. Mr. Dooley, although recollection has it he was not Mr. Dooley then, had a part hand in the work of inducing the Chicago authorities to come to the conclusion that "continue the motion second exercises" were not a necessity for the physical or mental well being of Casey who a thousand strong had been pounding beat or warming the station house chairs for, lo, these many years.

Army Discipline in Panama.

The finest bit of army discipline that ever was exercised over civilians was that instituted on the Isthmus of Panama when the army took hold of the digging operations after civilians had reneged on the job.

There were thousands upon thousands of civilians on the isthmus and they did not want any army discipline. They were led into it by what the father who licked his son on a slowly ascending scale of severity called "easy gradations." The civilians were led rather than ordered into keeping regular hours, into bathing frequently, into the doing of various other things with which they had not been at all familiar. Soon they found out that what they were doing made for health and comfort, and they went along obeying the strict letter of the suggestion and not one of the thousands ever knew that in fact he had been under what some people call the hard hand of army discipline.

Presents Color Paradox

Travelers seem to have found an emphatic paradox in the life of India. One writer has expressed it: "When the grays and browns of the country side and complexion seem most deadly in their monotony the glint of copper and brass, the shine of silver anklets, the shimmer of silk and the glitter of nose beads and earrings breaks in on one's consciousness as insistently as reveille in the midst of a deep sleep," and he adds, "like a circus poster on a mud wall."

The Brown Mouse

By HERBERT QUICK

"A BROWN MOUSE"

SYNOPSIS—Jennie Woodruff refuses to marry Jim Irwin, young farm hand, because of his financial condition and poor prospects. He is intellectually above his station, and has advanced ideas concerning the possibilities of school teaching and farming, for which he is ridiculed by many. In short, Jim is an off ox. He flocks by himself and reads books and has a philosophy of his own. But there are latent powers in him unsuspected even by himself and Opportunity comes knocking at his door. Jim is nominated for school teacher, as a joke.

The president followed usage when he said: "If there's no objection, it will be so ordered. Prepare the ballots for a vote on the election of teacher, Mr. Secretary."

There was no surprise in view of the nomination of Jim Irwin by the blarneying Bonner when the Secretary smoothed out the first ballot, and read: "James E. Irwin, one." But when the next slip came forth, "James E. Irwin, two," the board of directors of the Woodruff Independent district were stunned at the slowly dawning knowledge that they had made an election! Before they had rallied, the secretary drew from the box the third and last ballot, and read, "James E. Irwin, three."

President Bronson choked as he announced the result—choked and stammered, and made very hard weather of it, but he went through with the motion, as we all run in our grooves.

"The ballot having shown the unanimous election of James E. Irwin, I declare him elected."

He dropped into his chair, while the secretary, a very methodical man, drew from his portfolio a contract duly drawn up save the name and signature. This he calmly filled out, and passed over to the president, pointing to the dotted line. Mr. Bronson would have signed his own death-warrant at that moment, not to mention a perfectly legal document, and signed with Peterson and Bonner looking on stonily. The secretary signed and shoved the contract over to Jim Irwin.

"Sign there," he said.

Jim looked it over, saw the other signatures, and felt an impulse to dodge the whole thing. Then he thought of Jennie Woodruff's "Humph!"—and he signed!

"Move we adjourn," said Peterson.

"No 'bjection 'tis so ordered!" said Mr. Bronson.

The secretary and Jim went out, while the directors waited.

"What the Billy—" began Bonner, and finished lamely! "What for did you vote for the dub, Ez?"

"I voted for him," replied Bronson, "because he fought for my boy this afternoon. I didn't want it stuck into him too hard. I wanted him to have one vote."

"An' I wanted him to have wan vote, too," said Bonner. "I thought mesilf the only dang fool on the board—an' he made a spache that airned wan vote—but f'r the love of hivin, that dub f'r a teacher! What come over you, Haakon—you voted f'r him, too!"

"Ay vanted him to have one wote, too," said Peterson.

And in this wise, Jim became the teacher in the Woodruff district—all on account of Jennie Woodruff's "Humph!"

CHAPTER III

What Is a Brown Mouse?

Immediately upon the accidental election of Jim Irwin to the position of teacher of the Woodruff school, he developed habits somewhat like a ghost's or a bandit's. That is, he walked of nights and on rainy days.

On fine days, he worked in Colonel Woodruff's fields as of yore. Jim's salary was to be just $360 for nine months' work in the Woodruff school, and he was to find himself—and his mother. Therefore, he had to indulge in his loose habits of night walking and roaming about after hours only, or on holidays and in foul weather.

The Simms family, being from the "mountings" of Tennessee, were rather startled one night, when Jim Irwin, homely, stooped and errandless, silently appeared in their family circle about the front door. They had lived where it was the custom to give a whoop from the big road before one passed through the palin's and up to the house. Otherwise, how was one to know whether the visitor was friend or foe?

From force of habit, Old Man Simms started for his gun-rack at Jim's appearance, but the Lincolnian smile and the low slow speech, so much like his own in some respects, ended that.

"Stranger," said Mr. Simms, after greetings had been exchanged, "you're right welcome, but in my kentry you'd find it dangersome to walk in thisaway."

"How so?" queried Jim Irwin.

"You'd more'n likely git shot up some," replied Mr. Simms, "onless you whooped from the big road."

"I didn't know that," replied Jim. "I'm ignorant of the customs of other countries. Would you rather I'd whoop from the big road—nobody else will."

"I reckon," replied Mr. Simms, "that we-all will have to accommodate ourse'ves to the ways hyeh."

Evidently Jim was the Simms' first caller since they had settled on the little brushy tract whose hills and trees reminded them of their mountains. Low hills, to be sure, with only a footing of rocks where the creek had cut through, and not many trees, but down in the creek bed, with the oaks, elms and box-elders arching overhead, the Simmses could imagine themselves beside some run falling into the French Broad, or the Holston. The creek bed was a withdrawing room in which to retire from the eternal black soil and level cornfields of Iowa.

The soil was so poor, in comparison with those black uplands, that the owner of the old wood-lot could find no renter but it was better than the soil in the mountains, and suited the lonesome Simmses much more than a better farm would have done. They were not of the Iowa people anyhow, not understood, not their equals—they were "pore," and expected to stay "pore"—while the Iowa people all seemed to be either well-to-do, or expecting to become so.

Jim Irwin asked Old Man Simms about the fishing in the creek, and whether there was any duck shooting spring and fall.

"We git right smart of these little panfish," said Mr. Simms, "an' Calista done shot two butterball ducks about 'tater-plantin' time."

Calista blushed—but this stranger, so much like themselves, could not see the rosy suffusion. The allusion gave him a chance to look about him at the family. There was a boy of sixteen, a girl—the duck-shooting Calista—younger than Raymond—a girl of eleven, named Virginia, but called Jinnie—and a smaller lad who rejoiced in the name of McGeehee, but was mercifully called Buddy.

Calista squirmed for something to say. "Raymond runs a line o' traps when the fur's prime," she volunteered.

Then came a long talk on traps and trapping, shooting, hunting and the joys of the mountings—during which Jim noted the ignorance and poverty of the Simmses. The clothing of the girls was not decent according to local standards; for while Calista wore a skirt hurriedly slipped on, Jim was quite sure—and not without evidence to support his views—that she had been wearing when he arrived the same regimentals now displayed by Jinnie—a pair of ragged blue overalls. Evidently the Simmses were wearing what they had and not what they desired. The father was faded, patched, gray and earthy, and the boys looked better than the rest solely because we expect boys to be torn and patched. Mrs. Simms was invisible except as a gray blur beyond the rain-barrel, in the midst of which her pipe glowed with a regular ebb and flow of embers.

On the next rainy day Jim called again and secured the services of Raymond to help him select seed corn. He was going to teach the school next winter, and he wanted to have a seed-corn frolic the first day, instead of waiting until the last—and you had to get seed corn while it was on the stalk, if you got the best.

No Simms could refuse a favor to the fellow who was so much like themselves, and who was so greatly interested in trapping, hunting and the Tennessee mountains—so Raymond went with Jim, and with Newt Bronson and five more they selected Colonel Woodruff's seed corn for the next year, under the colonel's personal superintendence.

In the evening they looked the grain over on the Woodruff lawn, and the colonel talked about corn and corn selection. They had supper at half past six, and Jennie waited on them—having assisted her mother in the cooking. It was quite a festival.

Jim Irwin was the least conspicuous person in the gathering, but the colonel, who was a seasoned politician, observed that the farm-hand had become a fisher of men, and was angling for the souls of these boys, and their interest in the school. Jim was careful not to flush the covey, but every boy received from the next winter's teacher some confidential hint as to plans, and some suggestion that Jim was relying on the aid and comfort of that particular boy.

Newt Bronson, especially, was leaned on as a strong staff and a very present help in time of trouble. As for Raymond Simms, it was clearly best to leave him alone. All this talk of corn selection and related things was new to him, and he drank it in thirstily. He had an inestimable advantage over Newt in that he was starved, while Newt was surfeited with "advantages" for which he had no use.

"Jennie," said Colonel Woodruff, after the party had broken up, "I'm losing the best hand I ever had, and I've been sorry."

"I'm glad he's leaving you," said Jennie. "He ought to do something except work in the field for wages."

"I've had no idea he could make good as a teacher—and what is there in it if he does?"

"What has he lost if he doesn't?" rejoined Jennie. "And why can't he make good?"

"The school board's against him, for one thing," replied the colonel. "They'll fire him if they get a chance. They're the laughing-stock of the country for hiring him by mistake, and they're irritated. But after seeing him perform tonight, I wonder if he can't make good."

"If he could feel like anything but an underling, he'd succeed," said Jennie.

"That's his heredity," stated the colonel, whose live stock operations were based on heredity. "Jim's a scrub, I suppose; but he acts as if he might turn out to be a Brown Mouse."

"What do you mean, pa," scoffed Jennie—"a Brown Mouse!"

"A fellow in Edinburgh," said the colonel, "crossed the Japanese waltzing mouse with the common white mouse. Jim's peddling father was a waltzing mouse, no good except to jump from one spot to another for no good reason. Jim's mother is an albino of a woman, with all the color washed out in one way or another. Jim ought to be a mongrel, and I've always considered him one. But the Edinburgh fellow every once in a while got out of his variously-colored, waltzing and albino hybrids, a brown mouse. It wasn't a common house mouse, either, but a wild mouse unlike any he had ever seen. It ran away, and bit and gnawed and raised hob. It was what we breeders call a Mendelian segregation of genetic factors that had been in the waltzers and albinos all the time—their original wild ancestor of the woods and fields. If Jim turns out to be a brown mouse, he may be a bigger man than any of us. Anyhow, I'm for him."

"He'll have to be a big man to make anything out of the job of a country school teacher," said Jennie.

"Any job's as big as the man who holds it down," said her father.

Next day Jim received a letter from Jennie.

"Dear Jim," it ran. "'Father says you are sure to have a hard time—the school board's against you, and all that. But he added 'I'm for Jim, anyhow!' I thought you'd like to know this. Also he said, 'Any job's as big as the man who holds it down.' And I believe this also, and I'm for you, too! You are doing wonders even before the school starts in getting the pupils interested in a lot of things, which, while they don't belong to school work, will make them friends of yours. I don't see how this will help you much, but it's a fine thing, and shows your interest in them. Don't be too original. The wheel runs easiest in the beaten track. Yours, Jennie."

Jennie's caution made no impression on Jim—but he put the letter away, and every evening took it out and read the words, "I'm for you, too!" The colonel's dictum, "Any job's as big as the man who holds it down," was an Emersonian truism to Jim. It reduced all jobs to an equality, and it meant equality in intellectual and spiritual development. It didn't mean, for instance, that any job was as good as another in making it possible for a man to marry—and Jennie Woodruff's "Humph!" returned to kill and drag off her "I'm for you, too!"

CHAPTER IV

The First Day of School.

Jim Irwin was full of his Emerson's "Representative Men," and his Carlyle's "French Revolution," and the other old-fashioned, excellent, good literature which did not cost over 25 cents a volume; and he had pored long and with many thrills over the pages of Matthews' "Getting On in the World." His view of efficiency was that it is the capacity to see opportunity where others overlook it, and make the most of it.

All through his life he had had his own plans for becoming great. And all the time he was bare-footed, ill-clad and dreamed his dreams to the accompaniment of the growl of the plow cutting the roots under the brown furrow-slice, or the wooshing of the milk in the pail. At twenty-eight, he considered these dreams over.

As for this new employment, he saw no great opportunity in it. He went into the small, mean, ill-paid task as a part of the day's work, with no knowledge of the stirring of the nation for a different sort of rural school, and no suspicion that there lay in it any highway to success in life. He rather wondered why he had allowed Jennie's sneer to sting him into the course of action which put him in this new relation to his neighbors.

"Half the kids call him Jim," said Bonner.

LESSON FOR FEBRUARY 3

WHAT ISRAEL LEARNED AT SINAI

LESSON TEXT—Deut. 4:32-40.

GOLDEN TEXT—Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thine heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy might.—Deut. 6:5.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Knowing and Obeying God's Law.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Foundation of Israel's Life.

Deuteronomy, the book from which our lesson is taken, means "second law." It is a second law in the sense that it is a restatement and interpretation of the law given at Sinai, for a new generation in a new country. This new generation needed a true conception of God and also an apprehension of the wonderful grace which had selected them and made them a channel through which God's grace would flow to the world.

I. God's Unparalleled Goodness to Israel (Deut. 4:32-34).

This was shown:

1. By Speaking Audibly Out of the Midst of the Fire (vv. 32, 33). This honor conferred upon them was unique. It was unequalled. (1) In past history—"the days that are past since the day that God created man upon the earth." (2) Anywhere—"from one side of heaven unto the other." (3) In character—"there hath been no such great thing as this great thing is." (4) In story or rumor—"or hath been heard like it!" (5) In dignity and majesty—"did ever people hear the voice of God speaking out of the midst of the fire."

2. By His Marvelous Deliverance of Israel From the Egyptian Bondage (v. 34). Here, too, His grace is unique. (1) In liberation—"take him a nation from the midst of another nation." (2) In the method employed. (a) By temptations—testings, that is, plagues. (b) By signs and wonders—crossing Red sea, pillar of cloud. (c) By war (See Exod. 14:4; 15:3-10). (d) By outstretched arm—Divine interposition, such as opening the Red sea for Israel and closing it upon the Egyptians. (e) By great terrors—the death of the first born.

II. The Reason Why the Lord So Dealt With Israel (Deut. 4:35-38).

1. That They Might Know That the Lord Is Unique in the Midst of a World of Idolaters. God's aim was to establish a nation who would know Him as the only God and make this essential and blessed truth known to other nations.

2. That They Might Know His Love for Them (vv. 37, 38). He loved them for their fathers' sake and through them would make real His covenant purpose.

III. The Obligation of Israel (Deut. 4:39, 40).

They were to consider and receive in their heart the thought that the Lord was the alone God. What we think about God is revealed in our lives. The law to which obedience was to be rendered was that set forth in the Ten Commandments, as recorded in Exodus 2:1-17.

1. The first emphasizes the unity of God and enjoins the obligation of single-hearted worship and service (v. 3).

2. The second is directed against the worship of the true God under false forms.

3. The third is directed against the taking of God's name in vain; that is, in a lying, deceptive, unreal way.

4. The fourth enjoins work on six days and forbids work on the seventh.

5. The fifth rests upon the fact that parents stand to their children in the place of God—therefore enjoins obedience to them.

6. The sixth shows the sanctity of human life and that the one who murders has sinned against God, for man was created in the likeness and image of God.

7. The seventh is the butwark thrown around the home. This commandment may be broken by unclean thoughts and affections as well as by outward acts.

8. The eighth strikes at the sin of theft.

9. The ninth strikes at the sin of lying.

10. The tenth strikes at the desire for that which is unlawful to own.

Building for Eternity.

If we work upon marble, it will perish; if we work upon brass, time will efface it; if we rear temples, they will crumble into dust; but if we work upon immortal souls, if we imbue them with principles, with the just fear of God and love of fellowmen, we engrave on these tablets something which brightens all eternity.—Daniel Webster.

Keep Climbing.

The vine that has no trellis loses its beauty in the dust, and dies because it cannot climb. It is even so with the spirit of man. If it cannot climb, it dies.—Herald of Gospel Liberty.

Learning to Walk.

One must be willing to fall down in order to be able to get up and walk.—Baptist World.

An Open Gate.

Idleness is the gate of all harm.—The Gideon.

An Opportunity For Bible Study—

Every one in Columbiana who can possibly do so, should enter heartily and with entire sympathy into the work of the Bible Study Club, the first meeting of which will be held at the Baptist church tonight. Most people acknowledge readily enough that they do not know as much about the Bible as they would like to know. This Bible Study Club furnishes an opportunity to learn more about the Book and under a most favorable environment at that. It ought to add much to the pleasure of Bible study to be able to take it along with a group of one's nighbors and friends.

Bryan Favors Southern Man For President.

A good deal of interest was aroused by the recent statement of William Jennings Bryan that if he is elected as a delegate from Florida to the national Democratic convention, he will present the name of Dr. A. A. Murphree, president of the University of Florida, as a candidate for the nomination for president.

At a dinner given in his honor in New York a week ago, Mr. Bryan reiterated his intention, if he is chosen as a delegate, to present the name of Dr. Murphree, who he declared to be in every way qualified to serve as president He said: "In presenting the name of Dr. Murphree I shall have opportunity to pay a debt that I owe to the South. In three campaigns it supported me and the policies which I advocated and I hope in this convention to assist in removing the ban that for 60 years has rested on Southern statesmen."

"The south has been loyal to democracy throughout all these years and it has been loyal to the interests of the common people. The south has supported every economic reform which has been accomplished since the war and I am sure a southern man, who is in sympathy with the progressive spirit of the country, will pull more votes than a candidate from any other section."

"It's Time to Milk"

(By A. A. Lauderdale, County Agent)

Under boll weevil conditions, the farmer cannot afford to gamble on the one-crop basis, but must resort to diversified farming and rotation of crops. Right now at the beginning of the year, while other business men are taking stock, the farmer could well do the same thing, and see if it is not "time to milk."

Much of the difficulty concerning freight rates may be overcome by feeding our bulky produce to cows and shiping out the manufactured cream or butter.

Soil fertility is a serious problem in Shelby county, and dairy cows are soil builders. In addition to returning manure to the farm they require more hay and more pasture crops, including such legumes as soy beans, velvet beans, cowpeas, lespedeza, crimson clover bur clover, etc., all of which are soil builders.

We are ideally located in Shelby county for dairying, in that we can ship cream or milk to any of the following markets: Birmingham, Montgomery, Selma, Talladega, or Columbus, Geeorgia.

It is not necessary to buy pure bred cows, but start with the cows you have on hand, or buy a few good grade cows locally. Provide good patsures, give them a little more feed, and begin shipping cream. When you are shipping cream, you have a check coming in every two weeks, which furnishes ready money to buy the necessities at cash prices.

If you will take care of the dairy cow, she will take care of you. Let us follow the "milky way" not up in the air, but down on the farm. Again, I say, "It's time to milk.

"Also Time to Terrace"

Let's Terrace Shelby County.

Fall in! Every one who has ever heard assembly blown on a bugle, understand what this means, and to all others it is self explanatory, it simply means what it says, fall in! In the army this is a command to fall in line, and now I am going merely asking you to fall in line. (This includes all farmers and farm owners.)

Now, my appeal is this, let's get in line with Mr. Lauderdale, our new County Agent, in his initial move to terrace Shelby county. Now, everyone knows that Mr. Laudesdale can't do this alone. We can't sit on our back porches and say, come on Mr. Lauderdale if you wish and terrace my farm, or if you don't care to, that's all right What we want to do is to go to Mr. Lauderdale and tell him our land is washing away, that we are anxious to stop it, and that all we want him to do is to teach us how this can be done, then he will give us the remedy that fills the bill. But, listen! you had better be prepared to go to work, for Mr. Lauderdale believes in working and if you line up with him you will have to work.

Everyone knows how our soil fertility is gradually getting away from us, a part of which is supplimented by carloads of high priced commercial fertilizers. Our forefathers were not confronted with as big a problem as we are today, for as their fields washed away they could constantly take in some of the woodland, which was carefully being preserved by nature, and turn some of these old fields out for another treatment by nature. Now, today our woodlands that can be profitably cultivated are almost exhausted, almost all under cultivation, so it is up to us to preserve this soil fertility ourselves.

Now some of the things we want to do is to terrace our land and stop the washing, rotate our crops grow legume crops and do all we can to improve our land and stop this annual fertilizer bill, and also make better crops.

I notice that several of our banks are responding to Mr. Lauderdale's work by buying a farm level for community work. That is just fine, but listen, that's not enough to terrace Shelby county yet. Why not let farm community clubs of say perhaps twenty or thirty farmers and farm owners, buy one of these levels for our community service. It would cost a very small sum to each person that way, and all get the benefit of it. In my opinion a poorly constructed terrace is worse than none at all, and the human eye is not competent to do this work, so it becomes necessary for us to have one of these levels to do it accurately, and this is the best scheme I know to get them.

Calcis, Ala. H. R. Justice.

The Shelby County Farm Loan Association

The Shelby County National Farm Loan Association has now started on its sixth year, still there are a lot of people who don't seem to understand its rules and regulations all of which are set and controlled by the Farm Loan Bureau in Washington, D. C., which only has the authority which congress has given them.

MEMBERSHIP

To secure a loan from the Federal Land Bank you must be a bonafide farmer cultivating your farm personally with the help of your family or hired labor or by share croppers under your personal supervision and you should live on your farm and the principal part of your income must come from farming. There is however no objection to other legitimate business as a side line if it does not seriously interfere with your farming.

SECURITY

The Federal Land Bank insists on and must have first mortgage on the farm with reasonable fire insurance on insurable buildings. It is useless to say the titles must be perfectly clear and so shown in the abstracts. They also require lands to be ditched and hills to be terraced. Of course this applies to cultivated land only.

APPRAISALS

The Farm Loan Board says we must appraise land and recommend fifty percent of the value, also twenty percent of the insurance. After the local appraisers make their recommendations the applications are sent to the Bank and their executive committee examines them. If found correct they are returned to the secretary-treasurer for appraisal by the federal appraiser who represents the Bank. He arrives at his values as follows: First, by the general appearance of the farm, do the buildings look neat, are the fences in good shape, ditches and terraces cleaned off, is there a prosperous look about the farm. Considers the location, is it available to market, schools and churches, did it earn enough last year to keep the family up and pay interest on a loan, does the farmer look like a live one or a dead one, is there any effort being made to keep up the farm and improve it? If recently purchased what was the price paid, which is a strong factor in arriving at his valuation if purchased in the last few years.

INITIAL FEES

The association fees are set by the Farm Loan Board and all loans less than $2,000 are handled by the association at a loss. On an application for $1,000 or less the fee is $14. Above this add $3.50 or fraction for each additional $500 or fraction thereof. These fees are used to pay first the Bank's fee for title and appraisal, second the local appraiser for his services, the balance going into the general fund of the association and is used to pay directors and loan committee for their time in attending the board meetings, for taxi hire in transporting the federal appraiser to the farms, to pay the secretary-treasurer to accompany him, and to purchase stamps and stationery for the use of the association. After the loan is secured and the check arrives you pay the secretary-treasurer 50c on each $100 you have borrowed and you also must pay the local attorney his fee for verifying your abstract.

STOCK AND DIVIDEND

For every $100 you borrow the bank retains $5 as bank stock, the secretary-treasurer sends you a receipt for the same. So far the bank has paid a 6 per cent dividend annually on this stock. After deducting10 percent of this for the association, the balance is mailed to the stockholders. In 1923 they paid a 2 per cent accumulated dividend per annum for the time the loan had been in effect.

PAYMENTS

The interest is 5½% per annum you also add one percent of the principal making an annual payment of $6.50 on each $100 you borrow, this pays off the loan in 34 years. If a borrower so decides he can pay off his loan in five years or any amount so it is $25 or a multiple of same. The Bank stock is accepted as cash on the last payment on the loan. If the loan is paid off before maturity you get credit for all principal payments.

TRANSFERS

Any one having a loan can sell loan to the purchaser provided of course, the purchaser is acceptable to the Association.

OTHER ASSOCIATIONS

The Shelby County National Farm Loan Association has a charter only in Shelby county and does not wish to extend its territory because this is a co-operative institution and every borrower is to a certain exteat bound for all members of the association of which he is a member.

How much better then to be in an organization made up of home folks than one scattered over several counties the members of which are totally unknown to you. Shelby county men, do you wish to go security for them?

Should Learn a Lesson From Bad Roads.

Editor Reporter:

If we were a race of people to learn lessons from inconveniences, hardships, etc., surely the condition of our so-called roads would arouse a determination to make some roads this summer.

Nearly every road into Montevallo is impassable. It looks like we would learn that it takes more than loose dirt to make a permanent road and when there is so much gravel and chert available it is a disgrace to have the kind of makeshifts we groan over.

The best road we have goes up Spring Creek to the Montgomery pike via Dargin and the Bridge over Dry Creek is in such a state of decay it is dangerous. With just a little work we could have a fine road here. T. H. Odeneal.

VINCENT

In addition to the developments given in the Reporter last week the following may be mentioned:

McGraw Brothers have bought of Geo. W. Holmes, the large two-story brick building, which they have occupied for the past nine years.

F. A. Gorman and Son have opened up a business in the Masonic Building and as Mr. Gorman is one of our leading citizens we feel sure he will add much to the town's business.

Our farmers are a hustling bunch and are preparing to fight the boll weevil this year. We are glad to welcome Mr. Lauderdale, our new county agent, and Beat 16 will certainly back him up in his efforts. We plan to have a good attendance at the "Safe Farming meeting, Thursday.

We are very thankful for the freezes we have had. The ground was frozen deeper than the weevil could dig and possibly he is so badly done up,that he won't be so active this year.

Driving a long, low shot from the tenth tee, W. L. BAPTISTS REPORT $48,172,806 IN CASH

FORWARD MOVEMENT BRINGS IN LARGE SUM FOR MISSIONS, EDUCATION AND BENEV-OLENCES.

ASK FOR $27,000,000 MORE

This Sum Needed to Complete Campaign Quota by End of 1924—People Are Called to Prayer.

DR. L. R. SCARBOROUGH
Who Will Lead Southern Baptists in Raising $27,000,000 in 1924.

Up to December, 1923, Southern Baptists had paid in on their subscriptions to their 76 Million Campaign the sum of $48,172,806.72, it is announced by the Campaign headquarters in Nashville. Four years of the five-year period have now expired, leaving approximately $27,000,000 to be raised by December, 1924, if the original Campaign objective is to be reached.

In the hope of obtaining this amount of money for the further advancement of all the general missionary, educational and benevolent enterprises fostered by Southern Baptists, the Campaign Conservation Commission has inaugurated an intensive effort that it is expected will reach every state, district association and local church in the territory of the Southern Baptist Convention during this year.

Dr. L. R. Scarborough, who was general director of the original Campaign organization, has been asked to return to the Nashville headquarters from his home at Fort Worth for this closing year of the forward movement and give his personal attention to the direction of the special effort that will be waged for collecting the full $75,000,000 by the time the period for the program expires in December next. Dr. Scarborough, through the assistance of the various state and associational workers, will seek to enlist every Baptist in the South in some definite share in this closing year of the Campaign.

Baptists Have Big Income

While the goal that has been set for 1924 is considerably larger than any that has yet been attained by Southern Baptists in a single year Dr. O. E. Bryan, budget and stewardship director of the Campaign, announces that Southern Baptists have an annual income of at least $1,500,000,000, and he and the various state stewardship diretcors will continue their effort in enlisting the local churches in the matter of systematic and proportionate giving, with a view to developing Southern Baptists to the point that they will give according to their means, and give regularly week by week. A tenth of the Southern Baptist income, if given to the denomination, would make available for religious work each year the sum of $150,000,000.

Each State Has Had Share

Indicating the sources from which the money already collected on the Campaign has come, the following contributions by states are announced: Alabama, $2,206,071.06; Arkansas, $1,667,304.13; District of Columbia, $233.81; Florida, $796,783.73; Georgia, $4,389,440.02; Illinois, $564,416.95; Kentucky, $5,091,181.78; Louisiana, $1,195,977.19; Maryland, $599,451.11; Mississippi, $2,494,281.79; Missouri, $2,020,075.46; New Mexico, $199,325.22; North Carolina, $4,089,732.45; Oklahoma, $1,206,943.76; South Carolina, $4,002,527.60; Tennessee, $3,117,153.25; Texas, $7,320,697.61; Virginia, $5,184,003.76; and specials from all sources, $1,693,608.04.

On the basis of distribution agreed upon by the various states the following amounts have gone to the various causes co-operating in the Campaign: State missions, $8,671,105.17; home missions, $7,235,921.01; foreign missions, $11,561,473.61; Christian education, or 110 Baptist seminaries, training schools, colleges and academies $13,433,285.87; 21 Baptist hospitals $2,167,776.29; 19 Baptist orphanages $3,372,096.47; and ministerial relief $1,686,048.28.

After conference with the general missionary, educational and benevolent causes which are embraced in the Campaign, Dr. Scarborough announces that raising of $27,000,000 in 1924 will not only enable all Southern Baptist enterprises to meet all their obligations but to make large advances at home and abroad as well.

A. P. I. JOINS POWER COMPANY IN PLAN TO ELECTRIFY FARMS

THREE YEAR TEST TO PROVE FEASIBILITY BEGINS AT ONCE AT EXPENSE OF POWER COMPANY

'WILL PUT ALA. IN FRONT'—DOWELL

Experimetal Lines Will Be Built at Several Points in Alabama—Research Work to Start at Auburn Polytechnic Institute.

Auburn, Ala., Jan. 7—(Special)—Definite arrangements have been completed between the Alabama Polytechnic Institute and the Alabama Power Company whereby research work of a more comprehensive nature than ever before attempted will be conducted to find practical means and methods of supplying Southern farmers with hydro-electricity, according to announcement made today by President Spright Dowell. Sufficient funds have been appropriated by the Alabama Power Company to cover the costs of experiments over a three-year-period during which research work in electrifying agriculture will be done and practical studies will be made on farms located in different sections of Alabama.

Discussion and consideration of this project have been in progress for some time and, now that the agreement has been signed, actual work will begin immediately.

As explained by Dr. Dowell, the Alabama Power Company will furnish electrical engineers who will work in co-operation with agricultural engineers of the Experiment Station. They will determine how electric power may be delivered to the farms of Alabama, and utilized in farm homes and in farming operations to provide the same benefits enjoyed by city dwellers.

Under agreement, the Alabama Power Company will build experimental lines at points in the state, representative of agricultural sections of different types where the application of electricity to agriculture is believed to be most feasible. The investigation will be carried on under expert guidance after conditions in these communities have been studied and their needs ascertained. President Dowell has received assurance of the co-operation of the farmers which will be necessary for the success of the plan.

In conjunction with the work in rural sections, the Experiment Station here will be completely electrified and the several departments will make a careful study of the possible uses of electricity in all agricultural activities.

The work at the Experiment Station as well as that throughout the State will be under the immediate direction of the Department of Agricultural Engineering. Each department of the Experiment Station will co-operate with the Department of Agricultural Engineering in conducting the work. In the Animal Husbandry Division a study will be made of the possible use of electricity in operating feed grinders, corn shellers, hay balers, clipping machines, groomers, ice cream freezers, cream separators and all other equipment used on a live stock farm. A special study will be made of the use of electricity in operating incubators, brooders, egg graders and egg candlers on poultry farms.

The electrification of canners, dehydraters and vegetable curing machinery, sweet potato curing, spray mixers, spray pumps and fruit grading machinery will be studied by the Horticultural Department. Electricity in the operation of fertilizer mixers, ensilage cutters, seed graders, peanut pickers, gins, small grain harvesters, limestone crushers and other general farming machinery will be considered. Over one hundred uses of electricity on farms have been listed for investigation.

In commenting on this program Dr. Dowell said: "Alabama is an agricultural state and one of the main purposes of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute is to serve the farmer. This is one of the most important experimental projects undertaken by the Experiment Station. Work along this line has been done in a minor way in other states but our purpose is to make a thorough and comprehensive study which will reveal all fundamental facts involved. We want to determine how the 256,000 farmers of Alabama, as well as those in other states, can received the benefits of the use of electricity now enjoyed by the city dwellers. It places Alabama in the front rank among the states of the Union in work of this kind."

Governor Brandon issued 378 paroles during during the first year of his administration of which 25 were revoked. During the first year of Governor Kilby's administration 180 paroles were issued of which 10 were revoked.

Old Subscriber Still Likes The Reporter

When the Talladega Reporter, published at Talladega for nearly 80 years, was moved to Shelby county to become the Shelby County Reporter, it was assumed that readers of the paper in that county would not be interested in keeping up their subscriptions. The new paper was sent to those whose subscriptions were not out, but as fast as these subscriptions expired their names were dropped from the list without any effort to get them to renew.

This week, however, the Reporter had a letter from one of these old time subscribers who still wants the paper. He writes: "I enclose you all $1.00 for which renew my subscription. I like the paper all right." His name is Isaac Taylor and he is an old time darkey. He and his wife live on their little farm near Manford and the Reporter has been going into their home every week for many years. They are good citizens, industrious, honest and sincere; and they have many friends, both among the people of their own race and among the white people as well.

A few years ago when so many negroes were going north Uncle Isaac and his good wife decided they too, would make that adventure. But before completing all his preparations for the long move, Isaac called at the Reporter office in Talladega to pay up his subscription to the paper, saying that he didn't want to leave the county owing any man anything.

The Reporter under its new name and in its new home appreciates the loyalty of these old friends of the paper, and trusts that they may live many years to give us the privileege of paying our weekly visit to their home.

Federal Officer Commends Alabama Health Work:

Montgomery, Ala. January 21.—Public Health work is forging ahead faster in Alabama than in any other state, according to Surgeon General H. S. Cummings, of the U. S. Public Health Service, who stopped over in Montgomery for a short visit Thursday afternoon, on his way from Tuskegee to points in Louisiana.

He praised particularly the great strides that Alabama has made in the matter of malaria control, milk control, and county public health unit organization.

During his stay in Montgomery Surgeon General Cumming conferred with Dr. S. W. Welch, state health officer, regarding plans for the current year for co-operation between state and federal health organizations.

Increased Sales of Power Company Stock

Sales of preferred stock for the first ten days of January have totaled $350,000, according to Thomas Bragg, manager of investment department of the Alabama Power Company. Over 4,000 shares have been sold or an average of 400 shares per day. For the present outlook approximately 11,000 shares will be sold during January Investors of the state are placing surplus funds more widely than was the case a few years ago. The preferred stock of this large and constructive company combines maximum yield with safety of principal. Sales of preferred stock for this year are expected to double those for 1923. An investment in the Alabama Power Company's preferred stock is an aid in the development of the state's natural resources. The management of the investment department is glad at all times to advise with prospective investors.

Club Work Proves Highly Profitable

One thousand girls in Mississippi paid their way through high school and college last year, thru their work in poultry, canning, gardening, etc., More than 1000 community rural home department clubs have been organized in Mississpi and 20 rural community club houses have been established in the old school houses left vacant when consolidated schools were built. Last year home demonstration club products to the amount of $400,000 were sold; enough to have paid the salaries of all the employes engaged in this work.

Women are brought together in their club work and given a social contact and an interest in community life that they have never before had.

Montevallo Loses To Lincoln High

Montevallo, Alabama, January 21.—A high school game of basket ball of more than ordinary interest was played at Montevallo Saturday between Lincoln High and Montevallo High. The score stood 32 to 17 in favor of Lincoln. These two teams, with Ohatchee and Heflin, conntitute the upper half of the Fourth District, from which the winning team will be selected to play at the Montevallo Tournament on February 22. Montevallo and Lincoln will meet again at Lincoln next Saturday. If Lincoln wins then, she will play the winning team from Ohatchee and Heflin for the honors of attending the Tournament. If Montevallo wins from Lincoln next Saturday then a third game will be played on the Saturday following at Talladega.

The lower half of the Fourth district has only two teams, Selma and Plantersville. These two teams will play a series soon for the honor of representing that part of the district. It will be recalled that Selma was the state champion for last year's tournament.

Fewer Lynchings In 1923

There were 28 persons lynched in the United States in 1923, according to Monroe N. Work, in charge of the department of records and research at Tuskegee Institute.

This is 29 less than the number, 57, for the year 1922. Thirteen of the persons lynched were taken from the hands of the law, seven from jails and six from officers of the law outside of jails.

There were 46 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. Four women, three white and one colored, were among those thus saved. Six of these preventions of lynchings were in northern states and forty in southern states.

In eight instances during the year persons charged with being connected with lynching mobs were brought to trial. Of the 52 persons thus brought before the courts only 2 were sent to the penitentiary.

Of the 28 persons lynched in 1923, 26 were negroes and 2 were whites; two of the former were women. Seven, or one-fourth of those put to death were charged with rape or attempted rape; one of the victims was burned to death one was put to death and then the body was burned. The charge against the one burned to death was murder.

The nine states in which lynchings occurred and the number in each state are as follows: Arkansas, 8; Georgia, 4; Louisiana, 1; Mississippi, 8, Missouri, 1; Oklahoma, 1; Texas, 2; Virginia, 1.

It's Much Better to Go Away.

College Girls Report Volunteer Convention

Montevallo, Ala., January 14.—The students from Alabama College who attended the Student Volunteer Convention at Indianapolis during the Christmas holidays had charge of the College Y. W. C. A. services and the services at the Baptist and Methodist Churches on Sunday evening. At the Y. W. C. A. service Miss Bess Fowler, of New York, spoke on "Racial Conditions," which was one of the live subjects at Indianapolis. She first gave an account of the organization of the Convention, and then presented in a pleasant manner the ideas that were advanced by many speakers of the Convention. While she disagreed with many of these statements, she insisted that she was merely making a report of what was done. Miss Helen Davis, of Fort Davis, gave an analysis of the great speech of Canon S. Woods of England. She was wonderfully impressed with this great man, in his ideas about God, about sin, and about forgiveness.

At the Methodist church, Miss Lida Allen, of Cromwell, presented in a very lucid manner the convention's discussion of the great war problem, and she urged the congregation to unite with the leaders of the country in trying to have permanent peace established in the world. Miss Bess Fowler spoke on the organization of the Convention and Miss Helen Davis gave also another report of Canon Woods' great address.

At the Baptist church, Miss Margaret Butler, of Montgomery, presided. She prefaced her remarks by extending thanks to the church for the assistance that they gave to the girls in helping to pay their way to attend that great meeting She spoke on the organization of the convention and upon the Racial Problem. Miss Margaret Embry, of Ashville, spoke is a most pleasing manner concerning the four great speakers who represented the Far East—China, Japan, India and Persia. She made a strong appeal for Christians everywhere to help in spreading the Gospel among these people. Miss Lulu Palmer closed the exercises by making a report on the eight speakers who represented Canada, England, and America. In the time alloted, she could give only a brief analysis of the statements of these speakers. Her address was likewise an appeal for all Christians to take more active interest in general religious work.

Altogether the pupils of the school and the citizens of Montevallo were very much impressed by the reports that have been made There will be other speakers to talk at many of the Missionary Societies which will be held from time to time in the town of Montevallo.

Farther than the Earth's Distance Around the Sun

— Mileage Travelled by L&N Locomotives and Cars Last Year

Hurtling through space at the rate of 18 miles per second, the earth travels approximately 570,000,000 miles every year in its orbital journey around the sun.

Last year, the total distance travelled by locomotives, and freight and passenger cars, over L. & N. rails, was approximately 730,000,000 miles—about 160,000,000 miles more than the earth travelled in its race around the sun.

The average person has but little conception of the vast and varied labors which are necessary on the part of the 52,000 employees of the L. & N. Railroad, in order that this stupendous movement may be accomplished.

Day and night, on Sundays and holidays, with constant vigil and attention to thousands of details and operations, the L. & N. Organization functions smoothly, furnishing the people in its territory with a freight and passenger service adequate to their needs; and this service is constantly being enlarged and improved as these needs grow.

"Here is another letter that makes me happy," says Peterson, of Buffalo. "One that I would rather have than a thousand dollars.

"Money isn't everything in this world. There is many a big-hearted, rich man who would give all he has on earth to be able to produce a remedy with such mighty healing power as Peterson's Ointment, to sell at all druggists for 60 cents a large box."

Dear Sirs:—

"I was an untold sufferer from old running sore and ulcers. I had tried most everything without any relief from pain. A friend told me of your wonderful ointment and the first box took away the pain that had not left me before in years, and after using just nine dollars' worth of the salve I am cured. The ulcer was 9 inches by 6½ inches, is all healed and I can walk. Never, never will I be without Peterson's again.

"You may use this to recommend your ointment, if you wish. I cannot say enough to praise it. Yours truly, Mrs. Albert Southcott, Lyndonville, N. Y." Mail orders filled by Peterson Ointment Co., Inc., Buffalo, N. Y.

TALES OF THE OLD FRONTIER

SAM BASS, THE OUTLAW-HERO OF A SONG

Sam Bass, he came from Indianny,
It was his native home.
And at the age of seventeen
Sam, he began to roam.
He went 'way out to Texas
A cowboy for to be—
A kinder-hearted feller,
You'd seldom ever see.
—Old Cowboy Song.

THAT is the first of many stanzas of a song that has been sung in every cow camp and along every winding trail from the Rio Grande to the Canada line. For Sam Bass, whose exploits were thus immortalized by some frontier bard, vies with Jesse James for the honor of being the Robin Hood, hero of the most typical native American ballad.

If there are some who would paint Sam as nothing more than a sordid murderer, he has plenty of apologists who say that he was a not unnatural product of the environment of cowboy life in Texas. As evidence that he was not utterly bad, they would cite the incident of the boy to whom Bass once offered a drink of whisky.

The boy refused to take it, saying "Mother doesn't allow me to drink." "That's right, sonny, mind your ma," said the outlaw and, as have so many transgressors, he added sadly, "I wouldn't be where I am today if I had minded mine."

Bass first went outside the law by robbing a Union Pacific train, and followed it up with bank holdups, more train robberies and an occasional killing until he became the most notorious outlaw of his time. Once a mob caught him and hanged him from a tree on the bank of a river. They began shooting at the dangling body and a shot cut the rope.

The outlaw's body dropped to the ground and then rolled into the river. A big rattlesnake was seen to crawl away from the place where he had struck and although the lynchers dragged the river, they could not find him. Upon their return to town they were asked if the notorious Sam Bass were really dead. "Well, if he ain't, he ought to be," replied one man. "He was shot, hanged, snake-bit and drowned. That ought to be enough."

But Sam wasn't dead. As he afterwards related it, the force of his fall stunned the snake, and before it could strike, he rolled into the river. The cold plunge revived him, and upon coming to the surface he hid under a pile of driftwood until nightfall gave him a chance to escape. Bass was finally killed in the town of Round Rock, Tex., by a Texas Ranger, after he had attempted to rob the bank there. So great was his fame that the legislature, then in session at Austin, adjourned and, accompanied by the governor, came to Round Rock to see for themselves that the notorious Sam Bass had at last come to the end of his trail.

THE MAN WHO SAVED THE BUFFALO

PERHAPS the greatest slaughter in the history of the world was one accompaniment of pushing back the last American frontier. That was the destruction of the vast buffalo herds which once roamed the great plains between the Mississippi river and the Rocky mountains. How many millions of the animals were killed in less than a quarter century of concentrated effort at wholesale execution will never be known, but by the middle of the eighties there was only a pitifully small number of survivors, and these had no legal protection.

However, about this time one of the men who had been responsible for the decimation of the buffalo had a change of heart. He was Charles J. Jones, a native of Illinois and a settler in Kansas, who had been employed as a hunter by the Union Pacific railroad to provide meat for its laborers. "Sometimes I became sickened at the slaughter of the defenseless brutes and felt like throwing down my rifle and never shooting another one of them," said Jones. "In 1886 I saw that the bison was doomed, and I resolved to atone for my cussedness by saving as many as I could."

So he assembled a party of cowboys and rode down into the Texas Panhandle to capture buffalo calves. They roped 14 of the little fellows, but could save only four of them. The remainder literally "went mad" in captivity and died quickly. The next year Jones went to the Panhandle again, captured 16 calves and saved eight. Two later trips netted him 37 calves, and with these as a nucleus he eventually built up a herd of several hundred buffalo on his ranch near Garden City, Kan.

By this time the American public had realized the mistake that had been made, and became aroused to the necessity for action to correct it. But even with public sentiment back of the effort to save the buffalo, it is doubtful if it could have succeeded had it not been for "Buffalo" Jones, as he became universally known. His long work of "atonement" had given him a herd of bison from which he supplied animals to bring new strains of blood into the fast-dwindling herds in parks.

TOOK CARDUI TO BUILD UP

Georgia Lady Says She's Sure of the Merit of Cardui, Having Taken It for 25 Years, Whenever Needed.

Ellijay, Ga.—A quarter of a century's successful use of Cardui, taken on many different occasions when needed, is reported by Mrs. Thomas H. Kell, a near-by resident.

"When I was a girl of 13," said Mrs. Kell, "my mother gave me Cardui as a tonic, with very good results."

Mrs. Kell explained that her second use of Cardui came after her marriage, shortly before she became a mother. "I needed something to build me up," she said, "and I immediately sent and got a bottle of Cardui. I took it regularly before the birth of every one of my children, and I have always gotten along well at that time . . . My last two babies were twins and before they came I grew very weak . . . I could scarcely get around to do my work. I got Cardui and took it and kept it up. I never went to bed and am sure the Cardui did it.

"My health is very good now. I recovered my strength quickly after the twins came, and this I attribute to the use of Cardui."

Cardui is a safe, purely vegetable medicinal tonic medicine, proved valuable in helping to relieve thousands of cases of womanly weakness, such as Mrs. Kell describes above.

Brazil's "Cow-Country"

Porto Alegre, Capital of Rio Grande do Sul.

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)

The name "Brazil," to the average North American, conjures up a picture of coffee, tropical forests and rubber. But it is a tremendous country, this United States of the South American continent, and the usual conception takes no account of Brazil's south, and especially of Rio Grande do Sul. That state, mentioned in dispatches because of the revolution which it has had on its hands, gives a different picture, and presents a Brazil into which hundreds of thousands of citizens of the United States could fit in peace times with little violence to their daily routine.

Reverse directions in comparison with the United States, and you have an explanation of the importance of Rio Grande do Sul. Brazil's North has a tropical climate; and there is the Brazilian "black belt," where live millions of negroes. The South has a temperate zone climate at its best; and Rio Grande do Sul, most distant from the equator, leads all the rest of the states in climatic agreeableness from the point of view of northern Europeans and North Americans. This has been a "white man's country" from the first, and it has been the leader in many ways in Brazilian development.

But there is a marked difference between Brazil's South and our own North. This southernmost of Brazil's states has its closest affiliations with our West, for it is a "cow country" without peer. On the 91,000 square miles of Rio Grande do Sul are more than a quarter as many cattle as in the entire United States. Water and grass are abundant, droughts are practically unknown, and the rolling country with its numerous tree-covered hills furnishes a charming and stimulating countryside in contrast to the dreary and often dry level of many of the world's great cattle-raising regions. Travelers who have visited all the leading live stock countries assert that Rio Grande do Sul's pasture lands are superior to those of Argentina, South Africa, the United States and Australia; and that here, under the Southern Cross, is the coming "cow country" of the world.

But although fortunately situated in so many respects for the raising of cattle, Rio Grande do Sul has no monopoly on the cattle industry, according to one Brazilian authority. Next to that state in the number of head of cattle is the interior state of Minas Geraes. This is the center of the dairy industry, as Rio Grande do Sul is the center of the packing, salting and leather industry.

Other Good Cattle Regions.

Most recent estimates place the number of cattle in Rio Grande do Sul at 8,400,000 head, while Minas Geraes presses the leading state with herds that number only one million head less. It is said that there is not a single state or territory of the country in which there is not some land favorable to the growing of live stock. Curiously enough the well-watered tropical states of Maranhao, Para, and Piauhy share honors among the lesser producers with Geara, a relatively arid state. But the real future of the cattle business in Brazil is believed to be in the interior states of Minas Geraes and Goyez. There are millions of acres of fertile ideal land waiting to support great herds in these districts.

Particularly in the latter state the parallel between the American cowboy west and the Brazilian cow country is very close. There are no fences on the vast plains carpeted with succulent grass. Herds are rounded up once a year and delivered on the hoof after a journey of sixty to ninety days to the neighboring state of Sao Paulo. There they are sold to packing-house agents who fatten them for nine months before shipping them by rail to the slaughterhouses.

Until fairly recently Rio Grande do Sul's cattle were neglected by companies in search of beef to transport; and the state had to content itself with shipping millions of dollars worth of "jerked beef" and hides. Recently tremendous freezing plants have been erected, and now Brazilian beef is finding its way to the world markets in competition with that from Argentina and Australia. Since this region is somewhat closer to Europe and the United States than its competitors, the industry seems assured of a steady development.

Rio Grande do Sul is not alone a "cow country." Its soil grows to perfection the grains and vegetables and fruits of the temperate zone. There has been considerable development along these lines; and the country seems destined to prove that there can actually be a compromise in the old war between agriculture and stock raising which has raged since before the days of Abraham. In manufacturing only one state, Sao Paulo, surpasses Rio Grande do Sul. The state is the only vineyard of Brazil, producing annually 10,000,000 liters of wine.

Many Germans and Italians.

Rio Grande do Sul has been more strongly affected by immigration than any other Brazilian state. For a time it seemed that it would become almost a German colony. Even now whole communities and towns and cities are predominantly German, and in them the German tongue has little competition. About 200,000 Germans live in the state, but since the total population of the commonwealth is more than 2,000,000 the German element is not dominant. Italians also have been attracted by this temperate portion of Brazil and scores of thousands of them have settled in the state.

Cattle and rubber were among the later discoveries of Brazil's agricultural treasures. With the growth of England's rubber plantations in the Malay peninsula the market for Amazon rubber from the virgin forests has faded to a mere skeleton, but the world cannot get along without Brazil's cattle plains. Sugar, cotton and subsequently coffee were the Eldoradoes of Brazil's early proprietors because of their export value. As early as 1530, however, live stock of many kinds was introduced into Bahia, where the first serious efforts at colonization were made. In 1560 Queen Catherine of Portugal personally sent cows and mares to the inhabitants. The caracu or native Brazilian stock, found principally in the interior, is the direct descendant of these early cattle sent from the continent. This type of cattle adapted itself to the plains of Brazil just as the Spanish horses adapted themselves to the plains of the American West.

Importation of other breeds of cattle has led to great mixture of breeds and dilution of pure strains, whether native or imported. In the more developed Rio Grande do Sul there are some 4,500,000 head of cattle of pure or practically pure stock, Durhams, Herefords, Angus, and Devons. Crossing of these breeds with the native Brazilian cattle is notable in Sao Paulo, the coffee state.

The true Englishman considers himself an exacting connoisseur of roast beef, but an incident which is going the rounds in Brazil is a blow to this particular English pride. A certain English firm steadfastly refused to accept any shipments of beef from Brazil because nothing but the finest of blooded beef would satisfy their epicurean English customers. Assured by the Brazilian exporting firms that they could send a shipload of absolutely pure Durham beef bred in Rio Grande do Sul from imported English stock, the British firm tempted by the lower price abandoned its conservatism to the extent of ordering several thousand carcasses. By an error in the shipping department, however, the beef consigned to the British firm was directed to a German importing house and the beef intended for the latter, the product of a mixed breed of Durhams and native Brazilian cattle, was delivered to the English firm. The Brazilian firm had just had time to discover the error and was on the point of wiring apologies and offers of restitution when they received the following cable: "Your shipment of pure bred Durham beef has surpassed all expectations. Are forwarding instructions for delivery of another shipload of same."

Fertilizer must be "cured"

TRADE MARK F.S.R. REGISTERED

Great bins of Royster Fertilizer "cure," or "age," for months so that your results from its use will swell the earnings from your land.

PERHAPS you didn't know that fertilizer should be "cured" or "aged" in order that the food for soil can be more readily available when that food is needed.

This is one of the details of the fertilizer industry that few people know, but it's mighty important. Such "details" as this represent the difference between Royster's Fertilizer and less carefully prepared foods—and the difference between profitable crops and crops that are not so profitable.

To keep vast quantities of fertilizer for months represents an enormous supply and a tremendous capital. Therefore, only a large company like Royster's can offer this more effective "cured" fertilizer.

Rid yourself of the idea that all fertilizer is alike. This is no more true than that all land is alike.

The truth of this can be proven—not alone by the enthusiastic praise of successful farmers who have used Royster's, but by your own experience.

Use Royster's this year. Give it a fair test—and don't guess about fertilizer any more.

Grow better and larger crops by using fertilizer that has been "cured"—that is free from lumps—that has been proven chemically correct by forty chemists—and that has established a record for good works over a long period of years. Look for the name "ROYSTER" on the bags.

ELECTRICITY ON FARM IMPORTANT

Auburn, Ala., Jan. 14.(—Special.)—That the farm electrical research and investigational work which will be done jointly by the Alabama Polytechnic Institute and the Alabama Power Company will reveal facts of tremendous importance in making agriculture a more profitable industry and farm life more attractive is the opinion of Dr. E. A. White, national figure in work of this kind, as expressed by him while in Auburn today.

Dr. White represents one of the most powerful study groups ever formed in the United States. It is composed of the American Farm Bureau Federation, the National Electric Light Association, the American Society of Agricultural Engineers, and the U. S. Departments of Agriculture, Commerce and Interior.

The application of electricity to farms for the production of power is one of the most important possibilities of the work, thinks Dr. White. He declares that farm income parallels farm power and expresses his belief that electricity produced on the streams of Alabama can be made to supply Alabama farmers with power in such a way as to make it very advantageous for them to use it.

DR. HINDS EXPLAINS COTTON GROWING UNDER BOLL WEEVIL CONDITIONS

ays Larger Yields From Fewer Acres Secret of Success

Representative farmers from all arts of Shelby county came to Co-mbiana Thursday of last week attend the Safe Farming meet-g and to hear Dr. W. E. Hinds, Auburn, state entomologist, dis ss growing cotton under boll eevil conditions. Other addresses an that of Dr. Hinds were giv-n during the day, but the large owd who staid to hear him and e eager interest manifested in hat he had to say indicated be-ond doubt that the question of w to grow cotton profitably is ill uppermost in the minds of any Shelby county farmers.

Dr. Hinds has given many years his life to a study of the boll eevil, and C. M. Mauldin of Wil-nville, former district demonstra ion agent in the Extension serv-e, stated that in his opinion there not another man in the whole outh who knows as does Dr. inds, how cotton can be grown n spite of the boll weevil.

Dr. Hinds began his address with he statement that the farmers of labama will find that unless they an grow more than 1-5 bale to he acre, the average for last year, ey can not afford to grow cotton t all. He said the first thing nec-ssary is to increase production er acre. This can be done, he said First. By planting fewer acres. Second, By getting better seed; Third, By better cultivation; Fourth, By Weevil control.

Under the head of planting few-r acres, Dr. Hinds declared that is folly to talk of buying poison r cotton grown on land so poor hat it cannot yield enough, even there were no boll weevil, to ay for the poison; and he said hat too much of that sort of land being planted each year. He rged the selection of the best nd for cotton and the use of ore fertilizer per acre, showing ow as a result of following this ethod many farmers are now rowing as much cotton on eight cres as they formerly grew on 12, nd at a considerable saving of la-or at that.

BETTER SEED

In discussing Better Seed, Dr. inds showed that a difference s great as $50 per acre had been bserved in the yeld from differ-nt varieties of seed.

He insisted too that it would be ery profitable if all the farmers n a community would agree on he same variety of seed and let very man plant only that kind. Only in that way, he said, can eed be kept pure.

Dr. Hinds urged too, that all the otton in a community should be lanted as nearly at the same time s possible. Early planting of a atch here and there will only urnish breeding ground for the eevil and make it possible for im to attack in large numbers he large acreage that will of nec-ssity be planted later in the sea-on.

BEATING THE BOLL WEEVIL.

The problem of beating the boll eevil, Dr. Hinds declared, is sim ly the employment of such meth-ds as will make possible the pro-uction of a profitable yield of cot-on, before the weevil can come in large numbers to destroy it. This can be done, he said, by plant ing fewer acres with more fertilizer of the right kind, using better seed, employing better methods of cultivation, and finally the use of calcium arsenate in dust form to poison the weevil.

USE OF POISON

What Dr. Hinds said about the use of poison was, it seemed, enough to convince any thinking man that it will not be safe to count on growing cotton without nsiug poison. The Reporter will give in a later article some of the things he said about this form of weevil control.

Previous to Dr. Hinds' address, C. E. Massey of the Farm Bureau Cotton Association delivered a brief address, showing the advantages to the farmer of membership in the Farm Bureau. For one thing he showed that members who bought through the organization saved $6.85 per ton on their fertilizer. Mr. Massey asked the oldest looking man he saw before him if he had ever before seen the price of fertilizer coming down as the price of cotton went up. The reply was, he had not.

Another speaker of the morning was E. A. O'Neal, president of the State Farm Bureau who urged the necessity for an active organization to do for farmers what they, as individuals, have never been able to do for themselves.

NATION GRIEVES LOSS OF WOODROW WILSON

Woodrow Wilson, president of the United States from 1913 to 1921, died Sunday morning at his home in Washington City, after an illness that began during his second term as president. Altho his condition had greatly improved since that first serious illness the former president had never recovered his health. On Friday of last week he suffered a complete collapse, following a slight illness of a few days, and from that day there was no hope that his life could be prolonged.

Simple services in honor of the distinguished dead were conducted in Washington City Wednesday afternoon, and throughout the nation were shown such manifestation of genuine sorrow as are rarely witessed.

MASONIC CONFERENCE 'ELD HERE NEXT WEEK

The Shelby County Masonic Conference, an organization of the ten Masonic Blue Lodges of the county, will hold its semi-annual meeting on February 12 and 13, at Columbiana; Shelby Lodge No. 140 A. F. & A. M. and its members acting as the hosts for all Masons who may attend.

This conference was organized several years ago, its purpose being to give instruction to the Masons of Shelby county, keep them efficient in the Masonic ritual, and also to explain to them the teachings of the Masonic order as affecting every day life. From its beginning the conference has had the enthusiastic support of the Masonic body.

The officers of each lodge are delegates to the conference but all members are urged to attend the meetings. Those who have attended the meetings have found their time well spent.

F. A. Church of Wilsonville is the district lecturer and he supervises all instruction on the ritual covering the work of the first three degrees. W. E. Lively of Boothton, is the secretary of the conference. Mr. Lively states that a number of prominent Masons from neighboring counties have signified their intention to attend the meeting in Columbiana. He is very hopeful that all Masons will make a special effort to accept the hospitality of the Columbiana Lodge.

Parent-Teacher Assn. Plans Valentine Party

The regular meeting of the Parent-Teacher Association of Columbiana, was held at the Public school building Tuesday of last week. Plans were completed for a Valentine party to be given at the High School, Thursday February 14th.

Mrs. W. W. Wallace and Mrs. P. O. Luck will have charge of the program for the evening which assures an interesting hour for those who may come. Candy and pop corn balls will be on sale for the benefit of the school. Every one is invited to come out for an evening of fun. Admission 15 and 25 cents.

LOCAL METHODISTS MAY ENLARGE CHURCH

There is a strong probability that the congregation of the Methodist church in Columbiana will undertake soon a substantial addition to their church building. At the close of the Sunday school service, Sunday, R. L. Cater called attention to the need for more room for the school if the best work is to be done. He had particular reference to the need for a place for the young men's class which has within the past few weeks had a remarkable growth.

It is understood that serious consideration is being given by the officials of the church to a plan that will make it possible to begin work on the addition right away.

ANOTHER PROBLEM FOR SUNDAY SCHOOL

A Bible problem given to the members of the Methodist Sunday school some time ago by Rev. T. K. Roberts, and published in the Reporter aroused considerable interest. A second problem was given to the school by Brother Tom last Sunday. It is as follows:

"How many books did the Major Prophets write?" Alfred asked his Bible school teacher.

The teacher replied: "If to the books of the Law in the Old Testament you add the number of books in the New Testament written by Peter; multiply that by the number of books written by Luke, multiply that by the number of letters in the name of the great river of Egypt; subtract the number of letters in the river near Babylon; subtract the number of letters in the name of the city of Chaldea from which Abraham was called; and divide by the first chapter in Acts that contains a record of Paul's (Saul's) conversion, you will have the number of books written by the Major Prophets." What is the answer?

BIRTH OF A NATION FOR MONTEVALLO

D. W. Griffith's master production, "The Birth of a Nation," will be the attraction at the Strand Theatre in Montevallo for two days, Monday and Tuesday, February 18 and 19.

This great attraction will be brought to Montevallo, it is said, in exact reproduction of the form in which it was given in New York where it played to more people in two weeks than had ever before been gathered in a play house.

The Birth of a Nation covers the essential details of American history ranging through three centuries. Actual battles are shown with tens of thousands of soldiers in the conflict. 18,000 people participated in the the telling of the story. Three thousand horses were used to give the cavalry and other thrilling effects of the wild dashes over miles of territory. Cities were built up only to be destroyed by fire. The total cost of the entire production was in the neighborhood of $500,000. Ten thousand yards of cloth were worked together into the costumes worn by the women while 25,000 yards of white muslin were used up in the regalia of the Ku Klux Klansmen.

The narative is filled with tears and smiles. The brilliant cast includes such well known screen artists as: Henry B. Walthall, Lillian Gish, Mae Marsh, Miriam Cooper

Four More Stills Taken Near Pelham Last Week

State, county and federal officers resumed activity in the neighborhood of Pelham last Friday and Saturday, and with continued success.

Three stills were taken Friday, two of 200-gallon capacity each and one of 300-gallons capacity. About 3000 gallons of beer was poured out. Officers having part in this work were Sheriff Falkner, Deputies Falkner, Dennis and Crumpton, State Officer Gardner and Federal Agents Adkins and Gillespie.

On Saturday the officers captured another still in the same part of the county and destroyed a quantity of beer.

W. L. Garrett of Calcis was among our visitors Monday.

A. A. Lauderdale, Farm Agent for Shelby County.

Careful Plans Being Made For Lasting Improvement In Farm Work

A. A. Lauderdale, new county agent for Shelby county, has finished the first month of service in his new office, and has submitted a report of his activities to the officials of the Extension Department.

Mr. Lauderdale began work on the first day of the year, knowing very little of the county or of the people he had come to serve. Bad roads have hindered him and the weather has not been altogether favorable, but in spite of these handicaps, he is able to make a very creditable showing.

TERRACING

Four terracing demonstrations were held during the month on the farms of the following:

J. M. Frost, Montevallo; J. W. Heflin, Wilsonville; R. E. Moore, on Beeswax Creek and Mr. Reynolds near Calcis. The purpose of these demonstrations being to teach farmers the use of the terracing level, to lay off and build terraces and to make the necessary implements for doing work in the best manner. Four more such demonstrations are scheduled for the coming week. Mr. Lauderdale has called attention of the business men to the importance of their co-operation in this work with most encouraging results. Orders for four new terracing levels have been placed during the month by the following: Columbiana Savings Bank; Wilsonville State Bank; Citizens State Bank, Vincent; and the citizens of Calcis community.

COMMUNITY MEETINGS

A number of communities have been visited by Mr. Lauderdale and some enthusiastic meetings have been held. At these meetings general discussions of better farming methods are given and orders are being taken for fertilizer for farm bureau members. Such meetings have been held at: Kingdom, School house, Westover, Spring Creek, and at Leonard Wyatt's above Wilsonville. The farmers attending Westover meeting placed an order for a car loar of acid phosphate and two other cars are being worked up. A car of nitrate of soda, ordered through the Farm Bureau was delivered to 40 farmers at Wilsonville. A number of applications for membership in the Farm Bureau have been taken.

DAIRYING

Mr. Lauderdale is convinced that there is a great future for Shelby county in the dairy industry. He believes too, that more of our farmers should get ready to

DEATH TAKES WOODROW WILSON, OUTSTANDING FIGURE OF THE AGE

Remarkable Career of the Man Who, After Gaining Fame as an Educator and Author, Became President, and During the Great War Was the Most Powerful Individual in the World—Originator of the League of Nations.

Woodrow Wilson, twenty-eighth president of the United States of America, was the most prominent world-figure of the events growing out of the World war, the most momentous of all wars. His place, as history will fix it, can only be conjectured. Hundreds of millions placed him at the zenith, as they placed the ex-kaiser at the nadir.

The great war brought to the front many men whose names will live in honor. In the last analysis three men stand out: Wilson, Lloyd George, Clemenceau. Of these three it was Wilson who held the world's eye—Wilson, the human phenomenon of the times, until fifty-four no more than a college president and political writer and at sixty-three on a pinnacle of fame and honor and power unsurpassed if ever attained by any man in history.

It is impossible now to differentiate between Woodrow Wilson the man and Woodrow Wilson the head of the most powerful nation of earth in wealth, material and fighting men. Certainly he could not have reached the place he held without great ability and extraordinary capacity for leadership. By virtue of his place he became a focus of world attention as soon as the great war began. Before the armistice was signed he had become a great moral leader with the ear of the peoples of the world. Only as such could he have forced upon the allied world the unofficial acceptance of his project of a league of nations, with its fourteen points as set forth to congress January 18, 1918.

MR. AND MRS. WOODROW WILSON

Abroad and at Home.

The enthusiasm evoked by President Wilson's visits to Paris, London and Rome was proof of his unique place in the regard of the people. It was evident that he was to Europeans not so much a man as a voice—a voice putting into words what they wanted and had not been able to express; his ideas and ideals were a sort of religion to them.

But he showed himself a statesman as well as a voice. He played the game masterfully. He established sympathy between himself and his man or his crowd. He made few if any mistakes in taste or judgment. He "matched his mind," to use his own expression, with the best of Europe and he got his league of nations before the peace conference and got it adopted.

President Wilson's two months in Europe may be divided into phases. When he landed the attitude toward the league of nations was this: The government of France was antagonistic; Great Britain's was suspicious; Italy's was skeptical. The first phase, his triumphant progress through France, England and Italy opened the eyes of these governments to his hold on the people. The second phase, the preliminary work of the peace conference, convinced these governments that President Wilson had an idea rather than a set plan which he purposed to force upon them. This simplified the situation and the rush to climb on the bandwagon began.

Contemporary estimates of President Wilson at home were as wide apart as the poles. Senator J. Thomas Heflin (Dem., Ala.), when representative spoke on the floor of "Woodrow Wilson, the greatest apostle of world liberty and democracy since Jesus Christ."

Senator Thomas W. Hardwick (Dem.) of Georgia, said January 21 in the senate: "I believe in a written constitution. I believe in a strict interpretation of it . . . and I believe that unless we leave and abandon this mad saturnalia of imperialism here at home and return to the ancient principles of our fathers there will be no safety nor happiness for the people of this republic."

Senator Albert B. Cummins (Rep.) of Iowa expressed the half-way view when he said in the senate January 23: "I think President Wilson is the most intensely practical statesman of this or any other day. He began his administration in the belief that the executive office had not the power that it ought to have. He has accomplished more in the direction in which he set his face and his mind than any other man, either in this generation or in any former generation; and the only criticism, if it be a criticism, is that he has not marched in the right direction and has done things that he ought not to have done."

In the process of wresting from congress all the powers he believed the Constitution conferred upon the executive, President Wilson made many political enemies who questioned not his ability, but his motives and methods. To particularize would be largely to review the political history of the last six years. The railroad situation, however, may be cited as an example. Representative E. E. Denison (Rep.) of Illinois said January 15, 1919, "Government ownership of railroads will be the dominant political issue in the next national campaign and Mr. McAdoo will of course expect to be the candidate of his party. He will hope to capitalize what has been done for the railroad men."

President Wilson was re-elected in 1916 upon a peace platform. October 25, 1918, just before the congressional elections, he issued an appeal to the voters of the United States asking them, if they had approved of his leadership and wished him to continue to be their unembarrassed spokesman in affairs at home and abroad, to express themselves unmistakably to that effect by returning a Democratic majority to both houses. The result of the elections was to change the political complexion of both houses as follows: 65th congress—Senate, 51 Democrats and 45 Republicans; house, 215 Republicans and 213 Democrats. 66th congress—Senate, 47 Democrats and 49 Republicans; house, 239 Republicans and 193 Democrats.

President Wilson in attending the peace conference made several new departures. He left the country during office. He took the office with him, signing acts and making appointments while in Paris. He ignored the senate, though he is empowered by the Constitution to make treaties "by and with the advice and consent of the senate."

He appointed as the American representatives himself, Secretary of State Robert Lansing, Henry White, Edward M. House and General Tasker H. Bliss. He sailed December 4, 1918, and arrived at Paris December 14. The French capital was en fete for the occasion. December 24 he went to England and thence to Italy. He returned to Paris January 8, after a journey that resembled a "triumphal procession."

After the preliminary sessions of the peace conference President Wilson returned to the United States in February, returning to Paris March 15, 1919. He signed the peace treaty June 28, 1919, and returned to the United States July 8. His second term as president expired March 3, 1920.

After his retirement from the presidency Mr. Wilson lived quietly, making a partly successful fight to regain his health. He occasionally went to the theater and rode much in his car about the environs of Washington. He bought a home in Washington and in 1921 formed a law partnership with Bainbridge Colby, who had been his secretary of state, succeeding Robert Lansing. He took part in the funeral procession of President Harding in Washington and was the recipient of much public attention.

Mr. Wilson's last public utterance was last fall. November 10, 1923, the eve of Armistice day, he spoke by radio to the American people, defending his peace policy and saying that the American people had withdrawn into a "sullen and selfish isolation which is deeply ignoble because manifestly cowardly and dishonorable."

Armistice day Mr. Wilson briefly addressed thousands from the front steps of his home, concluding thus:

"I am not one of those that have the least anxiety about the triumph of the principles I have stood for. I have seen fools resist Providence before and I have seen their destruction, as will come upon these again—utter destruction and contempt. That we shall prevail is as sure as that God reigns. Thank you."

Chronology of Wilson.

Woodrow Wilson was born December 28, 1856, in Staunton, Va. He was the son of Rev. Joseph R. Wilson, a Presbyterian minister, and Jessie (Woodrow) Wilson. In 1885 he married Ellen Louise Axsen. They had three daughters—Jessie (Mrs. Francis B. Sayre), Eleanor (Mrs. W. G. McAdoo) and Margaret. Mrs. Wilson died August 16, 1914, in the White House. December 18, 1915, Mr. Wilson married Edith (Bolling) Galt, a descendant of Pocahontas. The first 29 years of Mr. Wilson's life covered his boyhood and education. The next 25 were devoted to teaching and writing. With his election to the governorship of New Jersey in 1910 began his active political career. His chronology follows:

Knickers for Women Win in Town Election

Spencer, W. Va.—The little town of Reedy, near here, has affirmed by popular vote, though by the slim majority of one, that it looks with favor on women dressed in knickerbockers.

Last May Mayor Cottle secured passage of an ordinance by the town council forbidding women and girls to wear knickers. The state's attorney said he wasn't sure, but thought that to be constitutional the law should apply to both sexes.

The other day came another mayoralty election. Knickers wer the issue. T. W. Lattimer, who favored the rights of women to dress as they please, got 78 votes to Cottle's 77. He announces he will not enforce the anti-knickers la-

LIVING MEMORIAL FOR SOLDIER DEAD

JEFFERSON COUNTY LEGION WILL PLANT TREES ALONG BANKHEAD HIGHWAY

PLANTING IS TO BEGIN AT ONCE

Water Oaks Will Form an Avenue For Several Miles From Pratt City Northward.

Eight hundred trees will be planted within the next few months along the sides of the Bankhead highway in honor of the soldiers from Jefferson county who died while in service in the World War, by the Memorial tree committee of the American Legion.

Beginning at Pratt City and going northward, the trees will stretch for several miles along the sides of the highway, forming an avenue lined with water oaks. Each tree will have a tablet under it giving the name and unit of the soldier it honors. The part of the highway north of Pratt City has already been paved and is being used more and more by tourists.

Jefferson county will co-operate with the American Legion in the project and county officials have agreed to pay for the digging of all the holes and to give the land necessary for the planting of the trees. While an outlay of money of any consequence is an impossibility for things of this at present with the county, this aid will be of invaluable service to the legion, leaders of the drive for funds state.

Work will start on the planting at once, with orders for several dozen trees already in. The cost of planting and caring for each tree for the first year, including the original cost of the tree, with the expense of digging the holes subtracted is about $2.

ALABAMA HAPPENINGS.

George H. Perkins, president of the George H. Perkins company, with executive offices in New York and Boston and with branch offices in a number of other cities, has purchased a valuable tract of land on the main thoroughfare of the Muscle Shoals district, a short distance from government nitrate plant No. 2, and immediately south of Wilson dam. This acreage will be subdivided immediately and developed.

Special gangs of workmen are busy at Wilson dam on the work of raising one of the big Terry traveling cranes to the height of the highway across the dam on the south side so that it may be possible to begin pouring concrete on the arches of the highway bridge, at an early date, probably within a week or ten days. This crane is one of the largest being used in the world today.

Preliminary surveys having been made some time ago for a state highway from the Marion county line to Fayette, known as project "A," E. E. Hart, engineer of the state highway department, Montgomery, assisted by a corps of surveyors, is now making preliminary surveys for a continuation of this road through Fayette county to the Tuscaloosa county line, known as project "B."

Montgomery's federal land office will be retained. Congressman J. Lister Hill of the second district, wired E. E. Winters, land agent, that the House of Representatives again voted against the abolition of the office and that the decision is final. The department of the interior had recommended the abolition of a large number of land offices and Montgomery was in the list.

W. S. Wiggins, section foreman at Fayette, has been distinctly honored, which fact he has modestly kept secret until this time. Officials of the Southern railway selected his part of the road as the best kept division of the entire road between Parrish, Ala., and Columbus, Miss., and as a remuneration for his efficiency he was presented with a motor car.

Probate Judge E. J. Chesnut of Cherokee county has cancelled his order for ballots for the presidential primary of March 11 because of the state attorney general's ruling that the primary is not warranted by law. Boy Scouts are to govern Anniston for one day. This will be tried early in March, according to plans of Scout Executive Z. L. Strickland. A mayor and 12 councilmen will be elected at a meeting in March, according to present plans. The officials elected from the ranks of the scouts will in turn appoint a police force and other city employees needed. Citizens are interested in the experiments.

Three appraisers will be named by attorneys in the case to fix a value on the land sought by the Morgan county board of revenue for a highway across the farm of Charles Oden. Judge L. P. Troupe, before whom the proceedings were brought, held his jurisdiction could extend only to appoint appraisers and the attorneys were requested to agree on the appraisal board.

Verdict for $125 was awarded the plaintiff in the case of James A. Meyers against the Galloway Coal Company in the Walker circuit court, being one of the cases in which the allegation was that farming lands were damaged by water from coal washers and coal mines passing through the property, coal dust and contaminated water injuring the lands.

Sam McCray and St. Elmore Ballard, convicted in Hale county, Aug. 5, 1916, of robbery and sentenced to 20 years in prison each, as the result of a crap game at the conclusion of which they relieved an opponent of winnings they alleged he had amassed with loaded dice, were paroled by Gov. W. W. Brandon.

The plan of the Gulf Ports Terminal Company operating a railroad for 30 miles out of Pensacola, Fla., to bridge Mobile Bay for a distance of seven miles in order to extend the road to Mobile was approved by United States District Engineer Earl North.

Despite the ruling made by Judge William E. Fort of Birmingham to the effect that the Alabama "blue sky law" is invalid, the state securities commission will continue to function as hertofore, it was asserted by A. G. Patterson, president of this commission.

Trial of Mrs. Edna Naro, charged with the murder of young Ralph Roberts, of Pratt City, probably will be set for the week of February 28, Assistant Solicitor J. P. McCoy, who is handing the prosecution, said.

The committee appointed by the Sheffield Chamber of Commerce to canvass the membership vote for directors declared the following elected: Hal Richeson, J. F. Gammon and Clopper Almon. The directors will elect a president.

An innovation is being planned by the Service Men's club in connection with its indoor carnival and bazaar, which will open at the old post office building in Birmingham, Monday, Feb. 11, and continue through Saturday.

Reduced rates on cottonseed, car load, from points on the Memphis division of the Louisville & Nashville railroad to Birmingham, have been secured, effective March 1.

The unburned part of the old Smith Carriage factory on Jefferson street in Huntsville is being torn away and the structure will be replaced by another building 40 by 75 feet.

The fifth annual North Alabama colored fair will be held in Huntsville October 2 to 5.

Miss Frances Halls, extension librarian for the state department of archives and history, is in Andalusia to assist in organizing and setting up a city library there.

Members of the Parrish Methodist church have launched a campaign to raise funds to be used in purchasing new seats for their church. Present seating facilities of the church are said to be inadequate.

Sick for Ten Years Gained 60 Pounds by Use of PE-RU-NA Read This

Mr. John Wick

No matter how long you have been sick or how much you have suffered, you must not give up hope. Mr. John Wick, of Monomonee Falls, Wisconsin, did not and is a well man today. In September, 1918, he wrote: "I have been a user of Pe-ru-na for nearly twenty years. I had catarrh of the stomach for ten years. Nothing did me any good. I grew worse until a friend advised me to try Pe-ru-na. While using the first bottle, I felt I had found the right medicine. I am entirely cured. My weight was down to 135 pounds and now I weigh 158 pounds. I have used very little medicine for the last ten years."

The condition known as catarrhal is not confined to the nose and throat. It may be found wherever there are mucous membrances and is responsible for a multitude of troubles. Coughs and colds are catarrhal as well as stomach and bowel disorders.

Do as John Wick did. Keep Peru-na in the house. It stimulates digestion, aids in throwing off the poisonous secretions, enriches the blood, increases the resistance to disease and promotes good health generally.

Insist upon having genuine Peru--na in either tablet or liquid form. Your dealer has it.

That cold may turn into "Flu," Grippe or, even worse, Pneumonia, unless you take care of it at once. Rub good old Musterole on the congested parts and see how quickly it brings relief.

Colds are merely congestion. Musterole, made from pure oil of mustard, camphor, menthol and other simple ingredients, is a counter-irritant which stimulates circulation and helps break up the cold.

As effective as the messy old mustard plaster, does the work without blister. Just rub it on with your finger-tips. You will feel a warm tingle as it enters the pores, then a cooling sensation that brings welcome relief.

JENNIE IN POLITICS

SYNOPSIS—Jennie Woodruff refuses to marry Jim Irwin, young farm hand, because of his financial condition and poor prospects. He is intellectually above his station, and has advanced ideas concerning the possibilities of school teaching and farming, for which he is ridiculed by many. In short, Jim is an off ox. He flocks by himself and reads books and has a philosophy of his own. But there are latent powers in him unsuspected even by himself and Opportunity comes knocking at his door. Jim is nominated for school teacher, as a joke. The joke results in his election. He visits his scholars.

CHAPTER IV—Continued.

But, true to his belief in honest, thorough work, like a general preparing for battle, he examined his field of operations. His manner of doing this seemed to prove to Colonel Woodruff, who watched it with keen interest as something new in the world, that Jim Irwin was possibly a Brown Mouse. But the colonel knew only a part of Jim's performances. He saw Jim clothed in slickers, walking through rainstorms to the houses in the Woodruff district, as greedy for every moment of rain as a haymaker for shine; and he knew that Jim made a great many evening calls.

But he did not know that Jim was making what our sociologists call a survey. For that matter, neither did Jim; for books on sociology cost more than 25 cents a volume, and Jim had never seen one. However, it was a survey. To be sure, he had long known everybody in the district, save the Simmses—and he was now a friend of all that exotic race; but there is knowing and knowing.

He now had note-books full of facts about people and their farms. He knew how many acres each family possessed, and what sort of farming each husband was doing—live stock, grain or mixed. He knew about the mortgages, and the debts. He knew whether the family atmosphere was happy and contented, or the reverse. He knew which boys and girls were wayward and insubordinate. He made a record of the advancement in their studies of all the children, and what they liked to read. He knew their favorite amusements. He talked with their mothers and sisters—not about the school, to any extent, but on the weather, the horses, the automobiles, the silo-filling machinery and the profits of farming.

Really, though Jennie Woodruff did not see how such doings related to school work, Jim Irwin's school was running full blast in the homes of the district and the minds of many pupils, weeks and weeks before that day when he called them to order on the Monday specified in his contract as the first day of school.

Con Bonner, who came to see the opening, voiced the sentiments of the older people when he condemned the school as disorderly. To be sure, there were more pupils enrolled than had ever entered on a first day in the whole history of the school, and it was hard to accommodate them all. But the director's criticism was leveled against the free-and-easy air of the children. Most of them had brought seed corn and a good-sized corn show was on view. There was much argument as to the merits of the various entries. Instead of a language lesson from the text-book, Jim had given them an exercise based on an examination of the ears of corn.

The number exercises of the little chaps had been worked out with ears and kernels of corn. One class in arithmetic calculated the percentage of inferior kernels at tip and butt to the full-sized grains in the middle of the ear.

All the time, Jim Irwin, awkward and uncouth, clad in his none-too-good Sunday suit and trying to hide behind his Lincolnian smile the fact that he was pretty badly frightened and much embarrassed, passed among them, getting them enrolled, setting them to work, wasting much time and laboring like a heavy-laden barge in a seaway.

"That feller'll never do," said Bonner to Bronson next day. "Looks like a tramp in the schoolroom."

"Wearin' his best, I guess," said Bronson.

"Half the kids call him 'Jim,'" said Bonner.

"That's all right with me," replied Bronson.

"The room was as noisy as a caucus," was Bonner's next indictment, "and the flure was all over corn like a hog-pin."

"Oh! I don't suppose he can get away with it," assented Bronson disgustedly, "but that boy of mine is as tickled as a colt with the whole thing. Says he's goin' reg'lar this winter."

"That's because Jim don't keep no order," said Bonner. "He lets Newt do as he pleases.'"

"First time he's ever pleased to do anything but deviltry," protested Bronson. "Oh, I suppose Jim'll fall down, and we'll have to fire him—but I wish we could git a good teacher that would git hold of Newt the way he seems to!"

CHAPTER V

The Promotion of Jennie.

If Jennie Woodruff was the cause of Jim Irwin's sudden irruption into the educational field by her scoffing "Humph!" at the idea of a farmhand's ever being able to marry, she also gave him the opportunity to knock down the driver of the big motorcar, and perceptibly elevate himself in the opinion of the neighborhood, while filling his own heart with something like shame.

The fat man who had said "Cut it out" to his driver, was Mr. Charles Dilly, a business man in the village at the extreme opposite corner of the county. Mr. Dilly was a candidate for county treasurer, and wished to be nominated at the approaching county convention. In his part of the county lived the county superintendent—a candidate for renomination. He was just a plain garden or field county superintendent of schools, no better and no worse than the general political run of them, but he had local pride enlisted in his cause, and was a good politician.

Mr. Dilly was in the Woodruff district to build a backfire against this conflagration of the county superintendent. He expected to use Jennie Woodruff to light it withal. That is, while denying that he wished to make any deal or trade—every candidate in every convention always says that—he wished to say to Miss Woodruff and her father, that if Miss Woodruff would permit her name to be used for the office of county superintendent of schools, a goodly group of delegates could be selected in the other corner of the county who would be glad to reciprocate any favors Mr. Charles J. Dilly might receive in the way of votes for county treasurer with ballots for Miss Jennie Woodruff for superintendent of schools.

Mr. Dilly never inquired as to Miss Woodruff's abilities as an educator. That would have been eccentric. Miss Woodruff never asked herself if she knew anything about rural education which especially fitted her for the task; for was she not a popular and successful teacher—and was not that enough? So are the officials chosen who supervise and control the education of the farm children of America.

When Jim Irwin started home from putting out his team the day after his first call on the Simms family, Jennie was waiting at the gate to be congratulated on her nomination.

"I hope you're elected," Jim said, holding the hand she had extended; "but there's no doubt of that."

"They say not," replied Jennie; "but father believes in working just as if we didn't have a big majority for the ticket. Say a word for me when on your pastoral rounds."

"All right said Jim, "what shall I say you'll do for the schools?"

"Why," said Jennie, rather perplexed, "I'll be fair in my examinations of teachers, try to keep the unfit teachers out of the schools, visit schools as often as I can, and—why, what does any good superintendent do?"

"I never heard of a good county superintendent," said Jim.

"Never heard of one—why, Jim Irwin!"

"I don't believe there is any such thing," persisted Jim, "and if you do no more than you say, you'll be off the same piece as the rest. Your system won't give us any better schools than we have—of the old sort—and we need a new kind."

"Oh, Jim, Jim! Dreaming as of yore! Why can't you be practical! What do you mean by a new kind of rural school?"

"It would be correlated with rural life. It would get education out of the things the farmers and farmers' wives are interested in as a part of their lives."

Jennie looked serious, after smothering a laugh.

"Jim," said she, "you're going to have a hard enough time to succeed in the Woodruff school, if you confine yourself to methods that have been tested, and found good."

"But the old methods," urged Jim "have been tested and found bad Shall I keep to them?"

"They have made the American people what they are," said Jennie. "Don't be unpatriotic, Jim."

"They have educated our farm children for the cities," said Jim. "This county is losing population—and it's the best county in the world."

"Pessimism never wins," said Jennie.

"Neither does blindness," answered Jim. "It is losing the farms their dwellers, and swelling the cities with a proletariat."

For some time, now, Jim had ceased to hold Jennie's hand; and their sweetheart days had never seemed farther away.

"Jim," said Jennie, "I may be elected to a position in which I shall be obliged to pass on your acts as teacher—in an official way, I mean. I hope they will be justifiable."

Jim smiled his slowest and saddest smile.

"If they're not, I'll not ask you to condone them," said he. "But first they must be justifiable to me, Jennie."

"Good Night," Said Jennie Curtly.

"Good night," said Jennie curtly, and left him.

Jennie, I am obliged to admit, gave scant attention to the new career upon which her old sweetheart seemed to be entering. She was in politics, and was playing the game as became the daughter of a local politician. Col. Albert Woodruff went South with the army as a corporal in 1861, and came back a lieutenant. His title of colonel was conferred by appointment as a member of the staff of the governor, long years ago, when he was county auditor. He was not a rich man, as I may have suggested, but a well-to-do farmer, whose wife did her own work much of the time, not because the colonel could not afford to hire "help," but for the reason that "hired girls" were hard to get.

The colonel, having seen the glory of the coming of the Lord in the triumph of his side in the great war, was inclined to think that all reform had ceased, and was a political standpatter—a very honest and sincere one. Moreover, he was influential enough so that when Mr. Cummins or Mr. Dolliver came into the county on political errands, Colonel Woodruff had always been called into conference. He was of the old New England type, believed very much in heredity, very much in the theory that whatever is is right, in so far as it has secured money or power.

A very respectable, honest, American tory was the colonel, fond of his political sway, and rather soured by the fact that it was passing from him. He had now broken with Cummins and Dolliver as he had done years ago with Weaver and later with Larrabee—and this breach was very important to him, whether they were greatly concerned about it or not.

Such being her family history, Jennie was something of a politician herself. She was in no way surprised when approached by party managers on the subject of accepting the nomination for county superintendent of schools. Colonel Woodruff could deliver some delegates to his daughter, though he rather shied at the proposal at first, but on thinking it over, warmed somewhat to the notion of having a Woodruff on the county pay roll once more.

"I want a new kind of rural school, but I don't see any prospect—"

LESSON FOR FEBRUARY 10

THE FAILURE AT KADESH

LESSON TEXT—Num. 14:1-10.
GOLDEN TEXT—The Lord is with us: fear them not.—Num. 14:9.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Why Israel Failed at Kadesh.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Crisis at Kadesh.

I. The Spies Sent Out (Num. 13:17-20).

Less than two years had passed since the Israelites were delivered from their Egyptian bondage. They were now at Kadesh-barnea, within sight of the promised land. Moses urged them to go in and take immediate possession (Deut. 1:21), but they failed because of their unbelief (Heb. 3:19). The record in Deuteronomy 1:19-25 shows that God did not take the initiative in sending out the spies but that request was made by the people. Representative men, a ruler from each tribe, were secured. There was a three-fold purpose in sending out the spies:

1. To see whether the land was as God had told them (v. 18).
2. To see whether the people who dwelt there were strong or weak, few or many (v. 18).
3. To see whether the cities were made up of strongholds or tents (v. 19).

II. The Commission Executed (Num. 13:21-25).

They entered the land from the south and traversed it to its northern limit. They spent 40 days in this investigating exploration. On their return from the north, they gathered some specimens of the fruit of the land. Two of them, perhaps Caleb and Joshua, bore a cluster of grapes upon a staff between them as a witness that God had spoken the truth about the land.

III. The Spies Rendered a Report (Num. 13:26-33).

On their return this committee of explorers rendered a report to the whole congregation. It was not unanimous.

1. The Majority Report (vv. 26-29). (1) A land flowing with milk and honey (v. 27). As a proof thereof, they exhibited the fruit. (2) The people who live there are strong (v. 28). (3) The people live in walled cities (v. 28). (4) The land is inhabited with giants (v. 28; cf. v. 33). They saw themselves as grasshoppers. Furthermore, they saw the people so distributed, the Amalekites in the south, the Hittites, Jebusites and the Amorites in the mountains, and the Canaanites along the sea, that it was impossible to take them.

2. The Minority Report (vv. 30-33). In part this report agrees with the first. It does not ignore the difficulties nor dispute the facts. It denies the conclusions of the majority. They did not minimize the task before them, but asserted that with God's help they were well able to take possession of the land, and urged immediate action. The ten had their eyes on the difficulties, but Caleb and Joshua fixed their eyes upon God. Caleb lived to see his suggestions made real.

IV. The Rebellion of the People (Num. 14:1-10).

This rebellion began by crying, which shows that they were cowards. Having left God out of the question, they now weep and howl.

1. Murmuring (vv. 1-3). This weeping and howling was turned into murmuring against Moses and Aaron. Though too weak and cowardly to take their enemies in the power of God, they could assail their leaders. They even wished that they had died in Egypt.

2. Proposition to Organize to Return to Egypt (vv. 3, 4). They proposed to select a captain as their leader. God took them at their word—sent them back to wander in the wilderness for 38 years, during which time they all died except Joshua and Caleb.

3. Moses and Aaron Prostrate Themselves (v. 5).

4. Joshua and Caleb Protested (vv. 6-9). They rent their clothes. They insisted that the land was good and that, if the Lord delighted in them, He would bring them into the land.

5. The People Were Filled With Murderous Hate and Proposed Stoning Joshua and Caleb (v. 10).

6. God's Interposition (v. 10). He manifested His glory before all the children of Israel in vindication of the loyalty of Joshua and Caleb. God then proposed punishment for Israel.

Sympathy.

Often the best act of sympathy you can extend to a friend in a great sorrow is to go to him and be with him, saying little or nothing; for there are sorrows that are beyond words.—Presbyterian Record.

There are wrongs in this world to be righted, but no moral philosophy will right them. God alone can meet such a situation with an adequate remedy.—Herald of Gospel Liberty.

Kingsport, Tenn.—Mrs. Fannie V. Thompson, who lives just across the state line from here in Scott County, Virginia, is the widow of George Washington Thompson, who fought in the War of 1812. Although that was over 110 years of age, Mrs. Thompson herself is but 75 years old and doesn't look that age. Her life has been, and still is, an active one, and she takes a great interest in the affairs of the day.

"Two years ago," says Mrs. Thompson, "while I was visiting relatives in Russell County, Virginia, . . . I read about Black-Draught. It seemed to be a very remarkable medicine, so I thought I would try it. When I got home, my daughter got a box of this medicine at the store and we began to use it in our family.

"Black-Draught is a good reliable medicine. It is a household remedy with us for . . . trouble, which is caused by the strong lime-stone water we have to drink in this country.

"Occasionally I suffer from headaches caused from constipation and biliousness and for it I have invariably used Black-Draught for the past two years. My health has always been good."

WANTED—4-SQUARE MEN

The boy had been writing in his copy book trying to follow the perfect copy set for him on the first line. The teacher looking over his work said: "Why, Johnnie, your first line is by far the best. Why is this?" "Because," replied the boy, "I was closer to your copy at first and followed it, afterwards I followed my own."

Alas, how true in life. The boy followed the example, the copy, of the one nearest to him at first, father, Mother, brother, sister, or friend, and then with habits formed rushes on. The boys of today will be the young men of tomorrow; the young men of today will be the men of tomorrow.

Early one morning a father was trying to climb a snow covered mountain. Stopping to rest for a moment, he was surprised to hear the voice of his little son saying: "Papa, pick out the best way, I'm climbing in your steps." Surely the least to be expected of any man is a safe, sane, scriptural Christian example. You may not be called upon to preach or teach or lead in any public way, but God and man, the church, the world and our own self respect demand that our steps lead upward, Godward and Heavenward; that the influence that flows from our lives be wholesome and helpful.

All we know of good or evil we learned from somebody. Our thoughts, our words, our deeds, our habits and our destinies are all inherited, derived, copied and appropriated from somebody's life and influence. We are our brother's keeper or destroyer, whether we will or not, consciously or unconsciously. No one liveth to himself; no one dieth to himself.

Would a young man ever go wrong and make a shipwreck of his life if he did not have the example of an older man to follow? Would a boy ever curse and lie and steal and drink and smoke cigarettes and stay away from school and church, if he didn't have the example of a young man, his hero, to follow?

Recently a judge about to pass sentence on a colored boy, asked him why he had become a criminal, what it was he needed most of all. "Jedge," said the condemned boy, "wust of all, I needs a new set of pa'ents." The kind officer who stood by knew the boy had spoken the truth, worst of all he needed a new set of parents of the right sort.

Sixty-eight thousand delinquent girls in the United States last year. The cause? Delinquent parents. If boys and girls go astray and wreck thmeselves, whose steps did they walk in? Whose example did they follow?

Men, brethren, the responsibility is upon us. We owe it to our younger brothers to keep ourselves unspotted from the world and so to live as to influence them for good and good only. Dives remembered his five brethren and would have warned them to change their lives and top following in his steps but it was too late. Not only parents and grandparents, but all men are examples either for good or evil. What sort of example is mine? Brother Tom go into the dairy business, and that to do so with profit, they must have more pastures. To that end he is securing the co-operation of some of he best farmers in the county in placing pasture demonstrations on their farms. Already he has arranged for four such demonstrations on the farms belonging to the following: J. M. Frost, Montevallo: E. C. Barton, Calera; W. H. Templin, and J. T. Riley in the Kingdom community. Mr. Frost has a field of 10 acres already prepared that is an ideal plot for a permanent pasture. Mr. Burton will use a plot of five acres, almost, if not quite as good. Both Mr. Frost and Mr. Burton have placed orders for seed as follows: Dallis grass, carpet grass, lespedeza and white clover.

POULTRY FOR EVERY FARM

Along with dairy farming, Mr. Lauderdale believes, should be a Lauderdale believes that a flock of purebred poultry should be kept on every farm to show the possibilities of profit in this branch of farming, it is his plan to establish a number of demonstration flocks in different parts of the county.

GROWING COTTON

Along with these ideas that will be considered, perhaps, by many as being new, Mr. Lauderdale means to devote considerable effort to growing cotton profiably under boll weevil conditions. He has already made arrangement with W. H. Pope of the J. F. Pope Co., Wilsonville, to carry out three 3-acre experiments of cotton to be planted, cultivated and treated, just as Mr. Lauderdale suggests. Mr. Pope agrees to furnish all the fertilizer and the poison for these experiments. One of these will be conducted on the farm of Mr. Gilbert in the Kingdom community, and a second on the farm of Leonard Wyatt, above Wilsonville. Other similar experiments will be conducted on the farms of J. F. Hill, Wilsonville, and C. W. Jones near Shelby.

Mr. Lauderdale is making careful study of conditions in the county, conferring freely with successful farmers and business men as he has opportunity. It is his desire to recommend only such things, and to work only along such lines as will lead to permanent improvement in farming conditions in Shelby county.

FARMERSVILLE

Several of our farmers have begun turning Mr. Boll Weevil under, preparing to make this a banner crop year.

W. E. Dorough and George Waldrop spent a few days with relatives in Leeds this week.

Miss Susie Gipson entertained the young folks at her home Saturday night and all present reported a nice time.

The musical entertainment given by W. B. Sanders was quite a success.

Miss Bobby Cosper spent the week end with relatives in Wilsonville.

E. M. Cosper has invited the county agent, Mr. Lauderdale, to come to his farm and give a demonstration in the care of his orchard.

Mrs. Walter Henderson and little son, Jewel, of Gantt's Quarry, are visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Cosper of this place.

Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Cosper and family spent a few days last week with her parents Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Wallis.

John Foster's baby has been very sick but is much better now.

Misses Ostella, Annice and Ezalee Dorough spent the week-end with relatives in Wilsonville.

On accounnt of bad roads and sickness in our community, the attendance at our Sunday school has been decreased considerably but glad to say it is better now.

Remember our preaching day, the third Sunday. Brother F. S. Newman of Sylacauga is still serving as our pastor. Every body come.

TH' OLE GROUCH

We Need More Poultry

(By A. A. Lauderdale, County Agent.)

Have you ever thought of the fact that the cow and the hen are the only two animals that will produce a fresh product for the table or for sale, every day in the year?

It is the general belief that poultry farming does not pay, and this is true in some cases, but from observations in Shelby county, I think it can be made a very profitable part of the farming operation by proper management.

By keeping a few cows and selling the cream, this leaves the skim milk for the chickens, which is a good feed for the production of eggs.

I have recently investigated several flocks of chickens in the county; a flock of 55 White Leghorn hens produced 988 eggs in January; these eggs sold for 40c a dozen, or approximately $33. The feed cost was about $16 for the flock, leaving a nice profit. Another flock of White Leghorns produced 25 dozen eggs in January. At the present price of eggs, you can easily see that there is a profit in the poultry business. The above are not outstanding flocks; they are maintained under ordinary home conditions. What one can do, others certainly ought to be able to do, also.

Right now is the time to secure purebred eggs and make the start; the pullets will lay in the fall or early winter. Hens inherit the quality to lay eggs—in other words they lay because they can't help it. But we can help them wonderfully by having the best fowls, giving them some care, and feeding so as to produce eggs when they are most profitable—during the winter months. A cash income, even though it be small, helps the farmer all along through the year.

In every flock of chickens there are some non-layers; these should be culled out to make room for the ones that are on the job all the time. In our poultry grammar, we are not so much concerned about "sit and set" as we are to be able to tell when the old hen cackles whether she has "laid or lied."

We want to establish at least five demonstration flocks over the county; in fact, one of these demonstrations has already been placed We do not expect to have extra large or extra good flocks, to begin this project, but start with what you have. These flocks will be used as examples, where records will be kept, culling done, etc., to determine just what can be done with the industry in Shelby county. In fact it is a farm project that the woman can handle, and it is a ten to one bet that she will beat her husband. Let's try it!

PASTORS DISCUSS GREATEST EVILS

Montevallo, Alabama, Feb. 4.—About two weeks ago, the pastors of Montevallo requested the citizens of the town to give them a statement concerning the greatest evils that are prevalent in Montevallo. Many hundreds of notes were handed in, the people generally taking the request seriously. Quite a large number of the young people claimed that the greatest evil was "The Intolerance of the Older People toward the Pleasures of the Young. On Sunday morning, the three pastors of the town preached very strong and helpful sermons on this subject, using as their text two passages of Scripture from one of Paul's Letters: "Fathers, provoke not your children to wrath; children, obey your parents in the Lord, for it is right." A very profound impression was produced up on both old and young, and it is believed that a more wholesome influence will be exerted hereafter on the pleasures of the young people.

Forecasting A Tremendous Spring Demand

more Ford cars and trucks were produced last year than the previous year, an increase of over 50 per cent.

In spite of this tremendous increase in production, it was impossible to meet delivery requirements during the spring and summer months when orders for 350,000 Ford Cars and Trucks could not be filled.

This year winter buying for immediate delivery has been more active than ever before—and in addition 200,000 orders have already been booked through the Ford Weekly Purchase Plan for spring delivery.

These facts clearly indicate that the demand during this spring and summer will be far greater than ever, and that orders should be placed immediately with Ford Dealers as a means of protection against delay in securing your Ford Car or Truck or Fordson Tractor.

HAD TO LET HOUSEWORK GO

So Ill Husband had to do the Work. Completely Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

South Bend, Indiana.—"I was all rundown, tired out, and had pains in my back and bearing-down pains. I was so sore I could hardly drag myself around and was not able to do a bit of housework. My husband worked all day in the shop, and then came home and helped me at night. The doctors said I had female weakness, and there was no help but to be operated upon, and of course that would cost us a great deal. My husband heard about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at the factory and one night he stopped at the drug store and bought me a bottle of it. I had begun to think there was no help for me, but I took three bottles of it and now I feel like myself once more. The price for three bottles wasn't so much as the doctor had charged. I cannot praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound enough."—Mrs. DORA OSBORNE, 430 Sherman Avenue, South Bend, Ind.

Women troubled with female weakness should give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial—now. For sale by druggists everywhere.

TALES OF THE OLD FRONTIER

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

(©, 1923, Western Newspaper Union.)

THE STEER BRANDED "MURDER, 1889"

TO THE cowboys who rode the range in West Texas during the nineties there was one longhorn steer that was always an object of dread. He was a big, white fellow with "Murder, 1889" branded in huge letters on his left side. His appearance among their herds brought a chill of terror to the superstitious, for this steer was said to have been responsible for the killing of at least nine men and it was believed that his coming to a ranch invariably meant another tragedy.

The steer's sinister history began in January, 1889, during a round-up on the Leon Cipa ranch in Brewster county. In a dispute between H. H. Powe and Fino Gilliland over the ownership of this steer, then a yearling, Gilliland shot Powe and fled. Thereupon Powe's cowboys imprinted the gruesome brand upon the steer's hide and turned him loose on the range.

A short time later Jeff Webb, Gilliland's nephew, was killed under mysterious circumstances near the town of Alpine and Gilliland believed that Sam Taylor, a noted desperado, was responsible for the deed. One night Taylor was playing poker in a saloon in Alpine when some one fired a load of buckshot through the window, killing him instantly and mortally wounding an easterner who was sitting in the game.

It was in this game that the cowboys' "dead man's hand"—aces and eights—originated, for Taylor had just won a pot with those cards and he fell dead across the table with them clutched in his hand. But the strangest part of the affair occurred soon afterwards. A big white steer with "Murder, 1889" branded on his side was seen near the saloon looking meditatively through the window where the fatal shot had been fired.

About six months after Gilliland killed Powe, he himself was shot down by two Texas Rangers when he resisted arrest. While the officers were looking over the scene of the battle a steer walked out of a patch of scrub oak to where Gilliland lay and stood sniffing at his body. As it turned to leave the Rangers saw the brand "Murder, 1889" on its side. By some mysterious coincidence the steer had drifted to this spot, 75 miles from the scene of its branding, and was here at the exact time when Gilliland was killed.

After this incident the big longhorn was seen at many places where crimes had been committed and ignorant Mexicans of the country spread the story that it possessed the spirit of the dead Gilliland.

BUFFALO BILL'S FIRST REHEARSAL

NOT the least of Col. W. F. Cody's contribution to history was the fact that in his Wild West show he kept alive the memory of the American frontier long after the last frontier had vanished. When he organized it he determined that realism should be the keynote of the enterprise and the first rehearsal proved realistic beyond his wildest hopes.

It was staged on the fair grounds at Columbus, Neb. The feature act was an Indian attack on a stage coach and a rescue by Buffalo Bill and his cowboys. Six young mules, barely broken to harness, were to draw the coach and Sam Matthews, a veteran of the Overland route, was secured to drive them. The attacking redskins were young Pawnees from a reservation nearby, under the management of Maj. Frank North, commander of the famous Pawnee Scouts.

Cody invited the city council of Columbus and the mayor, "Pap" Clothier, a quaint but exceedingly hot-tempered old fellow, to ride in the coach and "Pap's" pride swelled almost to the bursting point at the honor. The whole population of Columbus was out to see the show as Buffalo Bill's guests.

The mules were visibly nervous from the start and when, at the appointed signal, the Pawnees charged firing blank cartridges and whooping their loudest, the mules promptly stampeded. Around and around the race track they tore at dizzy speed and the Indians, mad with the joy of chase, redoubled their efforts at noise-making.

As the coach tore past the grandstand, the spectators saw "Pap" Clothier thrust his head out of the window, wave his arms at Matthews and shriek "Stop! H—l! Stop! Let us out! H—l! Stop!" It was a useless plea for it was taking all of Sam's skill as a driver to keep the swaying, lurching vehicle from overturning.

Finally Cody and North succeeded in cutting out bunches of the Indians, as they would cattle, and the mules eventually ran themselves down. As the coach came to a stop an enraged man burst from it and to Buffalo Bill's attempted explanation roared "Realistic! H—l! Let me get hold of you! I'll show you something realistic!" And only the restraining hands of the city council on the mayoral coattails prevented the addition of a "massacre" to the program.

Sport Sweaters of Fancy Stitch Latest in Clothes for Tourists

WHAT a diplomat is Madam Fashion. Confronted with the problem of creating suitable apparel for those who, in the midst of winter, seek summer in climes where flourishes the palm tree under sunny skies, this mistress of the mode plays a double hand. Thus the tropical fashions which burst forth in a blaze of glory to meet the demands of a winter resort clientele are made to serve as the key which unlocks the door of forthcoming spring and summer vogue.

That is why a halo of fascination surrounds the two sweater modes portrayed in this picture. They are resort fashions, and as such merit a close inspection, for they tell a story bearing on the future. Note the fancy zigzag stitch in the sleeveless golf coat. We are on the threshold of novelty knitted stitchery. Again observe that this sleeveless model features a new note in that its blue zig-zag front continues at the back as well as at the front. The foundational color of this smart garment is tan.

For wear at the beaches, knitted outerwear designers are sponsoring a slipon of fiber silk and worsted. The model shown to the left features tan and brown checks interknitted. The new V neck is of interest also.

A season of extreme novelty is predicted in the new knitted togs. Among the very smart ideas set forth, double-breasted and mannish sweater coats abound.

In the dressier frocks and sweaters, vivid color notes combine with unique construction. A new feature is the effect of hand embroidery done in wool. Bathing suits with matching turbans and capes, each monogram embroidered, are among the promises of the future.

At least six months ago Fashion began to sit up and take notice of things Chinese, and became so enthralled with the beauty of colors and the splendor of embroideries that she is now deeply engrossed with them. Then along came Mah Jongg, furthering everyone's interest in the arts of China and of its neighbor, Japan, besides providing a well-advertised name to tack on to every bit of apparel showing a Chinese inspiration. Now we have Mah Jongg coats and scarfs and many other things that vindicate this whim of fashion.

Where spring comes first—in the playgrounds of the South—tourists are wearing this newly-inspired finery, and some of it is enchanting. It will travel Northward this spring, for it merits a longer vogue than the resort season will provide. In the picture shown here a coat of natural pongee appears, covered with outline embroideries which look like the illustrations of a subtle story. Perhaps a Chinaman could read these figures which are made in silk threads of many colors and in fine gold threads.

But fashion is rushing other favorites that are thoroughly western, including black-and-white combinations in apparel, especially in millinery. Here in the picture is a hat and scarf set, native to New York and made of black taffeta, white wool canvas and wool yarn. It is worn with the Chinese coat and there is no clash of styles—they get on beautifully together. There are many hats of fine Panama weave, that are finished at the edge with buttonhole stitching of heavy yarn and trimmed with scarfs of chiffon that have splashes of color on them—printed on by hand in queer-looking figures. These are the Mah Jongg scarfs—no two alike, it seems—and worn simply as scarfs or serving to trim the hat as well.

CHEVROLET

There are three main groups of prospective buyers of Chevrolet automobiles and commercial cars.

First, are all who know from comparisons or through the experiences of friends that Chevrolet provides the utmost dollar value in modern, economical transportation of people or merchandise.

Second, the large group of people with modest incomes who have the false impression that so good a car as Chevrolet is beyond their means.

They do not realize that due to engineering excellence and full modern equipment, Chevrolet operating and maintenance costs average so low that during the life of the car, it delivers modern, comfortable, fast transportation at the lowest cost per mile, including the purchase price.

Third, the smaller but very important group of car owners of ample means, only a small percentage of whom as yet realize that Chevrolet as an extra car virtually costs them nothing, due to the reduction in their transportation expenses effected by it.

We respectfully suggest consideration, investigation and comparison of Chevrolet with any other car at any price.

Salmon Eggs Are Used To Lure Mounain Trout

Salmon eggs are another delicacy that the mountain, cutthroat, dolly varden and rainbow trouts of the western ranges are very partial toward.

This bait is fished in the swift and tumbling waters of the little mountain rivers of Idaho, Washington and Oregon to a large extent, as they are obtained in the vicinity of the great salmon canneries.

Used in connection with a small spinner or double spoon spinner these eggs are a deadly killer on the western trout. They are also great lures for the gray trout of the northern lakes.—Sportsmen's Digest.

Americans Printed First Postage Stamps for King

The first British postage stamps were made at 69 Fleet street, London, over 80 years ago.

About 1819 two men came over from the United States and started a printing and engraving business which to this day is known as Perkins, Bacon & Co., Ltd. They were Jacob Perkins, an inventor, and Gideon Fairman, an engraver, and with them were associated the two sons of James Heath, R. A.

The famous Perkins process of engraving on steel was applied and when millions of postage stamps were first required the Perkins method was adopted and proved to be just what was wanted.

Credit for the invention of the adhesive postage stamp has been claimed both for Sir Rowland Hill and for James Chalmers, a bookseller of Dundee.

The first British postage stamp was black and was introduced in 1841. It was a queen's head designed by Henry Carbould and engraved by Frederick Heath.—London Tit-Bits.

One Reason for Nervous Disorders

YOUR doctor can tell you that nervous disorders are very common among Americans. One reason for this is found in the fact that they are great coffee drinkers.

Coffee contains caffeine, a drug, prescribed by doctors as an emergency stimulant for the heart and nervous system. It has a tendency to increase blood pressure, develop heart irregularities and cause digestive disturbances.

If you feel that coffee is not good for you, serve Postum as your meal-time drink.

Postum is a pure cereal beverage that refreshes and satisfies. It is absolutely free from caffeine or any other irritating drug.

Try a cup of Postum with your dinner or supper tonight. Postum is sold everywhere.

Postum

"There's a Reason"

Postum comes in two forms: Instant Postum (in tins) prepared instantly in the cup by the addition of boiling water. Postum Cereal (in packages) for those who prefer the flavor brought out by boiling fully 20 minutes. The cost of either form is about one-half cent a cup.

TAX COMPROMISE SEEMS PROBABLE

LEADER LONGWORTH'S EFFORTS WITH RADICAL REPUBLICANS GIVE HOPE TO PARTY.

By EDWARD B. CLARK

Washington. — Notwithstanding the fact that a combination of Democrats with a minority of the Republicans in the house of representatives managed to force a repeal of the rule which prevented the offering of amendments to revenue bills from the floor of the house, Nicholas Longworth, the Republican leader, it is claimed, is making headway in an attempt to bring the progressive bloc of his party into sympathy with the plan for compromising the Mellon tax reduction bill to such a comparatively slight extent that it will be assured of presidential sanction.

It is only the truth to say that a good many of the regular Republicans in the house seem to feel that, while the progressives of the party have gone too far in their denunciation of the treasury plan to ease up on men of large incomes, there is some reason in the position taken by the objectors to the Mellon scheme in its original form.

Mr. Longworth not only ran up against a wall of opposition in the progressive camp, but he found considerable antagonism within the stockade of the loyal troops. It looks today as if a compromise would be effected, that the taxes in the so-called higher brackets will be reduced, that the earners of small salaries will be helped, and that the Republican party possibly may put through a bill which will be sufficiently like the one originally proposed to secure for it the endorsement of the people generally. If Mr. Longworth should succeed in doing this in the house and the leaders in the senate likewise shall succeed, the party hopes to credit itself with an accomplishment which the Democrats naturally still are striving to make their own by the aid of Republicans who have been "off the reservation."

Think People Like Mellon Plan.

Republican leaders in house and senate are in frequent conferences with administration leaders in the endeavor to find out how far they can yield to compromise and yet retain the approval of the White House and the Treasury department. The Republican chieftains, although they know they must compromise in order to secure approval of the proposed legislation, desire above all things to produce a finished product on which Andrew W. Mellon will be willing to stamp his approval.

The leaders claim today that the country, generally speaking, indorsed the Mellon plan in its original form. Mr. Mellon is a multi-millionaire, and some of the Democrats, plus some Republicans, have insinuated that his desire to reduce the taxes of the super-rich is based on a desire to help himself and his friends. The majority Republicans, however, claim that the people's approval of the Mellon plan shows they have taken no stock in insinuation of this kind.

Men with a head for figures and a willingness to dig into tables of statistics have been busy recently trying to find out just how much money today is invested in tax-exempt securities. The desire of some of these diggers has been to show that the men of large properties have not been dodging taxes by investments in securities which do not require them to pay toll to the government, to anything like the extent which has been charged. In fact, some of the students say that the rich are not investing to any greater extent in tax-exempt securities than was the case in other years.

Proof of Pudding in the Eating.

It seemingly is impossible for anybody to find out how much more money might be invested today in industries, thereby enlarging the field of American labor's activities, if men of capital could be released from some of the tax burdens. The only way to find out how much of the present idle money will be turned into industrial channels is to relieve the tax situation and to await results.

The rumor of the day which is particularly cheerful from the viewpoint of the Republican party which is on the eve of a struggle for continued power in the government, is that seemingly the task of winning the progressives to a moderate compromise frame of mind is not to be as difficult as it was at first supposed it was to be. Mr. Longworth has a way with him, is personally popular, and his friends declare that out of the house of representatives eventually will come something with Republican endorsement which will not only appeal to the people, but be certain of presidential approval, unless an element in the senate shall force further compromise which shall so disfigure the face of the house measure that it cannot be recognized. The Democrats, however, seemingly are still staunch in their belief that the tax bill which finally is to pass largely will bear the marks of Democratic handiwork.

McAdoo Seems to Lead.

The sessions of the Democratic national committee in this town held sharp interest for politicians of all parties. There was a great amount of political gossip passed about, some of it sound and some of it probably unsound, all of which in a way was more interesting to the politicians here than the more or less cut-and-dried official proceedings of the committee.

Of course nothing definite was said in an official way by the committee members as to the man on whom they hang their preference in the matter of the Democratic nomination for the presidency, but the general feeling here seemed to be that more of the committeemen favor the nomination of Mr. McAdoo than of any other candidate.

The committee declined to recommend the abrogation of the rule which requires a two-thirds vote in the Democratic national convention to give a candidate the prize. Therefore there is a feeling in the ranks of the Democrats who prefer some other man to Mr. McAdoo that if he shall fail to get the two-thirds majority necessary, the nomination of a so-called dark horse will be likely.

The friends of Oscar W. Underwood who were in attendance at the committee meeting and who took station in the corridors without the meeting hall took renewed courage, it is said, from evidences that some of the larger northern states are very kindly disposed to the Underwood ambition. It seems that the friends of the Alabama senator believe he will get the votes of New York and New England after they have been given in the first ballot or two for someone who goes into running as a favorite son.

Worried About Party Harmony.

The Republican party has its almost poignant anxieties over the matter of harmony in the ranks, but the poignancy of the Republican pains is no sharper than that which afflicts the Democratic body. Today, five months in advance of the conventions, it would appear that so far as concord of endeavor is concerned, there is little to choose between the two political camps.

William Gibbs McAdoo, as the politicians here seem to view it, has the brightest present prospect of convention preferment. As to the matter of the strength of Mr. Bryan's influence in the party, it seems to be the opinion of the Democratic chieftains that the three-times leader of their party, while he is presumably for Mr. McAdoo as a second choice, is not the prime prospective aid for that gentleman's campaign.

It was gathered from what the Democratic leaders who were here attending the convention said upon the matter, that most of them believe the McAdoo strength is to be found largely in the ranks of those who once were Mr. Bryan's staunch adherents, but who today are for the former secretary of the treasury, not because of Mr. Bryan, but because of Mr. McAdoo. In other words, McAdoo did not need the Bryan influence to bring to him the Bryan following.

It was natural enough for the McAdoo forces, as represented in Washington during the committee meeting, to oppose at first New York as the convention city. Mr. McAdoo as yet has had nothing at all to say upon one issue which interests New York, but he has had considerable to say upon the dry issue. New York is anti-dry.

McAdoo Strong in the South.

Many of the southern states seem to have fixed their affections on McAdoo. In some of the northern states his strength is apparently just as stable as it is in part of the South, but elsewhere in the North the opposition to him in the party is marked. There were plenty of evidences of this in Washington during the meeting of the Democratic committee.

The belief seems to hold among the politicians here that before very long William Jennings Bryan may declare for the McAdoo cause. There is some feeling here that the Commoner may hold off until the convention and then attempt to do what he did in the Baltimore convention of 1912 when he swung from Champ Clark to Woodrow Wilson and landed his man.

There are plenty of Democrats here in congress and out of it who see in the struggle between Mr. McAdoo on the one side and Mr. Underwood on the other the likelihood of convention approval of the nomination of a dark horse, principally the one being quietly groomed today in a paddock in Indiana—Samuel M. Ralston, United States senator from Hoosier land.

There is, however, a seemingly complete optimism in the ranks of the McAdoo followers. It may be that their cheerfulness is just a case of admirable bluff, but they appear to have even more confidence in the success of their candidate than the followers of Champ Clark had in 1912 when it actually was assured that the Missourian could command at the outset a majority of the votes in the Baltimore convention.

Is Winter Time Your Backache Time?

DOES every cold, chill or attack of grip leave you lame, achy and all worn out? Does your back throb and ache until it seems you just can't keep going another day? Do you know these troubles are often due to weakened kidneys?

Winter's colds and chills throw a heavy strain on the kidneys. The kidneys are apt to weaken and fall behind in filtering the blood. Poisons accumulate and upset blood and nerves.

Then comes constant backache, rheumatic pains, headache dizziness and kidney irregularities.

Don't wait! Delay is often serious. Use Doan's Pills—a stimulant diuretic to the kidneys. Doan's have helped thousands. They are recommended by users everywhere. Ask your neighbor!

My back ached from morning until night and there was a soreness across my kidneys which prevented me from doing much about the house. Sharp pains were frequent and annoying. I also had headaches and dizzy spells. I used Doan's Pills and they rid me of the trouble."

W. H. Cope, brick mason, 301 W. Main St., Samson, Ala., says: "My kidneys acted so often I had to get up several times every night to pass the secretions, which were annoying in passage and contained a brick dust sediment. I didn't dare make a quick move for a sharp pain was sure to come in the small of my back, especially when I got up from sitting. Doan's Pills relieved me entirely."

BOYS RECEIVE HELPFUL TRAINING IN VOCATIONAL AGRICULTURE

Instruction Given In Class Room, Shop and Field.

Seventeen boys are being given instruction in agriculture this year in the vocational department of Shelby County High School, taught by J. P. Montgomery. Mr. Montgomery is in his second year in charge of this department, is well equipped both by training and experience for his work and is thoroughly interested in seeing the boys who take his course become trained for successful farmers.

The work of the department is arranged as to be given in class room, in the shop and in the field. A part of each day is given to study and recitation of lessons in a manner similar to that of more formal instruction. The class room is well equipped with furniture built for the most part has been made by the boys who have taken and are taking the course and there is a large collection of books and bulletins for ready use. In addition to these, there are at hand various objects to demonstrate modern methods of farm work such as cream separators, milk tester, soil testing outfit, instruments for vaccinating hogs cattle, spraying outfits, materials and inmplements for grafting, pruning, etc.

The shop is completely equipped for practical instruction in making useful articles for the farm. There is a good collection of tools, such as hammers, saws, chisels, etc.; five individual work benches, a combination rip saw and plane outfit, the latter run by a gasoline engine and a blacksmith's outfit. Instruction given in the shop includes care of tools, sharpening saws, plows, etc.; making bolts and nuts, welding, making tools of various kinds, making feed boxes, chicken coops, designing and building poultry houses, making terrace drags, making and mixing material for spraying and grafting, mixing fertilizer, etc. The boys are shown the profit in home mixing of materials also. For example, they are taught to make a spraying mixture at a cost of 3 cents a gallon that would cost 25 cents at retail; to mix poison for bean beetle at a cost of 6 cents a pound compared with a retail price of 25 cents a pound, and to save $6 to $12 per ton on mixing fertilizer.

In addition to the instruction described above, which is given to the boys in a manner as thoroughly practical as possible, each boy is required to carry on at home during the year some sort of farm project. In this project work he is required to keep accurate records and to make use of the informaion gained in class and shop work. The project work is supervised by the teacher, who visits each boy at regular inervals, checks up his work and gives instruction as may be needed.

The projects being carried on by members of the class this year are as follows:

Hill Barnett, Columbiana, 50 Rhode Island Red chickens and feed, 2 acres cotton.

Simon Blackerby, Fourmile; 3 acres cotton, 3 acres corn.

Horace Davis, Shelby; sow and pigs, feed.

Frank Ellis, Columbiana, 4 acres oats and vetch followed by corn. A remarkable thing about Frank's project is that the severe freeze that killed nearly all the oats in Alabama, had very little effect on his oats and vetch. He is promised now a full yield of both crops. Even Mr. Mont's oats on an adjoining plot were nearly all killed.

Britt Ingram, Kingdom; 30 pure bred chickens, feed 2 acres corn.

Huston Gardner, Chapel Hili; 40 Rhode Island Reds, grades, 2 pure bred sittings, 2 acres corn, 2 acres cotton.

Gordon Mooney, Wilsonville, 5 acres cotton.

Luther Pate, Shelby; 3 acres of corn and 12 fruit trees.

Melvin Archer, McGowin's; ½ acre sweet potatoes, ½ acre Irish potatoes, ¼ acre beans, 20 White Leghorn hens, 3 acres cotton.

Edgar Jackson, Wilsonville; the same as Melvin Archer.

Judson Lyon, Fourmile; same as Melvin Archer and Edgar Jackson with 1 acre pasture.

Mabrey McEwen, Wilsonville; ½ acre sweet potatoes, 2 acres corn, 2 acres cotton.

Willie Shaw, Chelsea; ½ acre of sweet potatoes, ½ acre Irish potatoes.

Mark Sims, Fourmile; ½ acre sweet potatoes, ⅛ acre beans, 3 acres corn, 1 acre vetch.

John Stinson, McGowen's; ½ acre sweet potatoes, 3 acres corn.

Kavanaugh Wood, Calera; ½ acre sweet potatoes, 3 acres cotton, 1 acre permanent pasture.

Alton West, McGowin's; 4 acres cotton.

Cotton projects are to be fertilized as follows: 100 pounds nitrate of soda, 200 pounds acid phosphate 100 pounds kanit. Seed to be used Cook's 10-10 and poison for the boll weevil will be used.

For corn projects, each boy will use his own judgment in selecting a plot of ground, fertilizer used will be 100 pounds nitrate of soda or barn yard manure.

Feed crops to be grown for pigs will be. 1¼ acres pasture with a legume crop, preferably soy beans and peanuts for fall pasture. A small plot of sorghum to be grown near the fence for green feed.

Feed to be grown for chickens will be: oats, corn and sunflowers. Plenty of skim milk should be provided.

Though some of the boys have had to stop school they will carry out their projects as planned.

OFFICERS CONTINUE THEIR GOOD WORK

Eleven Arrests In 5 Days. Six Still Taken.

On Tuesday of last week the officers captured a large still on the Moss farm near Calera. The still was located near the home of Rufus Smith and he and his wife Annie Smith were placed under arrest. Besides the still some whiskey was found and a large quantity of beer was destroyed.

On Thursday the officers captured two 300-gallon stills and a large quantity of beer in the Brasher Hollow about ten miles from Pelham. Manning Brasher and his 9-year old son, Hascal Brasher, and Frank Brasher, a brother of Manning, were placed under arrest. In the outfits taken were 22 barrels, 7 lanterns and 2 tents.

On Saturday the officers captured a 300-gallon still, 900 gallons of beer and 16 barrels 3 miles north of Pelham. B. C. Collins and C. B. Burnett who were at work at the still were arrested.

The officers having part in these activities were Sheriff Falkner, Deputies Falkner and Dennis, State Officer Gardner and Federal Agent Adkins.

On Monday Messrs. Gardner and Adkins, accompanied by Federal Officer Gillespie and Deputy Foshee of Chilton county, made a raid in Coosa county, capturing a still with 900 gallons of beer. George Tackett and Ivey Dennis were arrested and carried to Montgomery for trial.

On Tuesday the officers arrested two men; C. Goodwin and W. R. Burnett while they were at work at a still two miles north of Calera. The outfit with 4½ gallons of whiskey and 200 gallons of beer was taken.

Masonic Conference Here This Week

The Masonic conference for Shelby county was held in Columbiana Tuesday and Wednesday of this week, with a good attendance of Masons representing practically every lodge in the county. Visitors from other counties were also in attendance.

On Tuesday evening luncheou was served in the Masonic building to the members of the conference by the local chapter of the Order of the Eastern Star, and a pleasant social hour was enjoyed.

Officials of the conference express themselves as being well pleased with the good attendance and with the substantial results obtained in strengthening the work of Masonry throughout the county.

PAY TRIBUTE TO WOODROW WILSON

Memorial services in honor of Woodrow Wilson, former president of the United States, were held at the Methodist church in Columbiana Sunday morning. Following the singing of Mr. Wilson's favorite hymns eloquent tributes to him were paid by Judge L. B. Riddle, R. E. Parker, F. G. Koenig and others. Judge Riddle referred to his great achievement in leading the nations to undertake to establish peach. Mr. Parker gave a brief sketch of Mr. Wilson's life, while Mr. Koenig referred to him as the man of destiny, who like others was raised up by God to serve his country in a great crisis. A large congregation attended the service.

CITY GARAGE BEGINS NEW BUILDING

On Thursday, February 7th dirt was broken for the erection of the new filling station and garage being built by the City Garage, C. R. Tinney, proprietor, on the Moore corner just across from the Davis Drug Company. In the days following a large quantity of material has been placed on the ground and the work of building has been begun.

The building as planned will be an ornament to Columbiana and well deserves to occupy this prominent corner. It will front on Main street and extend back 75 feet on College street. It will be built of a beautiful grey colored cement brick, the first to be used in Columbiana and will be one story high. That part of the building directly on the corner, a space of 30x30 will be constructed for a modern filling station and will be easily accessible from both streets, It will have all the latest conveniences for such a structure. The remainder of the large building will be arranged for a garage where all kinds of repair work will be done, welding, vulcanizing, etc. a show room and a stock room where a full line of accessories and parts for all cars will be carried.

Mr. Tinney expects to occupy the new building in about sixty days.

SHELBY COUNTY HIGH SCHOOL

Through the $30 appropriated by the county board of revenue, the high school and the state, each giving $10, thirty-six new books have been added to the library. Thirty other books have been added recently and in the near future a play will be given by the Expression department, the entire proceeds of which will be used to buy books. By increasing the library in this way more thorough work can be done.

The High school wishes to thank Mrs. Etta McMillan for presenting a Teachers' encyclopedia. The Culture Club contributed 25 volumes and Mrs. Sheffel has let the school use her library formerly owned by Miss Virginia Lott.

The High School now has a reading room supplied with such magazines as: The American, Literary Digest, Independent, Outlook, Current History, Hollands, Country Gentlemen and Progressive Farmer and the daily papers. The room is also supplied with every issue of the Reporter; a fine county paper which the boys and girls enjoy reading.

The High School has entered a national oratorical contest sponsored by the Birmingham-Age Herald. The winner will receive a scholarship to some leading college or university.

Miss Spafford, director of home economics for Alabama, was a visitor to the school Friday. She was profuse in praise of the work being done by Miss Winters. A plan is now under way to secure a cottage for the home economics department. To house this department in a separate building would give two rooms extra for extra high school expansion and in view of the enrollment of 146 for this year such an arrangement seems quite feasible.

Such an innovation would be in keeping with the progress now being made in Shelby county. At a propitious time, a plan will be submitted to the board of education and it is believed that the board will do all it can to make the dreams of a faithful teacher materialize.

Road Law to be Changed

A meeting of the Board of Revenue, was held Tuesday with all the members of the board present. Some time was given to discussion of changes proposed to be made in the plans for working roads in the county, full details of which will be published next week.

The board requests overseers that they do not receive any money nor undertake any more work on the roads until the new plan is announced.

D. C. Heaton of Wilsonville community was a visitor in town last Tuesday.

WOODROW WILSON
The Apostle of Peace

Called of God in an awful hour,
When chaos reigned anew,
He brought to his task a statesman's mind,
And the heart of a patriot true.

With a prophet's eye, he saw beyond
The bitter, cruel fray
The ushering in of a glorious time,
The dawning of a day

When justice for all weaker ones
Would be the care of the strong;
When none would dare to overreach,
Or do his neighbor wrong.

A nation caught the vision!
A nation born anew,
With faith to follow where he led,
Our hero, brave and true!

The slurs and gibes of lesser men
Take nothing from his fame.
He found his way to a nation's heart,
And there inscribed his name!

He gave his time, his strength his life
To bring about the time.
When Liberty and Brotherhood
Will live in every clime.

Rest, hero, statesman, patriot.
Your task on earth is done!
The Christ you followed calls to you,
"Servant of God, Well done!"

GADSDEN YOUTH SLAIN WHEN HE ATTEMPTS TO TAKE WIFE FROM PARENTS' HOME.

MARRIED A MONTH BUT SEPARATED

Father-in-Law Fired Three Shots, Picked Up Son-in-Law's Gun and Sent for the Police.

Gadsden—Joyce Jackson, 19, was shot and killed by George Cook, his father-in-law, at the Cook home in Alabama City, while the boy was trying by force to take his bride of a month out of the home. Fearing trouble during the afternoon Chief O'Bryant had stationed a policeman in the Cook home, Jackson having been reported to have made threats against the family. He and his wife had separated earlier in the week.

The policeman left the house at 5 o'clock and some time later Jackson appeared and pushed his way in, according to officers who made an investigation. Once inside he seized his wife by the arm and started dragging her toward the door. Cook and his wife interfered and as Jackson drew a gun Cook fired, sending a bullet into the boy's left breast. He fired three other shots and then, picking up Jackson's guns, sent for the police. Jackson died at a hospital.

LONG SESSION OF CONGRESS LIKELY

HOUSE HASN'T REALLY STARTED AND SENATE IS BUSY WITH MANY INVESTIGATIONS.

By EDWARD B. CLARK

Washington.—Predictions are that unless a lance is thrust into the flank of congress it will be found in session during the early cold weather time of next fall. It seems to be assured now that even if speed shall develop congress will sit through the time of the national conventions.

When this is said, the meaning is that it is congress and not congressmen that will do the sitting. There will be just enough members left here to keep up the semblance of organization. The rest will be in or around and about the convention halls. This is what happened in the year 1912 and in one or two other comparatively recent presidential election years.

The house has not started at its real legislative work. A score of obstinate gentlemen are throwing obstructions on the track in front of a locomotive, which hasn't any too much steam up anyway. Whether the obstructionists are right cannot be known, of course, until the days of the future.

Over in the senate things are worse than they are in the house. Some of the senators are engaged today in the of course perfectly proper investigation of the Teapot Dome scandal, while some others are at work trying to prove the wickedness of Edward W. Bok of Philadelphia in asking people to submit plans, one of which possibly might bring peace into the world.

Many Senate Investigations.

The senate as it is viewed here no longer is a legislative body, it has become almost wholly an investigating body. It has seven or eight investigations on its hands today, most of them instigated by a desire of this group or that group, this bloc or that bloc, or this or that larger group to make public its suspicion that somebody or other possibly may have done something wrong. This kind of investigation has been going on in congress ever since the legislators first met. Frequently they have resulted in nothing but a loss of time and money.

The difficulties in the way of legislative progress at the present session are increased materially by the fact that this is a presidential nomination and a presidential election year. Politics plus investigations plus the fact that no party has a majority that it can count upon are placing rocks in the road. The wonder probably is not that Nicholas Longworth, the leader of the Republicans in the house, is accomplishing so little, but that he is accomplishing as much as he is with the conditions that confront him and almost daily confound him.

There seems to be no reason today to change opinion that finally Longworth will succeed in effecting some kind of tax legislative compromise which will secure for a tax reducing bill the sanction of the house and ultimately get the approval of the President, provided, of course, that the senate does not force such changes in the face of the measure that the President will refuse to recognize it as worthy of anything but condemnation.

President Not Disturbed.

Congress has been in session for nearly two months. It apparently has been regarded as an achievement by the two houses that after some eight weeks of "sessioning" they have passed a bill which will allow certain cattle once driven across the line in Mexico to escape the drought to return into this country duty free. Probably this speedy achievement will be one of the legislative acts to which the pointing finger of pride will be directed in the coming campaign.

It is said that President Coolidge is unperturbed by the slowness of things on Capitol hill. He realizes probably that the political party of which he is the nominal head cannot do much in the house so long as certain members of it refuse to stay on the reservation. It may be that President Coolidge sees in obstructive tactics a certain element of strength for his own position on matters of legislation, for generally silent as he is, he has spoken his mind freely upon the matter of the things that he wants done and things he wants left undone.

Not many years ago one session of congress continued until it expired by limitation of law, to be succeeded immediately by the second session of the same congress. In other words, congress remained in session until noon of the first Monday in December and the second session began the instant that the first session ended. To all effect or purpose there was one session of congress to last from December of one year until March fourth of the second year thereafter.

It is perhaps unfair to discredit congress, certainly this year, with a do-nothing spirit. The trouble is that some of the members want to do something quickly one way while other members want to do the same thing quickly another way. In the house this year it is not so much a desire to take things easy as it is a desire not to let the other fellow have his way.

Canal Defenses Useless.

The "battle" in the Panama Canal zone is over. It was a "fight" between two sections of the armed services of the United States, one in attack and the other in defense of the waterway. The desire was to find out whether the zone was adequately prepared for defense against any great power with which the United States might become involved in hostilities.

The umpires of the conflict have declared that the Panama canal is completely at the mercy of any big nation that might look at it with possessive longing in its eyes and undertake to seize it in case hostilities with the United States should develop.

It is declared by the armed service authorities of the country that unless the American people are willing to spend about $15,000,000 for defense purposes and to appropriate each year a like sum for personnel to man the supplied armament, the canal will remain open to the seizure of the first great power which attacks.

Apparently congress does not want to appropriate money for anything except those things actually necessary to run the government on a peace and non-defensive basis. Unquestionably the congressmen have been influenced by the pacifists' propaganda which has insisted that there never will be any more war in the world, an insistence which history shows has been in evidence before the Israelites fought the Philistines.

It was not quite 11 years ago that the Panama canal was opened to navigation, October, 1913, to be exact. At that time there was a belief that full preparation for its defense in time of war had been made, but so rapid has been the advance in the efficiency of war material that the defense schemes of 1913 are today virtually obsolete.

Cheap at the Price.

It has been intimated to congress that $15,000,000 to save the canal from capture is not a huge sum of money to spend, for if the control of the waterway in time of war should fall to another nation the sea forces of the United States virtually would be incapable of offensive action. In brief, it has been suggested that congress well might appropriate the $15,000,000 in order to save the probable loss of a billion or two in the future.

One of the judges of the plans submitted in response to the offer of Edward W. Bok for a program of lasting peace for the world was Maj. Gen. J. G. Harbord.

General Harbord has been known not only as a soldier but as a peace lover. The chances are that his selection as one of the Bok jury of award was influenced by the fact that he is known to be a student of conditions which might make for peace in the world. The other night at Lowell, Mass., General Harbord spoke on the general subject of peace, although his address was given the somewhat sharp title of "Penalties of Pacifism." He said in part:

"The definite plans and propositions of American pacifists fall into three general groups. First it is urged that wars will arise from the mere existence in our country of military organizations. A second group comprises arguments that law has come into the world to supplant war as a means of settling international disputes. In a third category we find advocacy of disarmament by example, based upon the condition that if we should disarm and proclaim our high moral stand, the other nations would be shamed into a peaceful attitude and would disarm in turn, thus doing away with all possibility of future war.

Penalties of Lack of Training.

"Numbers of our casualties in France were due to the incomplete training. General Harries has told of a regiment which received replacements shortly before a two days' engagement, adding 400 men to its roll of 3,300; and 81 per cent of its killed and wounded were found to have been from those 400 inexperienced replacements. Another regiment came out of the Argonne with 50 per cent casualties, filled up with replacements, and went into the Lys battle in Flanders, where the casualties among the new replacements were just double those among the men of longer service."

General Harbord in his address told some interesting things about the examination of the 22,000 peace plans which were submitted in the Bok prize contest. He said that about 4,000 of the plans dealt with entrance into the League of Nations in one form or another; but over 3,300 contestants rested their hopes on conference of some kind, and that 3,000 were concerned with confidence that peace would come through some form of world court, while a thousand others were to the effect that the Golden Rule or a fixed day for prayer would bring the desired result.

In commenting on one phase of the contest the general said that the sterility of the greater part of the remainder of the plans is shown by the fact that the suggestions ranged from a "world congress of musicians through relativity, scientific research, to mobilization of the girl scouts." He said that several of the planners submitted birth control as a plan which would bring lasting peace.

The Last Straw

Recently a tramp taken up in a New York police court gave his birthplace as Boston.

"Yours," said the magistrate, "is a sad case. Yet you don't seem to thoroughly realize how low you have sunk."

The prisoner struck his brow with a pained gesture. "Heavens!" he exclaimed devoutly. "I have stood many indignities, but to be sentenced by a magistrate that splits his infinitives! This is the last blow!"

New York city entertains about 100,000 visitors every day and has between 300,000 and 400,000 commuters.

THE KITCHEN CABINET

(©, 1924, Western Newspaper Union.)

People have to live first before they can see, and they don't think until they are fed, and one needs always to have had enough turnips and cabbages to eat without the troubling about getting them, in order to see in them anything except food.—Mrs. Wilkins.

PIE, THE GREAT DESSERT

A pie to be a success must have a good crust, flaky, rich and tasty. The proportion for a good tender pastry is six tablespoonfuls of lard to one and one-half cupfuls of flour and one-half teaspoonful of salt. Mix the flour and lard with two knives or rub in with the fingers until the mixture is like cornmeal; add just a bit of cold water at a time to be sure it is not too moist. Roll out quickly and lightly and handle as little as possible. A cook who can make good pastry has reason to be proud, even remembering that when praised for your blueberry pie that you did not make the blueberries.

It is a good plan for extra flaky crust to reserve one-half cupful of the mixture before the water is added. Roll out the crust and sprinkle this over the pastry, folding and rolling again as if preparing puff paste. Use just half of the pastry, rolling each crust separately.

Gelatin Pie.—When one has tried all kinds of filling, this one will be enjoyed: Bake the pastry shell and pour in any desired flavor of jello, adding such fruit combinations as the family enjoys, then top with whipped cream when serving.

Currant Pie.—Take one and one-half cupfuls of the fruit, add two tablespoonfuls of flour, the yolks of two eggs and a tablespoonful of butter with a little salt. Put into a prepared crust and bake until the shell is baked. Cover with a meringue and brown. Serve cold. If the shell is already baked, cook the mixture, cool and fill the shell, then cover with meringue and brown.

Ethereal Apple Pie.—Bake eight large apples and put them through a sieve, chill, add three-fourths of a cupful of sugar and the whites of five eggs beaten stiff. Add a pinch of salt to the eggs when beating. Fold the eggs into the apple and bake in a buttered baking dish. Serve with cream and sugar.

In preparing an ordinary apple pie add a tablespoonful or two of butter on top of the sugar and seasoning; it adds greatly to the flavor of the pie.

If being forehanded you have put up several cans of fresh fruit crushed with sugar, and uncooked, you have a wealth of material for delicious pies. Try this one:

Cultivate the precious virtue of humanness, this wonderful personal asset. Open your heart to the heart throbs of the people all about you. Appreciate the essential brotherhood of man and become a true brother of men if you are not already.—H. A. Bruce.

CHESTNUT DISHES

While this wholesome nut is plentiful in the markets let us enjoy a few dishes with the nuts as a basis. For a delicious soup take a quart of the chestnuts, cook in boiling water to cover until the skins be easily removed. Drop again into boiling water and cook until tender with a small onion, three stalks of celery, a small bit of mace and a bit of bay leaf. Too much seasoning will disguise the flavor of the nut, which is undesirable. When the nuts are soft, mash and add salt, cayenne and a pint of hot milk. Bind with two tablespoonfuls each of butter and flour cooked together, add to the hot soup and cook for five minutes, then stir in the yolks of two eggs beaten with one-half cupful of cream. The onion may be omitted and finely shredded chives added on top of a spoonful of whipped cream. Serve in bouillon cups.

Brussels sprouts and chestnuts served together are considered a very choice dish. Cook both and serve with a nicely seasoned white sauce.

Nesselrode Pudding.—This is considered by epicures to be the pudding par excellence. Make a custard of four egg yolks, three cupfuls of milk, one and one-half cupfuls of sugar, one-half teaspoonful of salt; cook, strain and cool; add one pint of thin cream, one-fourth of a cupful of pineapple sirup, one and one-half cupfuls of chestnut puree (cooked nuts put through a sieve). Line a two-quart melon mold with part of the mixture; to the remainder add one-half cupful of maraschino cherries, one-quarter cupful of sultana raisins and eight chestnuts blanched and soaked in the maraschino sirup several hours to soften. Fill the mold, cover and pack in salt and ice. Serve with whipped cream and the maraschino sirup.

Deviled Chestnuts — Cook the slashed nuts in the shell, remove the shell and inner skin, dry well and place in a hot frying pan with butter, salt and red pepper. Toast until well-browned and serve as salted almonds.

"JIM IRWIN, SPEECH!"

SYNOPSIS.—Jennie Woodruff refuses to marry Jim Irwin, young farm hand, because of his financial condition and poor prospects. He is intellectually above his station, and has advanced ideas concerning the possibilities of school teaching and farming, for which he is ridiculed by many. In short, Jim is an off ox. He flocks by himself and reads books and has a philosophy of his own. But there are latent powers in him unsuspected even by himself and Opportunity comes knocking at his door. Jim is nominated for school-teacher, as a joke. The joke results in his election. He visits his scholars. Jennie is nominated for county superintendent of schools.

CHAPTER VI

—5—

Jim Talks the Weather Cold.

"Going to the rally, James?"

Jim had finished his supper, and yearned for a long evening in his attic den with his cheap literature. But as the district schoolmaster he was to some extent responsible for the protection of the school property, and felt some sense of duty as to exhibiting an interest in public affairs.

"I guess I'll have to go, mother," he replied regretfully. "I want to see Mr. Woodruff about borrowing his Babcock milk tester, and I'll go that way. I guess I'll go on to the meeting."

He kissed his mother when he went—a habit from which he never deviated, and another of those personal peculiarities which had marked him as different from the other boys of the neighborhood. His mother urged his overcoat upon him in vain—for Jim's overcoat was distinctly a bad one, while his best suit, now worn every day as a concession to his scholastic position, still looked passably well after several weeks of schoolroom duty. It seemed more logical to assume that the weather was milder than it really was, on that sharp October evening, and appear at his best, albeit rather aware of the cold. Jennie was at home, and he was likely to see and be seen of her.

"You can borrow that tester," said the colonel, "and the cows that go with it, if you can use 'em. They ain't earning their keep here. But how does the milk tester fit into the curriculum of the school? A decoration?"

"We want to make a few tests of the cows in the neighborhood," answered Jim. "Just another of my fool notions."

"All right," said the colonel. "Take it along. Going to the speakin'?"

"Certainly, he's going," said Jennie, entering. "This is my meeting, Jim."

"Surely, I'm going," assented Jim. "And I think I'll run along."

"I wish we had room for you in the car," said the colonel. "But I'm going around by Bronson's to pick up the speaker, and I'll have a chuck-up load."

"Not so much of a load as you think," said Jennie. "I'm going with Jim. The walk will do me good."

Any candidate warms to her voting population just before election; but Jennie had a special kindness for Jim. He was no longer a farm hand. The fact that he was coming to be a center of disturbance in the district, and that she quite failed to understand how his eccentric behavior could be harmonized with those principles of teaching which she had imbibed at the state normal school in itself lifted him nearer to equality with her. A public nuisance is really more respectable than a nonentity.

She gave Jim a thrill as she passed through the gate that he opened for her. White moonlight on her white furs suggested purity, exaltation, the essence of womanhood—things far finer in the woman of twenty-seven than the glamour thrown over him by the school girl of sixteen.

Jim gave her no thrill; for he looked gaunt and angular in his skimpy, ready-made suit, too short in legs and sleeves, and too thin for the season. Yet, as they walked along, Jim grew upon her. He strode on with immense strides, made slow to accommodate her shorter steps, and embarrassing her by his entire absence of effort to keep step. For all that, he lifted his face to the stars, and he pointed out the great open spaces in the Milky Way, wondering at their emptiness and at the fact that no telescope can find stars in them.

They stopped and looked. Jim laid his hard hands on the shoulders of her white fur collarette.

"What's the use of political meetings," said Jim, "when you and I can stand here and think our way out, even beyond the limits of our universe?"

"A wonderful journey," said she, not quite understanding his mood, "but while we roam beyond the Milky Way, we aren't getting any votes for me for county superintendent."

Jim said nothing. He was quite re-established on the earth.

"Don't you want me to be elected, Jim?"

Jim seemed to ponder this for some time—a period of taking the matter under advisement which caused Jennie to drop his arm and busy herself with her skirts.

"Yes," said Jim, at last; "of course I do."

Nothing more was said until they reached the schoolhouse door.

"Well," said Jennie rather indignantly, "I'm glad there are plenty of voters who are more enthusiastic about me than you seem to be!"

More interesting to a keen observer than the speeches were the unusual things in the room itself. On the blackboards, with problems in arithmetic, were calculations as to the feeding value of various rations for live stock, records of laying hens and computation as to the excess of value in eggs produced over the cost of feed.

Pinned to the wall were market reports on all sorts of farm products, and especially numerous were the statistics on the prices of cream and butter. There were files of farm papers piled about, and racks of agricultural bulletins. In one corner of the room was a typewriting machine, and in another a sewing machine. Parts of an old telephone were scattered about on the teacher's desk. A model of a piggery stood on a shelf, done in cardboard.

Instead of the usual collection of text-books in the desk, there were hectograph copies of exercises, reading lessons, arithmetical tables and essays on various matters relating to agriculture, all of which were accounted for by two or three hand-made hectographs—a very fair sort of printing plant—lying on a table.

The members of the school board were there, looking on these evidences of innovation with wonder and more or less disfavor. Things were disorderly. The text-books recently adopted by the board against some popular protest had evidently been pitched, neck and crop, out of the school by the man whom Bonner had termed a dub. It was a sort of contempt for the powers that be.

Colonel Woodruff was in the chair. After the speechifying was over, and the stereotyped, though rather illogical, appeal had been made for voters of the one party to cast the straight ticket, and for those of the other faction to scratch, the colonel rose to adjourn the meeting.

Newton Bronson, safely concealed behind taller people, called out, "Jim Irwin! speech!"

There was a giggle, a slight sensation, and many voices joined in the call for the new schoolmaster.

Colonel Woodruff felt the unwisdom of ignoring the demand. Probably he relied upon Jim's discretion and expected a declination.

Jim arose, seedy and lank, and the voices ceased, save for another suppressed titter.

"I don't know," said Jim, "whether this call upon me is a joke or not. If it is, it isn't a practical one, for I can't talk. I don't care much about parties or politics. I don't know whether I'm a Democrat, a Republican or a Populist."

This caused a real sensation. The nerve of the fellow! Really, it must in justice be said, Jim was losing himself in a desire to tell his true feelings. He forgot all about Jennie and her candidacy—about everything except his real, true feelings. This proves that he was no politician.

"I don't see much in this county campaign that interests me," he went on—and Jennie Woodruff reddened, while her seasoned father covered his mouth with his hand to conceal a smile. "The politicians come out into the farming districts every campaign and get us hayseeds for anything they want. They always have got us. They've got us again! They give us clodhoppers the glad hand, a cheap cigar, and a cheaper smile after election; and that's all. I know it, you all know it, they know it. I don't blame them so very much. The trouble is we don't ask them to do anything better.

"I want a new kind of rural school; but I don't see any prospect, no matter how this election goes, for any change in them. We in the Woodruff district will have to work out our own salvation. Our political ring never'll do anything but the old things. They don't want to, and they haven't sense enough to do it if they did. That's all—and I don't suppose I should have said as much as I have!"

There was stark silence for a moment when he sat down, and then as many cheers for Jim as for the principal speaker of the evening, cheers mingled with titters and catcalls. Jim felt as if he had made an ass of himself. And as he walked out of the door, the future county superintendent passed by him in high displeasure, and walked home with someone else.

Jim found the weather much colder than it had been while coming. He really needed an Eskimo's fur suit.

CHAPTER VII

New Wine and Old Bottles.

In the little strip of forest which divided the sown from the sown wandered two boys in earnest converse. They seemed to be Boy Trappers, and from their backloads of steel-traps one of them might have been Frank Merriwell, and the other Dead-Shot Dick. The boy who resembled Frank Merriwell was Raymond Simms. The other, whose overalls were fringed, who wore a cartridge belt about his person, and carried hatchet, revolver, and a long knife with a deerfoot handle, and who so studiously looked like Dead-Shot Dick, was our old friend of the road gang, Newton Bronson. Newton put down his load, and sat upon a stump to rest.

Raymond Simms was dimly conscious of a change in Newton since the day when they met and helped select Colonel Woodruff's next year's seed corn. Newton's mother had a mother's confidence that Newton was now a good boy, who had been led astray by other boys, but had reformed. Jim Irwin had a distinct feeling of optimism. Newton had quit tobacco and beer, casually stating to Jim that he was "in training." Since Jim had shown his ability to administer a knockout to that angry chauffeur, he seemed to this hobbledehoy peculiarly a proper person for athletic confidences.

Newton's mind seemed gradually filling up with new interests. Jim attributed much of this to the clear mountain atmosphere which surrounded Raymond Simms, the ignorant barbarian driven out of his native hills by a feud. Raymond was of the open spaces, and refused to hear fetid things that seemed out of place in them.

As the reason for Newton's improvement in manner of living, Raymond, out of his own experience, would have had no hesitation in naming the school and the schoolmaster.

"I wouldn't go back on a friend," said Newton, seated on the stump with his traps on the ground at his feet, "the way you're going back on me."

"You got no call to talk thataway," replied the mountain boy. "How'm I goin' back on you?"

"We was goin' to trap all winter," asseverated Newton, "and next winter we were goin' up in the north woods together."

"You know," said Raymond somberly, "that we cain't run any trap line and do whut we got to do to he'p Mr. Jim."

Newton sat mute as one having no rejoinder.

"Mr. Jim," went on Raymond, "needs all the he'p every kid in this settlement kin give him. He's the best friend I ever had. I'm a pore ignerant boy, an' he teaches me how to do things that will make me something."

"Darn it all!" said Newton.

"You know," said Raymond, "that you'd think mahgty small of me, if I'd desert Mr. Jim Irwin."

"Well, then," replied Newton, seizing his traps and throwing them across his shoulder, "come on with the traps, and shut up! What'll we do when the school board gets Jennie Woodruff to revoke his certificate and make him quit teachin', hey?"

"Nobody'll eveh do that," said Raymond. "I'd set in the schoolhouse do' with my rifle and shoot anybody that'd come to th'ow Mr. Jim outen the school."

"Not in this country," said Newton. "This ain't a gun country."

"But it orto be either a justice kentry, or a gun kentry," replied the mountain boy. "It stands to reason it must be one 'r the otheh, Newton."

"No, it don't neither," said Newton dogmatically.

"Why should they th'ow Mr. Jim outen the school?" inquired Raymond. "Ain't he teachin' us right?"

"Yennie, this man Jim Irwin needs to be lined up."

TALES OF THE OLD FRONTIER

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

(©, 1923, Western Newspaper Union.)

THEY SHOWED HOW A CHEYENNE WARRIOR CAN DIE

IN THE summer of 1890 Head Chief and Young Mule, two young Northern Cheyenne Indians on the Lame Deer reservation in Montana, were accused of the murder of a boy named Hugh Boyle. When the authorities demanded that their tribesmen surrender the two braves, the Indians tried to settle the matter according to their ancient custom. They offered the largest number of horses and other Indian wealth that had ever in the history of the tribe been given as an atonement for killing a man, but when the agent told them that this would not do, the chiefs sent him this message:

"You will hang Head Chief and Young Mule if we give them up. When a man is hanged his soul cannot escape from his body and it, too, is killed. That is no death for a warrior. Let them die fighting."

So they announced that on a certain date the two men would attack the agency and they expected the soldiers to be on hand to defend it. This proposition for a pre-arranged and spectacular suicide was a startling one, but the agent had no alternative but to accept it. On September 13, the day appointed, a troop of the First cavalry and the Indian police were drawn up in battle array before the agency. On all of the surrounding heights sat the Cheyennes to see the battle. And with the stage thus set, the principal actors soon appeared for their part in the drama.

That morning the medicine man had anointed them in preparation for their ride to death. They had put on their finest clothes and painted themselves.

Then, singing their death songs, Head Chief and Young Mule dashed forward, two men against more than a hundred. Under the hail of bullets that greeted them Young Mule went down. But Head Chief seemed to bear a charmed life. He rode unscathed past the line of soldiers and police firing pointblank at him until he was out of range. Then he turned and deliberately rode back, and this time a bullet found its mark.

Later it was learned that Young Mule had had no part in killing Boyle, but a mistaken sense of honor prevented his trying to prove his innocence.

THE OATH OF A RANGER

BACK in the days when Arizona was "cow country" two men rode the range together for one of the big cattle outfits and, although totally different in temperament, Bill Smith and Carlos Tafolla were pals whose friendship had been cemented by years of hardship and danger. When the cattle business declined in that territory, Tafolla enlisted in Capt. Burton Mossman's Arizona Rangers, a splendid body of picked men sworn to uphold the law and to place duty over friendship, love or life itself. As for Smith—he drifted from one job to another.

In 1900 a band of outlaws who had been stealing horses, robbing banks and post offices and committing murders in New Mexico, were driven over into Arizona. By a strange turn of fate it was Tafolla and another Ranger named Maxwell who discovered the bandits' stronghold in a deep canyon in the White mountains.

It was the custom of the Arizona Rangers before going into action to take the Ranger's oath. So Maxwell and Tafolla rode side by side, clasped each other's hand and repeated the secret words that bound them to stick to each other even unto death. They were within 50 yards of the outlaw camp before their approach was discovered. When Maxwell lifted his voice in a demand for surrender there was an ominous silence. Then a man stepped out into view.

"Hello, Tafolla," he said.

"Hello, Smith," replied the Ranger quietly.

"This is hard luck," said the outlaw. "You're as good as dead, Tafolla, if you try to arrest us. We outnumber you and we will naver be taken alive."

When Tafolla told him that an Arizona Ranger never counted the odds, Smith reminded him of his own reputation as a marksman who never missed.

"I don't want to kill you, Carlos!" he pleaded, "For the sake of old times, go away. If you will, we'll leave this country and never come back."

"I'm sorry, Bill, but we can't. We've just taken the Ranger's oath. But if things come out as you say, do me one favor. Get word to Captain Mossman that we did the best we could," said Tafolla.

Then the Rangers started forward and the shooting began. Smith still tried to scare them away. He put four bullets through the top of Tafolla's high-crowned Stetson. The Ranger continued to advance, firing as he came. Then Smith lowered his sights and shot his old friend between the eyes.

Bill Smith kept his word. A few weeks later Captain Mossman received a letter from the outlaw, somewhere in Mexico, telling how Rangers Maxwell and Tafolla had kept the Ranger's oath.

Grand Jury Report

To Honorable Edward S. Lyman, Judge of the Eighteenth Judicial Circuit of Alabama.

We, the Grand Jury in and for the January Term, 1924, of the Circuit Court of Shelby County, Alabama, do hereby respectfully report to this court as follows:

We have investigated in our deliberations 101 causes; we have examined 180 witnesses, and do hereby return into this court 69 indictments.

We are glad to report that this Grand Jury has not been called upon to investigate a very large number of cases, and that it seems that our people are violating the laws less than for many years and except for a few serious offenses we find that the greater number of our indictments are for crimes which do not involve moral turpitude.

We respectfully report that we have examined the books and bonds of the County Officers of Shelby County, and we find the books of each of the officers very nicely kept, and the bonds of all officers except one, of sufficient amount and well secured. We found one officer who has a bond secured by individuals, two of whom have died since the execution of said bond. This officer agrees to strengthen his bond, and we suggest that he does so at an early date.

We further find the flooring in the office of the Probate Judge in bad repair, and suggest that steps be taken at once to mend this condition.

We further report that the plastering in the court room is in very bad shape, and the same should be remedied before damage is done, which will increase the cost greatly to make repairs.

We further report that we have examined the jail of the County and find the same fairly well kept, but we again call attention to the fact that there is no enclosure around the jail. Other Grand Juries for several years have urged that this condition be remedied, but nothing has been done yet. Since the meeting of the last Grand Jury a prisoner has escaped from said jail, who was charged with three serious offenses, some one having handed through the window, which is possible now to do, saws and implements necessary to make his escape. We urge again that a substantial steel fence be erected around the jail in order that said jail may be made safe for the keeping of prisoners.

We have inspected the alms house thoroughly, and are glad to report that the inmates report that they are well fed and are well pleased with their keeper, as well as the keeper's good wife. We suggest, however, that we found bedding and covering needed very badly, at least six mattresses, twelve blankets, six comforts and six pillows, and we specially recommend that the old mattresses we find there should be burned, and a good portion of the old covering should also be burned, as the same is not fit to be used by human beings. We further suggest that a wire fender should be provided to be placed in front of the fire in the room occupied by two unfortunate blind women, it being dangerous for them to attempt to be around the fire without some protecton therefrom. We further suggest that the porch of the keeper's house and some other porches to the houses need repairing, and the same should be done as early as possible. We urge that the Board of Revenue at once take up the matters that we suggest and see that these recommendations are followed.

The remainder of the report deals at length with the investigation made by the Grand Jury of conditions at the Aldrich Mines near Montevallo and of the recent mutiny of state convicts at that place. Three days were given to this investigation; two days to the examination of witnesses and one day spent at the mines.

Some interesting facts concerning the convict lease system that now prevails in Alabama are brought out. It is explained that when a man is convicted he is sent to Kilby prison where he is examined by a board of physicians and classified as Number 1, 2, 3, or 4, as his physical condition may warrant. But when a convict is sent to the coal mine he is at first required to do only the task of a fourth class man, this being the lightest task assigned. After he has sufficient experience in coal mining, the convict's task is increased until he has reached the classification placed upon him by the board of physicians.

The wardens are reported to be well qualified for their places and deserving the confidence of state officials. Neither the Coal Company nor any of its agents has any authority whatsoever to administer punishment. The "dog house" is described and its use explained and the recommendation is made that in extreme cases the lash is the most effective punishment to be administered to a convict.

The report shows that among the 150 convicts leased from the state by the mining company were several convicts who were at Banner Mines in September and who had part in the mutiny that occurred at that place. On Christmas day one of the leaders in the Banner Mine disturbance was heard to say: "We made Christians out of Banner and the same thing will be done here in a few days." One of his fellows replied to this that "a $15,000 to $20,000 loss would break the little company."

"The testimony, however, convinces us," says the report, "that the real excuse for the mutiny was the punishment administered to a convict on the night prior to the mutiny, which punishment we find not severe and in our judgement was justly warranted. The cause for such punishment being that this convict had written letters to two state officials, as well as a lady, neither of whom was connected in any way with the governor's office nor the convict department, and the information contained in said letters was false and baseless and that in one instance the name of a convict who had never served at Aldrich was signed to the letter."

Only eight or ten convicts were willingly engaged in the mutiny, according the to report.

The report is signed by R. M. Borum, as foreman of the body. Those who served with Mr. Borum are as follows: Walter Johnson, J. A. Cunningham, S. R. Sell, J. J. Burks, L. M. Latham, Tinton Wyatt, Claude Ray, J. W. Gardner, C. T. Hughes, E. B. Lindsey, Willie Howard, J. T. McGaughey, R. S. Cunningham, J. L. Vick, J. E. Goodwin, J. S. Harper, W. P. McConaughy.

TH' OLE GROUCH

OSCAR W. UNDERWOOD--- DEMOCRACY'S SAFEGUARD

Record of Senator Underwood One of Service—Opposition Appealing to Prejudice in Selfish Fight to Prevent Alabama Taking Great Forward Step.

ISSUE IS NOT: "UNDERWOOD OR ANOTHER," BUT: "ARE WE ALABAMIANS."

The Democracy of Alabama will go to the polls on March 11 to say to the nation, "We are (or we are not) ready to see a Southern man elevated to the high office of President of the United States."

Stripped of all garnishment, excess verbiage and political partisanship, that is the proposition which will face the voters—"Alabama is (or is not) ready to see her foremost son placed in charge of the nation's affairs." That her loyal citizens will vote affirmatively is conceded by even the bitterest foe of Alabama's present great opportunity—as evidence mounts up in all sections of the state showing the tremendous drift of public sentiment toward Senator Underwood and his sterling leadership in this, Alabama's brightest hour.

The present campaign is not just an ordinary political battle, but is a most extraordinary one, in that it permits Alabama to tender wholeheartedly her greatest citizen to the nation to be its chief executive. It is not a choice of two issues; nor of two men—but simply, and finally, an endorsement of the man who, representing Alabama in the halls of Congress, sheds lustre on her name, brought recognition to her far and away beyond any ever known before, and, in serving her rendered such signal service to the people of the whole country that a nationwide clamor is going up for "UNDERWOOD."

UNDERWOOD—THE MAN

Oscar W. Underwood, the only Alabamian who is a bona fide presidential possibility, is a Protestant (an Episcopalian); is both a York and Scottish Rite Mason (being one of the very few 33d degree Masons in this country), and is a member of the Knights of Pythias and Red Men.

He is the head of a family, the father of two sons, both of whom participated in the world war. His long life of service to his state and people, begun when he was still a young man, fits him most exceptionally for the high position of Chief Executive at a time when he is still in the prime of life. He is a lifelong Democrat. Sincerity, candor and a broad understanding, equip him splendidly to properly interpret the thoughts and respond to the wishes of the people and their many problems.

Oscar Underwood is a man who stands for the cleansing of politics, the honest and fearless enforcement of all laws, the reduction of a ruthlessly dishonest tariff, favoring vast financial interests as against the masses, and for a foreign policy which upholds the rights of American citizens, while giving every consideration to the people of other lands.

UNDERWOOD—HIS RECORD

The record of Senator Underwood is one of long service and valuable accomplishments. He wrote the one irreproachable tariff bill. His part in the construction of the great governmental bills stands out. His debates on fiscal measures, on appropriations, on disputed and controverted items of federal income and expense are always fair, exact, briefly stated and unanswerable. He supported and expedited passage of the Webb-Kenyon shipping bill—the prohibition measure protecting dry states and making the submission of the 18th Amendment easier; he voted for the Reed Bone Dry Law; he supported the Federal Reserve Act; Good Roads Bill; Muscle Shoals and the National Defense Act Farm Loan Act; Rural Credits Bill; the Federal Eight-Hour day bill; he opposed the Frey Ship Subsidy Bill; he supported the employer's liability bill the Immigration bill; the Anti-Trust Act; The Federal Vocational Educational Act; the Lever Agricultural Extension Act; and many other pieces of constructive legislation. Right now he is doing all he can for an immediate and decided reduction in taxes.

UNDERWOOD—AND PROHIBITION

Quoting from Senator Underwood's speech made in Montgomery July 31 1923: "That decision made by the people of this country (adopting the Eighteenth Amendment) foreclosed the issue so far as I was concerned" .....and "now that it is the supreme law of the land I would enforce it in its entire integrity.. I know of no reason why any man should doubt my integrity on that question." "Every appropriation that has been presented to the Senate for funds necessary to enforce prohibition in this country I have voted for." .....

In response to the Senator's ringing declarations regarding prohibition Rev. W. B. Crumpton, the patriarch of prohibition in Alabama, and president of the Alabama Anti-Saloon League, said: "I have always admired Oscar Underwood, and I have differed from him on only one question, prohibition. When he declares for the enforcement of the Eighteenth Amendment in its entire integrity, that satisfies me."

Later Senator Underwood wrote Dr. Crumpton: "The cry that is being made for light wines and beer does not meet with my approval. It misleads a good many people, and is not attainable under my interpretation of the Constitution."

Following this letter Senator Underwood wrote again to Dr. Crumpton: "In the letter I wrote you I was endeavoring, as far as I know how, to make it perfectly clear and plain that I believe in the enforcement of the Eighteenth Amendment in its entirety; that there was no subterfuge or concealment on my part, and I stood for the honest, just and true enforcement of the law of the land, as the prohibition amendment is today. I have no desire for any concealment about the matter, as I always conduct my political affairs in the open."

Commenting on the foregoing Dr. Crumpton says: "Those splendid words should satisfy the most exacting prohibitionist. Alabamians have a great opportunity to honor their state by casting a solid vote for her Senator. Fellow-Democrats and prohibitionists, let's get in behind the movement and put Oscar Underwood in the presidential chair! In honoring him we honor our country and ourselves."

Bravely and whole-heartedly reinforcing Dr. Crumpton in his splendid stand for Alabama and her gifted son is Dr. H. H. McNeil, one of the Fathers of Methodism in Alabama, who was vice-president of the Alabama Anti-Saloon League when it was in the midst of the fight for prohibition.

Despite all this an effort is being made to inject the prohibition issue in the present campaign, but it just will not "inject." The men who have done the real work in the prohibition ranks are, largely, enthusiastically supporting Senator Underwood.

UNDERWOOD—AND THE FARMER

Some of the measures of supreme interest to farmers in which Senator Underwood has assisted are: The establishment of the great nitrate plants at Muscle Shoals, which will eventually mean so much to farmers all over the country; Farm Land Bank and Rural Credit legislation; Soil Survey appropriations, and the first Soil Survey in Alabama; Good Roads appropriations; flood relief; experiment station work; the Smith-Lever bill; farm demonstration work, and many others.

Throughout his thirty years' service Mr. Underwood has followed a consistently constructive policy with respect to the treatment of agricultural interests. This has been embodied in two fixed principles: First, that every possible aid should be advanced toward helping the farmer increase his productivity, and, second, that an avenue should be provided through which he can profitably dispose of that which he produces. Mr. Underwood has consistently advocated "co-operative marketing," and aided materially in government assistance thereto.

UNDERWOOD—AND LABOR

The friends of Labor among public men are generally of two types—those who act and those who articulate; and it not infrequently happens that he who harangues the most accomplishes the least.

During his thirty years of service in Congress, Labor has received at his hands fair, honest and conscientious treatment. His record with respect to the measures in the interest of the man who earns his bread by honest toil has been one which will stand the test. Unlike many of those who cater to class interests, he has made no spectacular display of his advocacy of the things urged by Labor. The record shows him to be a real and true friend of the workingman without having sought advantage, credit or praise for having done that which he regarded as beneficial and just. The fact that for twenty years he represented in the House a strong Labor section without serious opposition is conclusive that his record was generally regarded as fair.

UNDERWOOD—AND TAXATION

Senator Underwood has ever stood for equitable taxation for revenue only. Right now his voice is lifted in an effort to relieve the tremendous burden of taxation under which our people groan. Hear his words: "The people are becoming overburdened by extravagant appropriations of public moneys on the one hand, and the reckless and oppressive levies of taxes on the other." . . . "The drain upon the private resources of the people has already become so great that it stands forcibly in the way of business expansion." . . . "The only justification for taxation must be the collection of money in order that the government may economically function for the benefit of the people, and, when a greater burden of taxation is laid upon the people than is necessary to meet governmental expenditures, in my judgment there can be but one course to pursue, and that is to reduce the taxes." Senator Underwood is standing today for an immediate and decided downward revision of taxes.

UNDERWOOD—AND THE BONUS

Senator Underwood considers the bonus as unwise, equally for the soldier as for the civilian.

It is a proposal to engage in a wild orgy of giving away money, without first making ample provision for the money to give away. Those who favor the bonus, say that it will be a tax on the rich man. The bonus will be a tax on all the people. It will be a doubtful blessing to a few and a positive burden to the many. The people of America, including the soldier himself, would be paying for the bonus for years to come; and, as is usual in such cases, would eventually pay two or three dollars, very likely, for every one given to the soldiers. The bonus is un-Democratic and un-American and should not be countenanced. It and tax reduction do not go together and cannot possibly go together.

UNDERWOOD—AND MUSCLE SHOALS

No one questions the loyalty of the Sheffield Standard to the cause of Muscle Shoals. Hear what that paper says of Senator Underwood in connection with this gigantic proposition: "For years they (the people of the Tennessee Valley) have fought for the development of Muscle Shoals; for years they have dreamed of 'The Valley Blooming Like a Rose.' All that time in Washington they have had the service of a leader, renowned from coast to coast, from the great lakes to the gulf, for his courage, his statesmanship and ability (Underwood). Recently when Senator Underwood was asked his opinion of the Joint power company bid for Muscle Shoals [illegible] its effect on the Muscle Shoals proposition, he stated 'that he had not read it; that he started out with Ford and it was his intention to stay with him.' The prosperity the people of the Tennessee Valley have enjoyed since the government plants have been located here; the steady employment that our people have had in all trades and all walks of life, are all directly attributable to Oscar W. Underwood. Knowing these things, we are confident that the people of this district will go on record without a dissenting vote, proclaiming to the world that our folks are appreciative that we believe in love and respect and are anxious to see the highest honor attainable by man, 'The Presidency of the United States,' won by 'our state's' most able leader and distinguished son, Oscar W. Underwood.

UNDERWOOD—AND THE OTHER ISSUES

No one who is at all informed is in doubt as to where Senator Underwood stands on any of the issues of the day, either state or national. His wisdom and his courage, both well known, cause him to take a stand and then make it known to all men. He never appeals to prejudice; he never plays to ignorance. He is four-square, open and aboveboard, and his political enemies all respect him for his fearlessness.

UNDERWOOD—AND THE PREFERENTIAL PRESIDENTIAL ELECTION

The Democratic State Executive Committee is the constituted authority of the party. Its mandate is the law of the party. This authority has duly and regularly called an election in which each Democrat is given the opportunity to directly express his choice. That election on March 11 will be binding upon the party and regular members of the Democratic party.

In this duly and regularly called election of the Democratic party the members of that party will vote their choice for the Democratic nomination for President of the United States. They vote directly. Therefore they will show whom they desire as the Democratic nominee.

UNDERWOOD AND THE NOMINATION

The time has come to destroy that miserable political theory, now largely confined to the South, that a candidate from the South cannot be elected President of the United States. The prejudice which once existed against a Southern candidate has just about disappeared. If any basis ever existed for it the course of events has swept it away. Since the Civil War the United States has been engaged in two foreign wars, in both of which the South has played its full part and sealed with the blood of its sons the pledge of its loyalty to the Union.

For sixty years the South has been the backbone of the Democratic party; it has been content to be considered ineligible for anything but furnishing the votes. Now the whole country is ready to do away with this lingering ghost of sectional feeling. That a man from the South can be elected is proven by the expressions of the most influential papers in all sections of the country, commenting on Senator Underwood's candidacy.

In Senator Underwood we have, as is universally conceded, a candidate who rises to the full stature of a Presidential candidate; and now is the time to wipe out all sectional lines in politics by lining up solidly behind the one man from Alabama who has a chance to win.

UNDERWOOD—AND HIS OPPOSITION

In the great service which Senator Underwood, called by a nation's people, stands ready to render his country, he finds himself opposed by a little band of self-seeking individuals. They have no distant hope or half developed idea of being successful in their efforts to discredit Senator Underwood before the people of the nation; but, piqued at the public's reception of their presidential aspirations, they run on, hoping against hope for the impossible to happen. There is nothing constructive in their candidacy or past record.

UNDERWOOD—ALABAMA'S OPPORTUNITY

The Piedmont Journal, under the caption: "Underwood—Alabama's and the South's Opportunity," says:

"The Journal, like many others, has not agreed with all the political views of Mr. Underwood, (but) regardless of any personal or political differences which the Journal may have with Mr. Underwood, we are laying these aside in the spirit of loyal home pride, eager to unite in the greatest opportunity Alabama or the South has ever had, and boost Oscar W. Underwood for President of the United States. The opportunity confronting a Southern state, Alabama, our own beloved state, of furnishing the man for the greatest political honor in the world, is an honor that comes seldom, an honor in fact, not accorded any southern state in many years, and the bigness, the magnitude of the possibilities of Alabama's opportunity should inspire every loyal Alabama Democrat at least to put down whatever personal objections he might have to Alabama's favored son and stand one hundred per cent for Oscar Underwood. Anybody with any knowledge of things political should know that no other candidate in Alabama, or the South, is considered in the slightest degree, as a formidable candidate for this tremendous political honor. The movement for Underwood is not merely Alabama-wide, it is nation-wide. From every section of the nation comes the voice of the Underwood supporters so that to fail to realize that he is the most logical and most prominently considered Democrat in the nation today, is to be uninformed. It is a great honor and one that comes to few men, but the chief concern to Alabama is the corresponding honor, prestige and power that would come to us all in Underwood's nomination and subsequent election. Let us forget other differences and objections should we have any, and think only of Alabama's opportunity, and enter loyally wholeheartedly and enthusiastically into the great opportunity—that of boosting our own son—Oscar W. Underwood, for President of the United States of America."

And thus the cry for Underwood is echoed and re-echoed, not only throughout Alabama and the South, but over all the nation.

UNDERWOOD—AND MARCH 11

And now the verdict which the people of Alabama will render March 11 is in the making. There is no question but that it will be: "We are Alabamians—solid for Oscar Underwood."

How Population Has Grown in L&N Served Territory

Population is always the gauge of prosperity. No matter what a state or community's natural resources are, its real wealth is no more than the extent to which its resources are developed. People are needed to till the soil, operate the mines, husband the stock, run the factories, and carry on the other work necessary to upbuilding all land.

In 1850, when the L. & N. came into being, seven of the Southern states which it serves to-day (Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi and Tennessee) had an average population of 15 people per square mile. To-day, seventy four years later, this population is increased to 43.8—or nearly three times as many people as in 1850.

Adequate and reliable transportation, largely supplied by the L. & N., has made possible the growth of this territory. People have been brought from elsewhere to join in its development. Conveniently accessible markets have been provided for its products.

Intercourse between the states, and with the rest of the world, has been made easy of accomplishment.

Important as this has been, the L. & N. has done still more. Through its Immigration and Industrial Department it has invested time and money in exploiting the South to other parts of the country. It has induced many farmers and manufacturers to come in and settle here; thus—in addition to its basic service as a carrier—making a definite contribution to the South's growth.

This work the L. & N. will continue to perform, constantly striving to make its service a greater and more helpful factor in the upbuilding of its territory.

One of the most hard hearted and flagrant misdemeanors I know is the practice of "bird threshing" Were these innocents killed for food some extenuation could be found, but just to kill the songsters and let them lie where they fall seems as cruel as it is senseless.

At last we hear Gee! Haw! It sounds good too. So many oats were killed that more has to be planted. The winter has been so severe that practically no breaking has been done.

It is yet time to order strawberries to set out in the spring, and this is one of the most delightful of fruits as well as the easiest grown. The late Col. Burrows of Tennessee said the strawberry was the only fruit to escape in all its sweetness from the Garden of Eden; that it did so by running through a crevice in the wall.

We owe Luther Shaw of Aldrich a vote of thanks. He is one live wire as a road overseer. He is planning to grade and slag the road from Montevallo to Aldrich. I hope some other overseers will get some of his pep. It is understood he will get considerable cooperation from merchants and the people generally.

Percy Lee was in Birmingham last week on business.

more Ford cars and trucks were produced last year than the previous year, an increase of over 50 per cent.

In spite of this tremendous increase in production, it was impossible to meet delivery requirements during the spring and summer months when orders for 350,000 Ford Cars and Trucks could not be filled.

This year winter buying for immediate delivery has been more active than ever before—and in addition 200,000 orders have already been booked through the Ford Weekly Purchase Plan for spring delivery.

These facts clearly indicate that the demand during this spring and summer will be far greater than ever, and that orders should be placed immediately with Ford Dealers as a means of protection against delay in securing your Ford Car or Truck or Fordson Tractor.

CHARACTER TELLS THE STORY!

People throughout this country are giving more thought to hygiene and to the purity of remedies on the market, but no one doubts the purity of Doctor Pierce's vegetable medicines, for they have been so favorably known for over fifty years that everyone knows they are just what they are claimed to be. These medicines are the result of long research by a well-known physician, R. V. Pierce, M. D., who compounded them from health-giving herbs and roots long used in sickness by the Indians. Dr. Pierce's reputation as a leading and honored citizen of Buffalo, is a sufficient guarantee for the purity of that splendid tonic and blood medicine, the Golden Medical Discovery, and the equally fine nerve tonic and system builder for women's ailments, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Temple of Diana One of World's Seven Wonders

One of the seven wonders of the ancient world was the Temple of Diana at Ephesus, built in the Fourth century before Christ, and burned by the Goths in 262 A. D. But the temple was doomed to early destruction at the hands of a half-crazed Greek named Herostratus. In 356 B. C., on the night when Alexander the Great was born, he burned the temple to the ground. When he was arraigned for his crime he said he had done it to make an immortal name for himself, and he had chosen the night Alexander was born because Diana was the goddess of childbirth, and he believed that she would be in Macedonia to bless the little prince's arrival.

A new temple, started in 350, became a storehouse for great gifts. In 262 A. D. invading Goths destroyed the city and burned the temple. Only a few of the columns escaped, and they were used in the mosque of St. Sophia at Constantinople.—Detroit News.

Interesting Story About "Devil Bridge" in Wales

There are many "devil bridges" in Europe, and nearly all have legends to account for the name. One of the more picturesque of these satanic bridges is in Wales, at Aberystwyth.

The story, as told by an English writer, is that Megan Llandunach was one day at her wits' end to know how to bring her only cow across the chasm. The devil then appeared to her and offered to bridge the gorge if, in return, he might have the first living thing that crossed it. Megan agreed, and the devil, thinking the woman would be the first to pass, flung down his bridge. But Megan was no fool. Taking a crust from her pocket, she threw it to the other side of the gorge and sent her dog after it. The outwitted devil, so the story goes, took his defeat very sensibly and left his bridge there for future generations of the clever Welsh.—Detroit News.

TO many people it may seem incredible that a habit so common as coffee-drinking can be harmful. Yet if your doctor were to enumerate the common causes of indigestion, headache, and run-down condition, he would be likely to mention coffee.

(©, 1924, Western Newspaper Union.)

LESSON FOR FEBRUARY 17

JOSHUA AND THE CONQUEST OF CANAAN

LESSON TEXT—Josh. 1:1-9; 23:1-3.

GOLDEN TEXT—Not one thing hath failed of all the good things which the Lord your God spake concerning you.—Josh. 23:14.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Lessons From the Life of Joshua.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Joshua and the Conquest of Canaan.

The book of Joshua, from which our lesson is taken, is a history of the conquest of the Promised Land and its apportionment among the tribes of Israel. It takes its name from its principal character, Joshua. During the wilderness journey he was Moses' minister and captain of his army. When Moses was denied the privilege of going over the Jordan, Joshua was appointed to the leadership of Israel. Moses, the representative of the law, brought Israel to the borders of Canaan. Joshua was the man chosen to lead the people into the place of rest. The name, "Joshua", has the same derivation as the name "Jesus".

I. Joshua's Call (Josh. 1:1, 2).

Moses was dead, but God's work must go on. The work was continued by calling Joshua to take it up. Joshua, no doubt, was sorrowful over the loss of his master, but there was now no time for mourning.

II. God Renews His Promise of the Land to Israel (Josh. 1:3, 4).

This promise had been given to Abraham and renewed to Isaac, Jacob and Moses. It is now renewed to Israel when they are about to enter upon its possession. The borders of the land were "from the wilderness and this Lebanon even unto the great river, the river Euphrates, all the land of the Hittites and unto the great sea toward the going down of the sun" (v. 4). The nearest it was ever possessed was during the reigns of David and Solomon, though not then fully realized. This land still belongs to the Jews and in God's own time they shall possess it. Their possession of this land was due entirely to themselves. God promised them that wherever their feet set upon the land, it was theirs. If they failed to secure possession, it was because they failed to claim it.

III. God's Presence Promised to Joshua (Josh. 1:5).

Joshua was entering upon a perilous and difficult enterprise, but the Lord said, as He was with Moses so He would be with him. The difficulties before him were:

1. The Jordan River (v. 2). This river was now at its flood (Josh. 3:15), making it impossible for armies to cross.

2. The People Were Living in Walled Cities (Num. 13:38). Notwithstanding this, God is ready to insure success. (1) "I will not fail thee, nor forsake thee" (v. 5). (2) "There shall not any man be able to stand before thee" (v. 5). (3) "As I was with Moses, so will I be with thee." Joshua had been with Moses throughout their forty years' experience, from the Egyptian deliverance to the time of his death. Because he believed that God was with his master, he was willing and ready to cross Jordan at its flood and courageously meet the enemies on the other side.

IV. Conditions of Blessings in the Land (Josh. 1:6-9).

1. "Be Strong and of Good Courage" (v. 6). His mission was to go in and divide the land among the tribes for an inheritance. It required strength and courage to do this.

2. Unwavering Obedience to the Word of God (v. 7). In a land of idolatry it required much courage to be true to God. Prosperity and success are conditioned upon unswerving obedience to God's commands. In all his work he must conform his life to the law of God. To pass from the path outlined therein would bring disaster and ruin. In order to accomplish this, the law of the Lord must be in his mouth continually. He was to meditate therein day and night. Joshua rendered prompt obedience. He did not stop to cavil, but at once gave orders for the march. God made the plan and gave the directions.

V. Joshua's Retrospect (Josh. 3:1-3).

As his life was now drawing to a close, he summoned the people and rulers to give some farewell counsels.

1. Rehearses God's Goodness (v. 1). God had given rest unto Israel from all their enemies.

2. All That Had Happened Was Done by the Lord. God had fought for them. No one had been able to stand against them; therefore He urges upon them fidelity.

God's Way.

I find my Lord Jesus cometh not in the precise way that I lay wait for Him. He hath a manner of His own. Oh, how high are His ways above my ways!—Rutherford.

With God.

Give God the blossom of your life! Put Him not off with the fallen leaves! —Nicholls.

Be Obliging.

We cannot always oblige, but we can always speak obligingly.—Voltaire.

THAT COUGH IS ONE CAUSE FOR ALARM

Get Rid of It by Taking Cheney's Before It Turns Into Something Worse

Does that hacking cough worry you because it hangs on so? Really it is a cause for worry, for if you don't get rid of it you may find yourself the victim of a far more serious malady.

Thus it would be worse than foolish to let it go on, getting worse and worse, without taking the easiest and quickest method of putting an end to the trouble and so save yourself from what might turn out to be a very serious complication.

Suppose you go to the drug store and get a bottle of Cheney's Expectorant and begin taking a teaspoonful every two hours. Keep it up and you'll find that by tomorrow the cough will have almost entirely disappeared and in a few days will be completely gone.

The time to get the best of a cough is right at the beginning—when you first notice it. Each day you neglect it only makes it more difficult to pry loose its hold on you. The sooner you begin treatment the sooner you will get over the trouble. Begin now.

Sold by all druggists and in smaller towns by general merchants in 30c and 60c bottles.—Advertisement.

Club Comedy

An Englishman tells a story about a caddie who tried in vain to get the job of carrying the clubs of a pompous amateur player. When it was the latter's turn to play, he placed the ball carefully, threw himself into position, swung his club like a forge-hammer and—missed.

The rejected caddie laughed joyfully. Once more the novice drove and missed and the caddie's laughter became uproarious. At the third try the ball was dislodged from its perch and spun over the turf for about six feet. "Hi, man!" yelled the caddie derisively, "I'll carry your clubs for the fun o' the thing."

Source of Sun's Heat

The source of the vast amount of heat which the sun gives off cannot be the result of combustion, for if such were the case it would have been consumed long ago. The Helmholtz theory is generally accepted. It assumes that the sun's bulk is gradually contracting, and that the energy thus produced is turned into heat. It has been calculated that a contraction of 150 feet a year would be enough to account for the heat developed.

How to know "cured" fertilizer

Great bins of Royster Fertilizer "cure" or "age," for months so that your results from its use will swell the earnings from your land.

HOW can you tell Royster's "cured" Fertilizer from fertilizer that has not been aged? The greatest difference is seen in the more profitable crops grown by the cured fertilizer, but there is a difference even to the untrained eye!

After the first mixing, Royster's goods are placed in great bins where they age from four to six months. They are then re-milled and bagged.

The fine grinding of the ingredients and the close association of the plant-food elements bring about a more complete chemical action during this aging, making a fertilizer which is readily available to the plant from seed time to harvest.

The curing and re-milling are two of the reasons successful farmers say "Royster's helps to make bigger and better crops."

Don't buy fertilizer in a hit or miss fashion any longer. Put your faith in the old, well-known Royster reputation and ask for Royster's Fertilizer by name.

Live Stock Agent Writes About Tick Eradication

To the Cattle Owners of Shelby County:

I take this method of reaching you to ask your co-operation in Tick Eradication in your county. It doesn't make any difference whether you are for or against dipping. That doesn't eradicate ticks. The way the work will be conducted is that all cattle on range must have a permit for the use of the range. The only place a permit for the use of the range can be obtained is at the vat after the cattle have passed through the vat. This permit will be good for fourteen days when the cattle must be brought back to the vat and the permit renewed and each successive fourteen days.

In the stock law area all cattle will be inspected regularly and all cattle found infected with or exposed to fever ticks, will be required to be dipped regularly from the time the ticks are found until the cattle and premises are freed from ticks.

Arrangements have been made with the Board of Revenue of your county to furnish lumber and cement for the construction of vats. If you haven't a vat convenient please communicate with me as I am anxious for all cattle owners to be convenient to a vat. After cattle have been dipped twice in accordance with the Rules and Regulations of the State Board of Agriculture, they can be moved anywhere for any purpose.

On March 1st, all cattle owners must have a permit for their cattle to use the ranges, highways, streets commons or unfenced places. For your information I wish to state that the Legislature of Alabama gave the Live Stock Sanitary Board the right to make such rules and regulations as they deemed necessary. This act was upheld by the Supreme Court. The power vested in the Live Stock Sanitary Board was transferred by the Legislature to the State Board of Agriculture and Regulation 6, page 4 of Board reads in part as follows:

"No person, company, or corporation owning or having in charge any animals in any quarantined area or region in Alabama, shall drive or permit any animal to be driven, or run at large, or to stray upon any public road, street, common, highway, range, open or unfenced place, without first having obtained a written or printed permit for the specified movement of the animals from the State Veterinarian or Assistant State Veterinarian, or State Live Stock Inspector or Federal Inspector.

I expect to treat one and all alike for the law is on all alike. I expect to do myduty in the enforcement of the law and hope to have your cooperation and not have to resort to the Courts. I am spending as much time in your county as I can. Any time I can be of any service to you write me at the above address and I will be glad to answer any question or help you in any way I can.

Yours for cooperation.

ASKETBALL TOURNEY S COMPLETE SUCCESS

incent Wins Loving Cup By Defeating Three Rival Teams

(By Alvin Bird)

The gold and black cagesters rom Vincent proved to the people f Shelby county that their team as the best of Shelby county chools by defeating the strong uintet from Kingdom, here last aturday in the final championship ame.

Saturday's play marked the exiting close of a Tournament held t Shelby Hi for Junior schools hich was participated in and enoyed by schools from all sections f the county.

The Tournament opened Friday, Kingdom and Harpersville staging the first game. From the very irst it was a thriller, Harpersville taking an early lead, but before the final whistle had blown Kingdom had piled up enough points to defeat them 19-15. Chancellor for Harpersville and Martin and Kirk and for Kingdom seemed to have had the greatest amount basket ball ability.

In the second game Vincent defeated the hefty cagesters of Monevallo High 24-20. This game was ery closely contested and a hard ne to lose as both teams fought ll the way and the score was close ucas and Garner starred for Monevallo while Miliam and Tucker layed the best ball for Vincent.

As Wilton failed to show up Wilsonville won her game on a forfeiture and the last game of the rst day was then played between ourmile and Siluria; Fourmile inning 17-9. Horton did most of he shooting for Fourmile, while odge and Eddings were best for iluria.

The semi-finals began Saturday etween Vincent and Wilsonville, nd Kingdom and Fourmile. The incent boys won 33-6, but in a ame that was lots harder fought han the score indicates. Tucker, a nk Vincent forward, was the utstanding star of this fray and is ability to hit the hoop coupled ith his basket ball instinct won or him a place in the hearts of ocal fandom. Bilbrey and Wheeler lso showed up well in this game. ones, at center, was Wilsonville's est man.

The game between Fourmile and Kingdom was the closest of the ntire Tournament and it was not ntil the final whistle had blown hat the majority of the fans knew hat Kingdom had won 15-14. Kirkland, a man with an excellent hysical ability was easily the best efensive player on the court and t is due largely to him and Martin little forward, that the victory as for Kingdom. Stone and K. Baker played the best ball for ourmile.

The championship game was layed Saturday afternoon etween the two remaining teams, Vincent and Kingdom. It was an excellent game but due to the better team work and shooting ability of the Vincent quintet they came out on the large end of a 23 to 6 score. Bilbrey and Wheeler again starred for Vincent while Mooney and Kirkland played the best game for Kingdom.

The line-up of the last game follows:

Vincent (23) Tucker (4), Carter (4), forwards, Bilbrey (9) center; Wheeler (6) and Dewberry, guards.

Kingdom (6); Martin (4), and Hughes, forwards; Kirkland, center; Mooney (2) and Brassell, guards.

After the close of the game the Silver Loving Cup was awarded the Vincent team by Rev. R. L. Durant, who made a very impressive talk on the athletic and educational advanntages of the county.

The picking of the All County Team was extremely difficult as there were many good men at the tournament, but the following picked by several scribes and coaches we hope will meet the approval of the public.

All County Team:

Tucker, Vincent; and Hodges, Siluria, forwards; Bilbrey, Vincent, center; Kirkland, Kingdom and Eddings, Siluria, guards.

Honorable mention: Chancellor, Harpersville; Martin, Kingdom; Mooney, Kingdom; Lucas, Montevallo; Wheeler, Vincent; Stone, Fourmile; K. Baker, Fourmile; and Jones, Wilsonville.

The Tournament proved to be a big success and we hope that from now on it will be an annual event. Most of the credit this year is due Coach Carl Barclay, director of Athletics at Shelby Hi, who worked so hard to put this one over and who has taken such great interest in the boys of Shelby county since his arrival here two years ago.

THE HOME NEWSPAPER BOOSTS YOUR TOWN

What does your home newspaper mean to you?

It happened in the office of a small town newspaper. A business man of that town called and asked the price of some letter heads and when informed that a certain number would cost a certain price said "Gee Whiz, I can get that job done at the cut-price printery in another town for much less." Whereupon the paper man replied:

"All right; take it to the cut price printery, but let me tell you something before you do so. We are boosting this town 52 weeks in the year with our weekly newspaper. We have an overhead expense and we furnish employment to others; we are endeavoring to boost this town to make business better for you as well as ourselves; we are operating our newspaper so that we can pay a living wage and at the same time make a fair profit; we cannot operate below cost and neither can you. You make a profit and yet it seems you don't expect us to do so". Before he could go further the business man interrupted him and said: Wait a minute—I'm not kicking, go ahead and turn out the job."

Too many times the business man, the merchant and the professional man forget that a weekly newspaper does mean to his success in his home town and that such an institution is really entitled to every cent that can be thrown into the newspaper's hands —that many of the small papers run a printing office to supplement their income in order to make a living.—Ex.

NEW HIGH RECORD 19 STILLS: 18 MEN IN ONE WEEK

Nineteen stills destroyed, 15 men arrested for distilling, three arrested for violating the prohibition laws, a large quantity of beer destroyed and one automobile taken, makes up the record of one week for the law enforcement officers at work in Shelby county.

On Wednesday of last week the officers took a 400-gallon still and a 200-gallon still near Simsville.

On Thursday they captured 3 big stills with outfits and destroyed a large quantity of beer, in Brasher's Hollow. Carl Cox who was at work at a still was placed under arrest. It is estimated that the actual cost of toe material taken and destroyed in this day's work was about $800.

On Frihay the officers captured a small still on an island in the mouth of Spring Creek in Beat 2. In the same vicinity on the same day aoother still of 150 gallons capacity was taken. Abou 1300 gallons of beer was destroyed.

On Sunday in Beat 2, the officers captured a still with about 2500 gallons of beer and arrested Ernest Crawford and Clay Allbright who were at work at the still. John Hope, who was also at work made his escape. On Sundac afternoon they arrested two men in a Ford car on the road between Columbiana and Calera from whom they took a small amount of whiskey.

On Monday the officers destroyed a still set up on a new brick and concretefurnace and poured out about 2000 gallons of beer.

CASHMAN IS GIVEN 7-YEAR SENTENCE

Robertson Fined In One Case, Other Charges Withdrawn

Charles Cashman, charged with the murder of his step-son, Grover Horton, near Pelham in 1921, was found guilty in the circuit court Tuesday and his punishment fixed at 7 years in the penitentiary. Cashman's attorney gave notice that an appeal would be taken and he was released on bond.

On Wednesday the case of Frank Robertson, charged with assault and battery, and appealed from the city court was called. Robertson entered a plea of guilty and was given a fine of $100. On motion of the solicitor, two other charges against Robertson, one for carrying concealed weapon and one for assault with intent to murder, were withdrawn.

The charges grew out of an attack on Rev. R. L. Durant in August of last year in which a set of knucks was used. Robertson was tried a short time later before mayor L. H. Ellis, on the charge of assault and battery and was found guilty and fined. An appeal was taken to circuit court. In October following the charge of carrying concealed weapon was heard before Judge L. B. Riddle in the county court and the defendant was found guilty and given a fine of $100. This case was also appealed. At the session of the grand jury in September an indictment charging assault with intent to murder was returned. but this charge was never heard, it having been continued at the December term of court, along with the two appeal cases.

Another old landmark in Columbiana will go to give place to a new and modern building. On Saturday of last week J. B. Turner bought the Lester corner across the street from the postoffice and he announces that he will begin soon to remove the old frame building, erected nearly 40 years ago, to replace it with a new brick building which he will occupy as a filling station and garage.

Provision will be made in the new building for sales and show room, completely equipped shops where all kinds of repair work will be done, and the filling station will be made thoroughly modern and convenient.

In addition to retaining his agency for the Studebaker cars, the first to be established in Columbiana, Mr. Turner has secured the agency for the Star car, a number of which has been sold in this territory. Arrangements will soon be completed to handle gas and oil by wholesale. Mr. Turner is advertising in this issue of the Reporter for an automobile salesman.

Mannish Tailored Spring Suits; New Spring Hats and Accessories

THE feast of a thousand welcomes awaits the prodigal tailored suit that is now hastening back to us. It was never banished, but finding itself crowded by day-dresses, coat-dresses and even less clean-cut frocks, worn under top coats, it silently slipped away and almost effaced itself. A little absence of the mannish—or boyish—tailored suit will go a long way with American women, especially our young women, who delight in being somewhat boyish themselves. Now the tailored suit is being heralded everywhere and womankind has made up its mind, collectively and individually, to start the spring right with the sort of apparel that is best-loved of all.

The messengers of her gracious majesty—the Springtime—are now among us notifying us that she is on her way and inviting us to make ready for her coming. Already new hats, new garments and accessories are presented in the shops while women have time to consider and compare and make the right choice. Nothing better in early spring apparel will follow these first displays, in fact the first presentations are apt to be the best.

Hats and scarfs, capes and neckwear all promise a season of the most tasteful and cheerful dressing. In millinery for spring there are many far there are three main inspirations to be traced in the new tailored suits: the box coat, the jacquette and the mandarin coat are in the vanguard of the mode. But there are three-quarter and even longer coats in their company and also some capes or cape attachments. It is the plain, practical tailored suit that we are taking to heart first, especially in the new checked and cross-bar flannels—they come in many variations and color combinations. There are convertible tailored hats and great numbers these are made of milan straw braid, in combination with silk, ribbon or millinery fabrics. Ribbons are used lavishly and some entire hats are made of them. The grosgrain and moire weaves appear to be in greatest favor. For trimming, in addition to ribbon, many jeweled ornaments, fine feathers and flat effects in flowers are used, but as the summer comes an abundance of flowers in varied trims are promised. It is the early spring hat that concerns us.

The hat and cape to match are made of crepe de chine in tan. The cape is scalloped at the bottom and hemstitched. Flat silk flowers in tan and brown outline the standing collar and cover the coronet about the turban. The small hat at the right of brown taffeta silk and petaline braid has a visor at the front and a brown lace veil that lies about the shape and falls off at the right side and partly across the face. On the left a little poke shape of black milan is handsomely trimmed with wide black moire ribbon and a rhinestone pin. Ribbon in blue and black covers the upturning brim of the black milan hat that is finished with a wide bow across the back.

collars among the new arrivals which can be worn up about the neck or turned back. Jabots and even stock collars follow in the wake of these simple new suits, but the plain, round collar and ribbon tie holds first place.

A typical suit of checked flannel, in light and deep tan shades, presents itself at the right of the two suits pictured and the photograph tells all its story.

The model at the left is made of cross-bar flannel in beige and brown and may be developed as a skirt and jacquette or as a one-piece garment. Plain flannel makes the graceful collar, borders the flaring cuff and provides the girdle and small flat buttons are covered with it.

MARY SUCCEEDS ON MAIN STREET

By LAURA MILLER

(©, 1924, by Laura Miller)

THE WIDOW'S MIGHT

Three widows in three different towns faced the problem of income. One sought a manager for her husband's business in the hope a living for both her and the manager would result. One found herself the sort of low-paid job a woman past forty can acquire, and is saving painstaking sums to care for her old age. One, past fifty, took over her husband's factory, and in ten years increased the profits three-fold.

No article can give an unfailing recipe for the secret of such success as Mrs. Charles Knox has made of her universally known gelatin business. It can only tell how the Knoxes did it, for he had helped her greatly during his lifetime. Her husband started the little factory at Johnstown, N. Y. Both had struggled to accumulate. What she saved from her household allowance was always hers. If Mr. Knox needed money, he often borrowed from her—at bank rates. When he consulted her about his business affairs he expected a judgment based on reason. He never "fooled her with praise," she says. But he acted on her opinion.

So much for his part. At his death the boys' future depended on her wise action. And she loved her children. Financially she is canny. She found that Mr. Knox's newspaper, a side line, did not pay. Forthwith all checks for the paper were issued from her office until the paper did pay and could be sold at a profit. When she built a concrete factory to replace the original wooden one, she planned, not for ostentation and size, but for cleanliness and convenience. It carried on a far larger volume of business with almost the same floor space. When her first contract involved spending $85,000, she learned how to secure the rock-bottom price from the salesman of the other side.

She sets a high standard. Her product, her employees, her son and assistant in the business, even the orchid conservatory at her home—all must pay their way by showing clean-cut efficiency.

She likes the sort of simplicity that often accompanies greatness. Her advertising campaigns have illustrated this. Mr. Knox used to go in for stunts. Mrs. Knox has mainly confined herself to "swapping recipes" as from one woman to other women who love the kitchen.

To women entering business she says: "You must have training or ability or both. Use common sense. Utilize your sex, but don't demand favors on account of it. Keep busy thinking of what you can accomplish and you will grow old only half as fast as the woman who worries over what she can't do."

GOTHAM, SHORT-CHANGE ARTIST

Are you more interested in people or things? Would you rather accumulate friends or dollar bills? That is practically the way a successful young woman lawyer puts the question of city vs. town. The town, she is sure, offers more friendships. The city may give you a higher pile of cash—if you succeed above the average. Otherwise the city short-changes you both ways, she believes.

If actions speak louder than words, it is significant that Bessie Newsom, A. B., A. M., LL. B., Phi Beta Kappa (that's the scholarship one, you know), national president of Kappa Alpha Theta (that's a social one that's said to take in only brains plus good looks), moved from Washington to Oklahoma City and Oklahoma City to Hot Springs, Ark.

The moves were dictated by anything but fear of failure. In Washington, Miss Newsom, with all her degrees accumulated before she was twenty-four, became a member of a successful firm and was made an associate member of the legal and advisory war board of the city.

In Oklahoma City, a place on the state Democratic speakers' bureau, an income above the average salary, a practice that brought her "warmth of reception and genuine interest," are a few of the early successes attained.

The story in Hot Springs is, she says, "just beginning to be made." A digest of Arkansas laws is on the program for the near future. Her fellow townswomen describe her as "a woman who has won a place for not only herself, but for other women in public affairs. Though yet in her twenties, she is one of the best-informed citizens of the entire country on topics of the day and national and international affairs. Withal she is a winsome, womanly girl, and enjoys the good times of her home club as well as the more serious affairs of her public career."

"BLACK-DRAUGHT DID THE WORK"

Says Mississippi Lady, Who Said She Had Been So Nervous She Felt Like Tearing Her Clothes.

Biloxi, Miss.—"I had, for a year or more, nervous indigestion, or some form of stomach trouble," says Mrs. Alonzo Ford, 1117 Clay street, this city. "The water I drank at that time seemed to constipate me. I would suffer until I got so nervous I was able to get down on the floor and roll. I felt like I could tear my clothes off. Every night, and night after night, I had to take something for a laxative and it had to be kept up nightly. My side would pain. I looked awful. My skin was sallow and seemed spotted. I would look at my hands and they and the flesh looked lifeless . . .

"I told my husband I would take Black-Draught, which I did. I took a few big doses. I felt much better. My liver acted well. I made a cup of warm tea and drank it that night. Soon I found that nervous, tight feeling was going, as was the pain in my side. I found I did not have to take it every night. Soon, after a few weeks, I could leave it off for a week or so and I did not suffer with constipation . . . I gained flesh. I have a good color, and believe it was my stubborn liver and that Black-Draught did the work."

"THEY'LL GET JIM"

SYNOPSIS.—Jennie Woodruff refuses to marry Jim Irwin, young farm hand, because of his financial condition and poor prospects. He is intellectually above his station, and has advanced ideas concerning the possibilities of school teaching and farming, for which he is ridiculed by many. In short, Jim is an off ox. He flocks by himself and reads books and has a philosophy of his own. But there are latent powers in him unsuspected even by himself and Opportunity comes knocking at his door. Jim is nominated for school-teacher, as a joke. The joke results in his election. He visits his scholars. Jennie is nominated for county superintendent of schools. Jim speaks at a public meeting, condemning rural school methods.

Newton explained for the tenth time at Jim had done so many things that teacher was supposed to do, and d left undone so many things that achers were bound by custom to erform, that Newton's father and Mr. onner and Mr. Peterson had made their minds that they would call pon him to resign, and if he wouldn't, ey would "turn him out" in some ay.

"What wrong's he done committed?" sked Raymond. "I don't know what eachers ain supposed to do in this entry, but Mr. Jim seems to be the nly shore-enough teacher I ever see!"

"He don't teach out of the books he school board adopted," replied Newton.

"But he makes up better lessons," rged Raymond. "An' all the things e do in school he'ps us make a ivin'."

"He begins at eight in the mornin'," aid Newton, "an' he has some of us here till half past five, and comes ack in the evening. And every Satrday, some of the kids are doin' omething at the schoolhouse."

"They don't pay him for overtime, o they?" queried Raymond. "Well, hen, they orto, instid of turnin' him ut!"

"Well, they'll turn him out!" prophesied Newton. "I'm havin' more fun n school than I ever—an' that's why 'm with you on this quittin' trapping —but they'll get Jim, all right!"

"I'm having something betteh'n un," replied Raymond. "My pap has never understood this kentry, an' we- ll has had bad times hyeh; but Mr. im an' I have studied out how I can make a betteh livin' next year—and pap says we kin go on the way Mr. im says. I'll work for Colonel Woodruff a part of the time, an' pap kin make corn in the biggest field. It seems we didn't do our work right last year—an' in a couple of years, with the increase of the hawgs, an' the land we kin get under plow . . ."

It was still an hour before nine—when the rural school traditionally "takes up"—when the boys had stored their traps in a shed at the Bronson home, and walked on to the schoolhouse. That rather scabby and weathered edifice was already humming with industry of a sort. In spite of the hostility of the school board, and the aloofness of the patrons of the school, the pupils were clearly interested in Jim Irwin's system of rural education. Never had the attendance been so large or regular; and one of the reasons for sessions before nine and after four was the inability of the teacher to attend to the needs of his charges in the five and a half hours called "school hours."

The day passed. Four o'clock came. In order that all might reach home for supper, there was no staying, except that Newt Bronson and Raymond Simms remained to sweep and dust the schoolroom, and prepare kindling for the next morning's fire—a work they had taken upon themselves, so as to enable the teacher to put on the blackboards such outlines for the morrow's class work as might be required. Jim was writing on the board a list of words constituting a spelling exercise. They were not from textbooks, but grew naturally out of the study of the seed wheat—"cockle," "morning-glory," "convolvulus," "viable," "viability," "sprouting," "iron-weed" and the like. A tap was heard at the door, and Raymond Simms opened it.

In filed three women—and Jim Irwin knew as he looked at them that he was greeting a deputation, and felt that it meant a struggle. For they were the wives of the members of the school board. He placed for them the three available chairs, and in the absence of any for himself remained standing before them, a gaunt shabby-looking revolutionist at the bar of settled usage and fixed public opinion.

Mrs. Haakon Peterson was a tall blonde woman, slow-spoken and dignified, and Jim felt an instinctive respect for her personality. Mrs. Bronson was a good motherly woman, noted for her housekeeping, and for her church activities. She looked oftener at her son, and his friend, Raymond, than at the schoolmaster. Mrs. Bonner was the only one who shook hands with Jim, but he sensed in the little, black-eyed Irishwoman the real commander of the expedition against him—for such he knew it to be.

"You may think it strange of us coming after hours," said she, "but we wanted to speak to you, teacher, without the children here."

"I wish more of the parents would call," said Jim. "At any hour of the day."

"Or night either, I dare say," suggested Mrs. Bonner. "I hear you've the scholars here at all hours, Jim."

Jim smiled his slow patient smile.

"We do break the union rules, I guess, Mrs. Bonner," said he; "there seems to be more to do than we can get done during school hours."

"What we came for, Mr. Irwin, is to object to the way the teachin's being done—corn and wheat, and hogs and the like, instead of the learnin' schools was made to teach. I can see an' the whole district can see that it's easier for a man that's been a farm-hand to teach farm-hand knowledge, than the learnin' schools was set up to teach; but if so be he hasn't the book education to do the right thing, we think he should get out and give a real teacher a chance."

"What am I neglecting?" asked Jim mildly.

Mrs. Bonner seemed unprepared for the question, and sat for an instant mute. Mrs. Peterson interposed her attack while Mrs. Bonner might be recovering her wind.

"We people that have had a hard time," she said in a precise way which seemed to show that she knew exactly what she wanted, "don't want our children taught about nothing but work. We want our children to learn nice things, and go to high school, and after a while to the Juniwersity."

"Aren't your children happy in school, Mrs. Peterson?"

"I don't send them to school to be happy, Yim," replied Mrs. Peterson, calling him by the name most familiarly known to all of them; "I send them to learn to be higher people than their father and mother. That's what America means!"

"They'll be higher people—higher than their parents—higher than their teacher—they'll be efficient farmers, and efficient farmers' wives. They'll be happy, because they will know how to use more brains in farming than any lawyer or doctor or merchant can possibly use in his business."

"It's a fine thing," said Mrs. Bonner, coming to the aid of her fellow soldiers, "to work hard for a lifetime, an' raise nothing but a family of farmers! A fine thing!"

"They will be farmers anyhow," cried Jim, "in spite of your efforts—ninety out of every hundred of them! And of the other ten, nine will be wage-earners in the cities, and wish to God they were back on the farm; and the hundredth one will succeed in the city."

The guns of Mrs. Bonner and Mrs. Peterson were silenced for a moment, and Mrs. Bronson, after gazing about at the typewriter, the hecktograph, the exhibits of weed seeds, the Babcock milk tester, and the other unscholastic equipment, pointed to the list of words, and the arithmetic problems on the board.

"Do you get them words from the speller?" she asked.

"No," said he, "we get them from a lesson on seed wheat."

"Did them examples come out of an arithmetic book?" cross-examined she.

"No," said Jim, "we used problems we made ourselves. We were figuring profits and losses on your cows, Mrs. Bronson!"

"Ezra Bronson," said Mrs. Bronson loftily, "don't need any help in telling what's a good cow. He was farming before you was born!"

"Like fun, he don't need help! He's going to dry old Cherry off and fatten her for beef; and he can make more money on the cream by beefing about three more of 'em. The Babcock test shows they're just boarding on us without paying their board!"

The delegation of matrons ruffled like a group of startled hens at this interposition, which was Newton Bronson's effective seizing of the opportunity to issue a progress bulletin in the research work on the Bronson dairy herd.

"Newton!" said his mother, "don't interrupt me when I'm talking to the teacher!"

"Well, then," said Newton, "don't tell the teacher that pa knew which cows were good and which were poor. If any one in this district wants to know about their cows they'll have to come to this shop. And I can tell you that it'll pay 'em to come, too, if they're going to make anything selling cream. Wait until we get out our reports on the herds, ma!"

The women were rather stampeded by this onslaught of the irregular troops—especially Mrs. Bronson. She felt a flutter of pride in her son, but it was strongly mingled with a motherly desire to spank him. The deputation rose, with a unanimous feeling that they had been scored upon.

"Cows!" scoffed Mrs. Peterson. "If we leove you in this yob, Mr. Irwin, our children will know nothing but cows and hens and soils and grains—and where will the culture come in?"

"Culture!" exclaimed Jim. "Why—why, after ten years of the sort of school I would give you if I were a better teacher and could have my way—"

"Don't bother, Jim," said Mrs. Bonner sneeringly, "you won't be teaching the Woodruff school that long."

All this time, the dark-faced Cracker had been glooming from a corner, earnestly seeking to fathom the wrongness he sensed in the gathering. Now he came forward.

"I reckon I may be making a mistake to say anything," said he, "f'r we-all is strangers hyeh, an' we're pore; but I must speak out for Mr. Jim—I must! Don't turn him out, folks, f'r he's done mo' f'r us than eveh any one done in the world!"

"What do you mean?" asked Mrs. Peterson.

"I mean," said Raymond, "that when Mr. Jim began talking school to us, we was a pore no-'count lot without any learnin', with nothin' to talk about except our wrongs, an' our enemies, and the meanness of the Iowa folks. You see we didn't understand you-all. An' now, we have hope. We done got hope from this school. We're goin' to make good in the world. We're getting education. We're all learnin' to use books. My little sister will be as good as anybody, if you'll just let Mr. Jim alone in this school—as good as any one. An' I'll he'p pap get a farm, and we'll work and think at the same time, an' be happy!"

Miss Jennie Woodruff of the Woodruff district was a sensible country girl. Being sensible, she tried to avoid uppishness. But she did feel some little sense of increased importance as she drove her father's little runabout over the smooth earth roads, in the crisp December weather, just before Christmas. The weather itself was stimulating, and in the little car, visiting the one hundred or more rural schools soon to come under her supervision, she rather fancied the picture of herself, clothed in more or less authority and queening it over her little army of teachers.

Mr. Haakon Peterson was phlegmatically conscious that she made rather an agreeable picture, as she stopped her car alongside his top buggy to talk with him. She had bright blue eyes, fluffy brown hair, a complexion whipped pink by the breeze, and she smiled at him ingratiatingly.

"Don't you think father is lovely?" said she. "He is going to let me use the runabout when I visit the schools."

"That will be good," said Haakon. "It will save you lots of time. I hope you make the county pay for the gasoline."

"I haven't thought about that," said Jennie. "Everybody's been so nice to me—I want to give as well as receive."

"Why," said Haakon, "you will yust begin to receive when your salary begins in Yanuary."

"Oh, no!" said Jennie. "I've received much more than that now! You don't know how proud I feel. So many nice men I never knew before, and all my old friends like you working for me in the convention and at the polls, just as if I amounted to something."

"And you don't know how proud I feel," said Haakon, "to have in county office a little girl I used to hold on my lap."

Haakon was a rather richer man than the colonel, and not a little proud of his ascent to affluence. A mild-spoken, soft-voiced Scandinavian, he was quite completely Americanized, and his influence was always worth fifty to sixty Scandinavian votes in any county election. He was a good party man and conscious of being entitled to his voice in party matters. This seemed to him an opportunity for exerting a bit of political influence.

"Yennie," said he, "this man Yim Irwin needs to be lined up."

"Lined up! What do you mean?"

"The way he is doing in the school," said Haakon, "is all wrong. If you can't line him up, he will make you trouble. We must look ahead. Everybody has his friends, and Yim Irwin has his friends. If you have trouble with him, his friends will be against you when we want to nominate you for a second term. The county is getting close. If we go to convention without your home delegation it would weaken you, and if we nominate you, every piece of trouble like this cuts down your vote. You ought to line him up and have him do right."

"But he is so funny," said Jennie.

"He likes you," said Haakon. "You can line him up."

"I guess that's so—to a wild-eyed reformer."

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Peculiar Combinations.

An English woman recently wrote to a newspaper saying that she was born A. Mann (Alice Mann). She married a Mr. Husband, and so became A. Husband. He died and she married again, this time a Mr. Maiden. Becoming a widow for a second time, she concludes that, though born A. Mann, she will die A. Maiden.

TOO MUCH PARTY IN OIL CHARGES

SPECIAL COUNSELLORS, HOWEVER, MAY BE TRUSTED TO AVOID ALL PARTISANSHIP.

By EDWARD B. CLARK

Washington.—Certain members of congress seem to be attempting to make it appear that guilt in any matter is partisan rather than personal. Some congressmen, some senators particularly, possibly are hurting the cause of party by their violent and virulent attempts to involve not only persons but parties in the oil lease scandal.

Atlee Pomerene of Ohio and Silas H. Strawn of Illinois, the attorneys named by President Coolidge to conduct the civil and criminal investigation into charges of delinquencies or worse, can be depended upon probably to walk the chalk line of non-partisanship. If either shall step over the line it will hurt one way or the other, but seemingly everybody in Washington believes that both men will keep eyes and feet on the line until its end is reached.

It does not seem to be generally known that it was almost immediately after Albert B. Fall's confirmation as a cabinet officer that he sought to obtain an executive order transferring the oil reserves from the Department of the Navy to the Department of the Interior where they would be under his jurisdiction.

Now there are two ways of looking at this almost precipitate action of Secretary Fall. All through the years he was known as an advocate of capitalistic exploitation of government lands, always of course supposedly with proper reservations safeguarding the government. Therefore, Mr. Fall's request for the transfer of the oil jurisdiction to his department was not at all unexpected by the conservationists of the country who had, rightly or wrongly, looked upon the New Mexico man as an enemy to conservation as they believed in it.

Serious From One Viewpoint.

Now another way the thing is looked at is of course a much more serious way. A suspicion, right or wrong, is that Mr. Fall wanted to obtain jurisdiction over the reserve fields in order that they might be leased to persons who were friendly to him. The main thing, of course, is that the executive order was issued and Mr. Fall's department was given the jurisdiction that he sought for it. The step by step history of the affair is fairly clear.

The transfer was made by the order of President Harding on May 3, 1921. There was objection from many naval officers, notably from Admiral Griffin, chief of that branch of the service whose duty it was to look after the oil reserves, and from Commander Stuart, who was the immediate guardian of the navy oil fields.

It will be seen that President Harding ordered the transfer within two months after his induction into office. It was not, however, until nearly a year later that the secretary of the interior turned over a lease of the Teapot Dome reserve in Wyoming to the Sinclair interests. It was nine months later, in December, 1922, to be exact, that the Interior department gave a lease to what is known as Reserve No. 1 to Mr. Doheny.

President's Authority Questioned.

Today the question is being raised in Washington as to whether the president had the power by executive order to make the transfer which he did. This will be one of the questions into which probably Mr. Pomerene and Mr. Strawn will inquire. If the executive had no such authority, the transfer of the leases was illegal and the whole thing would be undone, so to speak, automatically.

What followed after the transfer of the jurisdiction over the oil fields from Navy to Interior is now a matter of public knowledge. The sharp question is of course whether or not a cabinet officer advocated and secured the transfer of the jurisdiction over the reserves from one department to another in order that later he might be in a position personally to profit by the change of control.

Washington, like the rest of the country, is wondering if when Mr. Strawn and Mr. Pomerene finally get going there will be another epidemic of sickness in the ranks of men whose names have been used in connection with this Teapot Dome and California oil field affair. Word has come from France that one gentleman intimately connected with the present troubles is ill under the shadow of the old palace built by Louis the Grand. Tales of physical woes have come from the vales of Florida, and almost within the shadow of the dome of the capitol other gentlemen are contracting colds which possibly are induced by a much more serious ailment known as heart failure.

Denby Thought to Be Honest.

Edwin Denby, secretary of the navy, declined to resign from the cabinet while he was in any way under fire because apparently resignation would have been taken as an acknowledgment that he had done something wrong in connection with the Teapot Dome and California oil leases.

Some of the senators seemingly strove to make it appear that the secretary was worse than neglectful of duty in the case, but one judges from what he hears that no one in official life here actually believes that this cabinet officer was dishonest even in intention.

It seems to be believed here that the secretary, if he was guilty of anything in connection with the oil leases, simply was guilty of taking too much for granted and perhaps not being alert enough to his duties in the case.

It is a curious thing that Edwin Denby has been connected with three matters which have stirred congress to investigation since he entered into public life, three matters which in a way were akin. In neither of the first two affairs in which he had a somewhat prominent part was there ever any suspicion of wrongdoing. Men took sides in the two cases and were somewhat violent in their denunciations one of another, but the differences largely were those of opinion and of nothing else.

He Sided With Ballinger.

When the Ballinger-Pinchot trouble was at its height in the Taft administration Denby, then a member of the house of representatives, was a Ballinger partisan, or if it should be put in another way, he was a partisan of President William Howard Taft. Denby had the views on conservation that were held by the then president of the United States, and seemingly he believed that the Pinchot arguments were ill based and that Secretary Ballinger simply was a man whose belief led him to espouse a cause which in those progressive days seemingly was unpopular with the majority of the people.

Some years back of the Ballinger-Pinchot affair Denby was the chairman of a committee appointed by the house to frame resolutions of censure of Theodore Roosevelt, the then President of the United States. The committee was called jocosely the "spanking committee," and Theodore was "spanked" by the house in a resolution perhaps framed by Chairman Denby—a spanking that it must be said rather amused than pained the colonel.

O'Ryan Reports on Veterans' Bureau.

The United States senate has received copies of the report of Maj. Gen. John F. O'Ryan of New York, who commanded a division overseas and who was counsel to the senate committee which investigated the charges of early incompetence and worse in the general administration of the veterans' bureau.

The copy which has just been given to the senate is voluminous, concerning itself in places with details which were not given in the first draft of the document as prepared some time ago.

There is recognition in the report, as there is in the senate and throughout the country, that since the change in the directorship of the bureau there has been comparatively little reason for the veterans' complaint of delay or neglect, and of the public complaint of the waste of money. It still is maintained, however, that there are in the bureau holding their old jobs some men who are unfitted for their tasks by temperament and training.

It may be true that there still are men in the bureau who do not appreciate the nature of their work and do not know how to do it, but it can be said, and it is a veteran who writes this, that since the investigation was made by the senate there has been a seemingly complete change in the whole manner of conducting things in the bureau, that its work seems to be systematized and that delay, obstruction and indifference largely have disappeared.

Too Many in Hospitals?

It must be understood that Major General O'Ryan is a veteran of the service, with the good of the veterans at heart, and that his opinions therefore must have weight, even if, in a way, they may be objected to by some men who served in the war.

It is said virtually specifically that nearly half of the men in bureau hospitals today are not in need of hospital treatment. This may mean one of two things, either that some men have succeeded in getting into hospitals when their injuries or their illnesses did not justify them in making application for relief, or that, through laxity in examinations, men who ought to have been given outdoor treatment or left at their homes have been hundled off to hospitals into which they never should have been allowed entrance.

Washington has had one sensation to follow another this winter, and each of them has been made the subject of congressional investigation. It was thought when the charges against the former director of the veterans' bureau were made that the very height of sensational charges had been reached, but in a way this matter has been shadowed by the investigation which was ordered into a matter of the leasing of oil lands to private corporations.

Another sensational matter which also has been made the subject of investigation was that which had to do with the charges that soviet Russia was carrying on communistic propaganda in the United States. Time and again attention has been called to the investigating habit of congress, and it has been said that most investigations never "get anywhere," but this year seems to have proved an exception to the investigating rule.

The veterans' bureau investigation and the Teapot Dome and California oil lease investigations certainly seem to have got somewhere. It will take some time to determine whether the investigation into Russian communistic propaganda is worth the time and money that it is to cost.

Not So Bad.

"They're muscular and feline," was Mary's startling reply.

Plant Good Seed

(By A. A. Lauderdale, County Agent.)

There are a number of different varieties of cotton and corn, and we find a variation in the yield in different sections of the state. Experiments show a difference of from $35 to $50 per acre between the highest and lowest yield in varieties of cotton tested.

There is also a striking difference of corn varieties. We want to increase the yield of these crops by using pure seed of the high yielding varieties. Experiments show the following to be best adapted to our section of the state:

COTTON—Cook Strains, Piedmont-Cleveland, College No. 1, Acala No. 5, Toole.

CORN—Whatley, Pee Dee, Weekly, Hastings.

From Dr. Palmer

Editor Shelby County Reporter:

It is very gratifying indeed that we are soon to begin the dipping of cattle throughout the county. The papers of Columbiana are to be warmly commended for the help they are giving in this line. The dipping of the cattle is going to be troublesome and somewhat expensive, but it is the only way known to science to get rid of the ticks.

All of our people, so far as I have been able to ascertain, want this work done, and I believe our people are now ready and enthusiastic to cooperate with both the United States and the State officers. We are assured that all will be treated alike and there will be fair dealing for everyone. I think we can count upon the officers to do the right thing, but in case one should be negligent in his duty and should be unfair, let none of us take revenge by trying to prevent the dipping, but let us report those officers and have them dealt with. The officers who are trying to do their duty want us to do this. Let us give the faithful employees of the Government our cordial and hearty co-operation.

The people of our county, rich and poor alike, have lost much money from the ticks. We must stop impoverishing ourselves. We must get together and develop the great county we have.

Yours truly,

T. W. PALMER.

One of our great writers says that "Man that is born of woman is of few days and full of trouble." When he first comes into the world every body wants to kiss him and when he gets old every body wants to kick him. If he dies young every one says there was a great future before him; if he lives to a ripe old age they say he is living to save funeral expenses. If he goes to church regularly some say he is a hypocrite, if he stays at home they say he is a sinner. So at best a man has some rolling in these low grounds of sorrow.

Conditions Are Changing

Conditions are changing.

Not only is this true in Shelby county but in the state, nation and the civilized world.

The people of Shelby county, with renewed energy, are standing together for better conditions politically, educationally, morally, and religiously. The people are less sectarian and less partisan. A spirit of good will pervades the county. "By their fruits ye shall know them." This is the standard by which men are judged today. Not so much by what they are saying but by what they are doing. This applies to county, state and nation. Partisan lines have been erased. Democrats, Republicans, Progressives and Insurgents often lining up for the same cause, standing for right. The partisan whip has lost its sting. Right will prevail against might. Autocracy is going! The middle classes now rule the world. Has it always been so? Nay verily. Two hundred years ago democracy was only dreamed of in Europe. Even twenty-five years ago Kings were ruling by divine right. How is it today? Europe is in the mighty grip of the common people. Ruled by Soviets, Dictators, set up by the middle classes and by labor. Even Turkey is in the hands of men with democratic ideas, and the monarchy of Norway is tottering and is destined ere long to crumble and fall. The common people rule.

Who has proven to the common people that he is the champion of their cause? That is the man the Democratic party is looking for. Many favored sons are spoken of, but where is the man who champions the cause of the middle classes? Is it our own Oscar Underwood? Has he the endorsement of Labor? Who opposes him in his own city, and why? He has opposition. What says Walter Moore, Alabama member of the Democratic National Committee. "Only in his own city is criticism to be heard."

Many papers of the North Eastern states commenting on his candidacy say, "He may not be adding to his chances of being nominated by the Democratic party, yet no one can doubt his position He is out spoken, leaving no one guessing." Frakness is indeed a virtue, yet prudence, even in politics should not be discarded. Thru imprudence he has introduced issues which the party will not stand for. Is logic sound when he compares conditions today with those of 1856? Can any one see any relationship between a National political party of 1856 and a secret order of 1924? Has this order arrayed its self against the Democratic party? Then why adopt the resolution of 1856 in the platform? Does Mr. Underwood count conditions which followed the adoption of this resolution in 1856? A divided party—torn in twain—is doomed to defeat. Does Mr. Underwood think for one moment, that the party will throw its chances of electing a president away? Doesn't Mr. Underwood know that should the party adopt his policies millions of democrats could not support the ticket? Doesn't he know why Blaine was defeated and Grover Cleveland elected in 1885? Don't Mr. Underwood and his friends know that the party must not be divided? Now really, doesn't he know if the Democrats were going to cater to Catholicism and Foreigners, that they would nominate a Catholic, in the person of Al Smith of New York? Is it possible, that our own Oscar Underwood doen't know that even tho he and Al Smith should stand for the same thing that Al's chances are far better than his? Alabama is always safe. Al would land New York, see? Now, lest we forget, hasn't Mr. Underwood, Musgrove and Densmore all about the same chance of being nominated. Some will have more delegates than others, but, honest, has either a chance Then, why not adopt "My Mammy's philosophy," by Dolly Dalrimple, "Dat whut dis hear country needs is mo folks er laying bricks and less folks er throwin' 'em."

An Observer.

JOHN A. DARDEN

Candidate for Judge of the 18th Judicial Circuit

TO THE PEOPLE OF COOSA, CLAY AND SHELBY COUNTIES:

I am a candidate for the democratic nomination for Judge of the Eighteenth Judicial Circuit of Alabama, subject to the action of the Democratic Primary to be held on the 13th day of May 1924.

I stand for the following principles in the administration of justice in our circuit court and will endeavor to carry out the same if nominated and elected:

1 Clearing the dockets in each county so there may be an early trial of all cases after suit is brought.

2. Settling of all pleadings before the jury term is taken up.

3. Setting for trial only enough cases for each day's work and thus save unnecessary loss of time and expenses to litigants and witnesses in other cases.

4. Speeding up the machinery of the court so as to dispose of all business as rapidly as possible.

5. Placing every person's name in the jury box who is subject to jury service. Jury service is a privilege as well as a duty of citizenship.

6. The supremacy of the law. Courts are constituted to administer justice in a due and orderly manner, and any other mode or manner is usurpation and destructive of the constitutional rights of citizens.

7. Enforcement of all laws, on all people alike, without favor or partiality.

8. No. "pet" attorneys or litigants.

I was reared in our county on the farm, being the oldest of four children, our father dying when I was six years of age, leaving a widowed mother who died when I was twelve. I know what it is to work for a living and suffer privations.

I received my education in the public schools of our county, in the Fourth District Agricultural school, and the University of Alabama, where I finished law course in 1903, since that time I have been engaged in the general practice of the law.

I am married and have wife and six children.

If you honor me with the nomination and election to this important judicial office, I will devote my entire time, and what knowledge and experience I have acquired to an honest and faithful discharge of the duties of the office to the very best of my ability.

I most respectfully solicit the vote and influence of every citizen who believes in the foregoing principles.

Yours very truly,

JOHN A. DARDEN

ALABAMA IS ASSURED OF A DRY DELEGATION

COMER-TUNSTALL PACT IS CONCLUSIVE GUARANTEE THAT ALABAMA'S DELEGATION TO THE NATIONAL DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION WILL NOT AFFECT PROHIBITION STATUTES.

Comments From Leading Prohibitionists in All Sections of Alabama Show Overwhelming Endorsement of Agreement Which Definitely Settles Dry Issue in the Present Campaign.

Alabama will send a dry delegation to the National Democratic convention.

That is the opinion of leading prohibitionists from every section of the state following publication of the statements of Governor B. B. Comer and Mr. A. M. Tunstall, Senator Underwood's Alabama campaign manager.

The agreement as set forth in these statements, by which Governor Comer is to name one-half of the Alabama delegation, together with the clear-cut views expressed by Mr. Tunstall, removes the last vestige of doubt as to the make-up of the delegation.

These statements, which have finally and completely eliminated prohibition as an issue in the present campaign, follow.

Gov. Comer's Statement.

"To the Citizens of Alabama, both ladies and men, voters alike and all alike responsible that their best efforts should be for the good of the state.

"I am a member of the Underwood campaign committee in his candidacy for President of the United States; was named a member because of my known fondness and admiration for him. I knew Senator Underwood best when serving with him in Washington as junior senator under Governor Kilby's appointment.

"He was easily recognized as the best representative the South had, attentive to every duty, watchful of every interest, ready in every debate—the ideal minority leader—and I am sure would make an ideal President. Frequently we have not agreed on policies, but, like me, his convictions are always sincere and rendered as he thought in the interest of the people.

"Dr. Crumpton believes in the integrity of his statements regarding the eighteenth amendment, the Volstead act, and his anti-saloon position. Witnessing, as I frequently did, the sincerity of his conduct, much more than Dr. Crumpton, I am sure of his position on these matters and unhesitatingly I endorse his candidacy and would advise the citizens that, so far as Alabama can help, to do it.

"He is antagonized by sundry parties and interests, and if you recall, so was I, and yet in every equity of citizenship I did my best for every interest of every description that the economis of it might advance, and I am sure so has Senator Underwood. It is unrighteous to expect unlawful partisanship for any one class, or to expect that a man's general views should coincide with the general views of everybody else. It is well to consider that after a principle has been threshed out and becomes a law that it is then incumbent upon every good citizen to accept it as a finished fact, and this is the embodiment of the Underwood principle.

"The Underwood committee has assigned me the very high privilege of naming one-half of the delegation to the Democratic convention, and the member of the platform committee. In assuming this honor and privilege I assure those believing in our policies and politics that I will name representative citizens who will only have in view the best interests of the people, the preservation of our laws, and the protection of the people.

"As every variety of propaganda is being spread, a great many distracting things being said and being done, I would suggest to all citizens that in the fulfillment of your electoral duties it is a great honor to even be suggested, much more so to be elected, as President of the United States, and now that Alabama has a citizen whom a great many people out of the state believe worthy, how much more so we, as his fellow-citizens in our own state should put aside all cavilling as to minor differences and give him universal support."

(Signed) B. B. COMER.

Mr. Tunstall's Statement.

"Senator Underwood stated that if he carries the state in the primary, that his campaign committee, composed in part of ex-Governors Comer, Jelks, Henderson, Kilby, and Governor Brandon, Dr. Crumpton, Judge Denson, and of which I am chairman, would name the delegates to the convention. I have been many times asked my views in the premises, and I think it my duty to publish same.

"Senator Underwood in his address to the Alabama Legislature, July 31, 1923, declared that the eighteenth amendment — called the prohibition amendment — was the supreme law and that he would enforce it in its entire integrity. In his letter to Dr. Crumpton he said: "The cry that is being made in favor of light wines and beer does not meet with my approval;' that he 'stood for an honest, just and true enforcement of the law of the land, as the prohibition amendment is today.'

"I have discussed this matter with most of the members of Senator Underwood's campaign committee and an overwhelming majority of the committee are in full accord with the view of Senator Underwood herein expressed, and it is their purpose to see that the delegation goes to the convention in complete accord as to the enforcement of the prohibition law.

"Personally I favor the enforcement of the eighteenth amendment so that it will accomplish the purposes for which it was adopted. I am opposed to light wines and beer or any modification whatsoever. In the naming of the delegation I will use my best endeavors toward the selection of gentlemen who entertain the same view, and have asked ex-Governor Comer to name at least half of the delegation, and also to name the member of the platform committee."

(Signed) A. M. TUNSTALL.

The following comments were made by leading prohibitionists over the state following publication of the Comer-Tunstall statements:

T. D. Samford, Opelika: "These statements absolutely clarify the situation for the prohibitionists. There is no further trouble on that question. The statement should be very satisfying to all concerned."

Senator H. M. Caffey, Hayneville: "I think the statements and the agreement are good. It ought to get things in apple pie shape. It guarantees a dry delegation. Everyone should get behind Underwood. Let's bring Alabama to the front."

Judge F. J. Ingram, Ashland: "The latest developments will clear up the situation if anyone has been in doubt. Comer will name a dry bunch of delegates. There is no organized opposition to Senator Underwood here."

Judge E. J. Harrison, Ashland: "The Comer-Tunstall agreement absolutely assures a dry delegation. If any prohibitionist has been in doubt he ought to be satisfied now."

John A. Lusk, Guntersville: "The latest development, the Comer - Tunstall agreement, has dissolved whatever opposition there was to Underwood around here. I regard it as a very favorable development, which completely clarifies the situation in my mind, which was in doubt."

Judge E. P. Goodwin, Fayette: "The Comer-Tunstall agreement will have a mighty effect. There is no organized opposition to Underwood here, but the latest development will practically kill the opposition, if there is any."

J. M. Holley, Elmore: "I have noticed a marked effect among the women over the agreement that Governor Comer will name half the delegation. The two statements of Governor Comer and Colonel Tunstall absolutely cinch a dry delegation to the next Democratic convention."

Dempsey Powell, Greenville: "The statements of Governor Comer and Colonel Tunstall are having a decided effect on the situation here. They satisfy the prohibitionists of a dry delegation. There is no question but that the prohibition question has been much abused in this campaign."

Hugh Mallory, Selma: "This should and will mean a dry delegation. I have noticed no interest to this feature, because I know Senator Underwood meant what he said, but if there are any who have attached interest to the question of the dryness of the Alabama delegation the statements and agreement will remove that interest. Underwood is an outstanding American and will win overwhelmingly if nominated."

W. R. Dortch, Gadsden: "I think the reaction to the Tunstall-Comer statements and the agreement to let Governor Comer name half of the delegation has been distinctly of a favorable nature in my section."

A. H. Carmichael, Tuscumbia: "I thoroughly approve of the statements. If there was ever a doubt about the situation it has been removed. All prohibitionists should now loyally get behind Senator Underwood for the presidential nomination."

T. J. Bedsole, Grove Hill: "The agreement is a great consummation. It clears every doubt about the Alabama delegation so far as prohibition is concerned. The probable stand of the Alabama delegation on the question of prohibition is no longer debatable."

Rev. J. T. Beatie, Northport: "I like the agreement. I am pleased because Governor Comer will protect the interests of prohibition; I am satisfied the announcement will remove the last objection that any prohibitonist could have to Senator Underwood."

Dr. J. C. McLeod, Opp: "The statements ought to and will clarify the situation relative to prohibition in the Alabama presidentfal campaign. There should now be no opposition by any prohibitionist to Senator Underwood."

S. A. Lynne, Decatur: "It is a good move. The fact that former Governor Comer is an original prohibitionist and had the first laws put on the statute books during his term as governor makes it an iron-bound fact that the Alabama delegation will be dry."

Dr. Henry J. Willingham, Florence: "The agreement is a most excellent one which leaves no further excuse to any fair-minded prohibitionist not to support Senator Underwood. The Alabama senator will enforce the prohibition law if elected President."

J. M. Bonner, Camden: "The agreement will satisfy everybody who is reasonable. I endorse it most heartily."

Senator R. H. Powell, Tuskegee: "The whole thing is fine. With fighting prohibitionists like B. B. Comer, Dr. W. B. Crumpton and Rev. H. H. McNeill in accord, no prohibitionist can offer an objection. It ought to and probably will end all opposition, if any exists in prohibition ranks, to Senator Underwood for the presidency."

Dr. J. M. Dannelly, Prattville: "I endorse the statements whole-heartedly. There is nothing left to cavil over. Every Alabamian knows Governor Comer will name men who stand four-square for prohibition and its enforcement."

Jerome T. Fuller, Centerville: "The agreement should satisfy everybody. I indorse the statements. Mr. Underwood has already convinced me of his desire and will to enforce prohibition, and he should be nominated. No thinknig prohibitionist can have any further doubt as to what he ought to do."

C. W. Ashcraft, Lauderdale: "It was a very patriotic agreement. It ought to have a most satisfying reassuring effect on the people. Governor Comer's endorsement of Senator Underwood could not have been stronger. And we will have a dry man and an enforcer on the platform committee of the Democratic convention. It should have a clarifying effect. I approve of it and endorse Dr. Crumpton and Governor Comer."

Judge N .D. Denson, Opelika: "I think the agreement is a fine thing. I approve of what Governor Comer has done. All true Democrats should now be for Senator Underwood for the presidency. He is the only man we could nominate who could be elected."

Plant Good Seed

(By A. A. Lauderdale, County Agent.)

There are a number of different varieties of cotton and corn, and we find a variation in the yield in different sections of the state. Experiments show a difference of from $35 to $50 per acre between the highest and lowest yield in varieties of cotton tested.

There is also a striking difference of corn varieties. We want to increase the yield of these crops by using pure seed of the high yielding varieties. Experiments show the following to be best adapted to our section of the state:

COTTON—Cook Strains, Piedmont-Cleveland, College No. 1, Acala No. 5, Toole.

CORN—Whatley, Pee Dee, Weekly, Hastings.

From Dr. Palmer

Editor Shelby County Reporter:

It is very gratifying indeed that we are soon to begin the dipping of cattle throughout the county. The papers of Columbiana are to be warmly commended for the help they are giving in this line. The dipping of the cattle is going to be troublesome and somewhat expensive, but it is the only way known to science to get rid of the ticks.

All of our people, so far as I have been able to ascertain, want this work done, and I believe our people are now ready and enthusiastic to co-operate with both the United States and the State officers. We are assured that all will be treated alike and there will be fair dealing for everyone. I think we can count upon the officers to do the right thing, but in case one should be negligent in his duty and should be unfair, let none of us take revenge by trying to prevent the dipping, but let us report those officers and have them dealt with. The officers who are trying to do their duty want us to do this. Let us give the faithful employees of the Government our cordial and hearty co-operation.

The people of our county, rich and poor alike, have lost much money from the ticks. We must stop impoverishing ourselves. We must get together and develop the great county we have.

Yours truly,

T. W. PALMER.

Rev. B. B. Gay Writes

Editor Reporter:

We have lots of sickness in our community; some one ill nearly at nearly every house.

The good people are overjoyed at the success of Sheriff J. J. Falkner and his force. We wish to congratulate Judge Riddle for the impartial ruling of his court. It looks like that God still rules and the good people will be protected.

One of our great writers says that "Man that is born of woman is of few days and full of trouble." When he first comes into the world every body wants to kiss him and when he gets old every body wants to kick him. If he dies young every one says there was a great future before him; if he lives to a ripe old age they say he is living to save funeral expenses. If he goes to church regularly some say he is a hypocrite, if he stays at home they say he is a sinner. So at best a man has slow sailing in these low grounds of sorrow.

Conditions Are Changing

Conditions are changing.

Not only is this true in Shelby county but in the state, nation and the civilized world.

The people of Shelby county, with renewed energy, are standing together for better conditions politically, educationally, morally, and religiously. The people are less sectarian and less partisan. A spirit of good will pervades the county. "By their fruits ye shall know them." This is the standard by which men are judged today. Not so much by what they are saying but by what they are doing. This applies to county, state and nation. Partisan lines have been erased. Democrats, Republicans, Progressives and insurgents often lining up for the same cause, standing for right. The partisan whip has lost its sting. Right will prevail against might. Autocracy is going! The middle classes now rule the world. Has it always been so? Nay verily. Two hundred years ago democracy was only dreamed of in Europe. Even twenty-five years ago Kings were ruling by divine right. How is it today? Europe is in the mighty grip of the common people. Ruled by Soviets, Dictators, set up by the middle classes and by labor. Even Turkey is in the hands of men with democratic ideas, and the monarchy of Norway is tottering and is destined ere long to crumble and fall. The common people rule.

Who has proven to the common people that he is the champion of their cause? That is the man the Democratic party is looking for. Many favored sons are spoken of, but where is the man who champions the cause of the middle classes? Is it our own Oscar Underwood? Has he the endorsement of Labor? Who opposes him in his own city, and why? He has opposition. What says Walter Moore, Alabama member of the Democratic National Committee. "Only in his own city is criticism to be heard."

Many papers of the North Eastern states commenting on his candidacy say, "He may not be adding to his chances of being nominated by the Democratic party, yet no one can doubt his position He is out spoken, leaving no one guessing." Frakness is indeed a virtue, yet prudence, even in politics should not be discarded. Thru imprudence he has introduced issues which the party will not stand for. Is logic sound when he compares conditions today with those of 1856? Can any one see any relationship between a National political party of 1856 and a secret order of 1924? Has this arder arrayed its self against the Democratic party? Then why adopt the resolution of 1856 in the platform? Does Mr. Underwood count conditions which followed the adoption of this resolution in 1856? A divided party—torn in twain—is doomed to defeat. Does Mr. Underwood think for one moment, that the party will throw its chances of electing a president away? Doesn't Mr. Underwood know that should the party adopt his policies millions of democrats could not support the ticket? Doesn't he know why Blaine was defeated and Grover Cleveland elected in 1885? Don't Mr. Underwood and his friends know that the party must not be divided? Now really, doesn't he know if the Democrats were going to cater to Catholicism and Foreigners, that they would nominate a Catholic, in the person of Al Smith of New York? Is it possible, that our own Oscar Underwood doen't know that even tho he and Al Smith should stand for the same thing that Al's chances are far better than his? Alabama is always safe. Al would land New York, see? Now, lest we forget, hasn't Mr. Underwood, Musgrove and Densmore all about the same chance of being nominated? Some will have more delegates than others, but, honest, has either a chance Then, why not adopt "My Mammy's philosophy,"by Dolly Dalrimple, "Dat whut dis hear country needs is mo folks er laying bricks and less folks er throwin' 'em."

The friends of T. R. Nash announce him as a candidate for member of the Board of Revenue from the 3rd district, composed of Beats 5, 6, 12, 13, and 17, subject to the action of the Democratic Primary May 13th, 1924.

(Paid political advertisement)

JOHN A. DARDEN

Candidate for Judge of the 18th Judicial Circuit

TO THE PEOPLE OF COOSA, CLAY AND SHELBY COUNTIES:

I am a candidate for the democratic nomination for Judge of the Eighteenth Judicial Circuit of Alabama, subject to the action of the Democratic Primary to be held on the 13th day of May 1924.

I stand for the following principles in the administration of justice in our circuit court and will endeavor to carry out the same if nominated and elected:

1 Clearing the dockets in each county so there may be an early trial of all cases after suit is brought.

2. Settling of all pleadings before the jury term is taken up.

3. Setting for trial only enough cases for each day's work and thus save unnecessary loss of time and expenses to litigants and witnesses in other cases.

4. Speeding up the machinery of the court so as to dispose of all business as rapidly as possible.

5. Placing every person's name in the jury box who is subject to jury service. Jury service is a privilege as well as a duty of citizenship.

6. The supremacy of the law. Courts are constituted to administer justice in a due and orderly manner, and any other mode or manner is usurpation and destructive of the constitutional rights of citizens.

7. Enforcement of all laws, on all people alike, without favor or partiality.

8. No. "pet" attorneys or litigants.

I was reared in our county on the farm, being the oldest of four children, our father dying when I was six years of age, leaving a widowed mother who died when I was twelve. I know what it is to work for a living and suffer privations.

I received my education in the public schools of our county, in the Fourth District Agricultural school, and the University of Alabama, where I finished law course in 1903, since that time I have been engaged in the general practice of the law.

I am married and have wife and six children.

If you honor me with the nomination and election to this important judicial office, I will devote my entire time, and what knowledge and experience I have acquired to an honest and faithful discharge of the duties of the office to the very best of my ability.

I most respectfully solicit the vote and influence of every citizen who believes in the foregoing principles.

Yours very truly,

JOHN A. DARDEN

Beat 11 has been flooded with bird hunters from Birmingham. It is estimated that at least fifty sportsmen were here hunting last week. Just a few farms in this beat that have escaped a scouring. In many instances they do not even ask for a permit. It's too late to do anything this season, but I think we as a community, should protect our birds at least from people who live in the different towns and show us but little respect while here and less when we are in town.

ALABAMA IS ASSURED OF A DRY DELEGATION

COMER-TUNSTALL PACT IS CONCLUSIVE GUARANTEE THAT ALABAMA'S DELEGATION TO THE NATIONAL DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION WILL NOT AFFECT PROHIBITION STATUTES.

Comments From Leading Prohibitionists in All Sections of Alabama Show Overwhelming Endorsement of Agreement Which Definitely Settles Dry Issue in the Present Campaign.

Alabama will send a dry delegation to the National Democratic convention.

That is the opinion of leading prohibitionists from every section of the state following publication of the statements of Governor B. B. Comer and Mr. A. M. Tunstall, Senator Underwood's Alabama campaign manager.

The agreement as set forth in these statements, by which Governor Comer is to name one-half of the Alabama delegation, together with the clear-cut views expressed by Mr. Tunstall, removes the last vestige of doubt as to the make-up of the delegation.

These statements, which have finally and completely eliminated prohibition as an issue in the present campaign, follow.

Gov. Comer's Statement.

"To the Citizens of Alabama, both ladies and men, voters alike and all alike responsible that their best efforts should be for the good of the state.

"I am a member of the Underwood campaign committee in his candidacy for President of the United States; was named a member because of my known fondness and admiration for him. I knew Senator Underwood best when serving with him in Washington as junior senator under Governor Kilby's appointment.

"He was easily recognized as the best representative the South had, attentive to every duty, watchful of every interest, ready in every debate —the ideal minority leader—and I am sure would make an ideal President. Frequently we have not agreed on policies, but, like me, his convictions are always sincere and rendered as he thought in the interest of the people.

"Dr. Crumpton believes in the integrity of his statements regarding the eighteenth amendment, the Volstead act, and his anti-saloon position. Witnessing, as I frequently did, the sincerity of his conduct, much more than Dr. Crumpton, I am sure of his position on these matters and unhesitatingly I endorse his candidacy and would advise the citizens that, so far as Alabama can help, to do it.

"He is antagonized by sundry parties and interests, and if you recall, so was I, and yet in every equity of citizenship I did my best for every interest of every description that the economis of it might advance, and I am sure so has Senator Underwood. It is unrighteous to expect unlawful partisanship for any one class, or to expect that a man's general views should coincide with the general views of everybody else. It is well to consider that after a principle has been threshed out and becomes a law that it is then incumbent upon every good citizen to accept it as a finished fact, and this is the embodiment of the Underwood principle.

"The Underwood committee has assigned me the very high privilege of naming one-half of the delegation to the Democratic convention, and the member of the platform committee. In assuming this honor and privilege I assure those believing in our policies and politics that I will name representative citizens who will only have in view the best interests of the people, the preservation of our laws, and the protection of the people.

"As every variety of propaganda is being spread, a great many distracting things being said and being done, I would suggest to all citizens that in the fulfillment of your electoral duties it is a great honor to even be suggested, much more so to be elected, as President of the United States, and now that Alabama has a citizen whom a great many people out of the state believe worthy, how much more so we, as his fellow-citizens in our own state should put aside all cavilling as to minor differences and give him universal support."

(Signed) B. B. COMER.

Mr. Tunstall's Statement.

"Senator Underwood stated that if he carries the state in the primary, that his campaign committee, composed in part of ex-Governors Comer, Jelks, Henderson, Kilby, and Governor Brandon, Dr. Crumpton, Judge Benson, and of which I am chairman, would name the delegates to the convention. I have been many times asked my views in the premises, and I think it my duty to publish same.

"Senator Underwood in his address to the Alabama Legislature, July 31, 1923, declared that the eighteenth amendment — called the prohibition amendment — was the supreme law and that he would enforce it in its entire integrity. In his letter to Dr. Crumpton he said: "The cry that is being made in favor of light wines and beer does not meet with my approval;' that he 'stood for an honest, just and true enforcement of the law of the land, as the prohibition amendment is today.'

"I have discussed this matter with most of the members of Senator Underwood's campaign committee and an overwhelming majority of the committee are in full accord with the view of Senator Underwood herein expressed, and it is their purpose to see that the delegation goes to the convention in complete accord as to the enforcement of the prohibition law.

"Personally I favor the enforcement of the eighteenth amendment so that it will accomplish the purposes for which it was adopted. I am opposed to light wines and beer or any modification whatsoever. In the naming of the delegation I will use my best endeavors toward the selection of gentlemen who entertain the same view, and have asked ex-Governor Comer to name at least half of the delegation, and also to name the member of the platform committee."

(Signed) A. M. TUNSTALL.

The following comments were made by leading prohibitionists over the state following publication of the Comer-Tunstall statements:

T. D. Samford, Opelika: "These statements absolutely clarify the situation for the prohibitionists. There is no further trouble on that question. The statement should be very satisfying to all concerned."

Senator H. M. Caffey, Hayneville: "I think the statements and the agreement are good. It ought to get things in apple shape. It guarantees a dry delegation. Everyone should get behind Underwood. Let's bring Alabama to the front."

Judge F. J. Ingram, Ashland: "The latest developments will clear up the situation if anyone has been in doubt. Comer will name a dry bunch of delegates. There is no organized opposition to Senator Underwood here."

Judge E. J. Harrison, Ashland: "The Comer-Tunstall agreement absolutely assures a dry delegation. If any prohibitionist has been in doubt he ought to be satisfied now."

John A. Lusk, Guntersville: "The latest development, the Comer - Tunstall agreement, has dissolved whatever opposition there was to Underwood around here. I regard it as a very favorable development, which completely clarifies the situation in my mind, which was in doubt."

Judge E. P. Goodwin, Fayette: "The Comer-Tunstall agreement will have a mighty effect. There is no organized opposition to Underwood here, but the latest development will practically kill the opposition, if there is any."

J. M. Holley, Elmore: "I have noticed a marked effect among the women over the agreement that Governor Comer will name half the delegation. The two statements of Governor Comer and Colonel Tunstall absolutely cinch a dry delegation to the next Democratic convention."

Dempsey Powell, Greenville: "The statements of Governor Comer and Colonel Tunstall are having a decided effect on the situation here. They satisfy the prohibitionists of a dry delegation. There is no question but that the prohibition question has been much abused in this campaign."

Hugh Mallory, Selma: "This should and will mean a dry delegation. I have noticed no interest to this feature, because I know Senator Underwood meant what he said, but if there are any who have attached interest to the question of the dryness of the Alabama delegation the statements and agreement will remove that interest. Underwood is an outstanding American and will win overwhelmingly if nominated."

W. R. Dortch, Gadsden: "I think the reaction to the Tunstall-Comer statements and the agreement to let Governor Comer name half of the delegation has been distinctly of a favorable nature in my section."

A. H. Carmichael, Tuscumbia: "I thoroughly approve of the statements. If there was ever a doubt about the situation it has been removed. All prohibitionists should now loyally get behind Senator Underwood for the presidential nomination."

T. J. Bedsole, Grove Hill: "The agreement is a great consummation. It clears every doubt about the Alabama delegation so far as prohibition is concerned. The probable stand of the Alabama delegation on the question of prohibition is no longer debatable."

Rev. J. T. Beslie, Northport: "I like the agreement. I am pleased because Governor Comer will protect the interests of prohibition; I am satisfied the announcement will remove the last objection that any prohibitonist could have to Senator Underwood."

Dr. J. C. McLeod, Opp: "The statements ought to and will clarify the situation relative to prohibition in the Alabama presidential campaign. There should now be no opposition by any prohibitionist to Senator Underwood."

S. A. Lynne, Decatur: "It is a good move. The fact that former Governor Comer is an original prohibitionist and had the first laws put on the statute books during his term as governor makes it an iron-bound fact that the Alabama delegation will be dry."

Dr. Henry J. Willingham, Florence: "The agreement is a most excellent one which leaves no further excuse to any fair-minded prohibitionist not to support Senator Underwood. The Alabama senator will enforce the prohibition law if elected President."

J. M. Bonner, Camden: "The agreement will satisfy everybody who is reasonable. I endorse it most heartily."

Senator R. H. Powell, Tuskegee: "The whole thing is fine. With fighting prohibitionists like B. B. Comer, Dr. W. B. Crumpton and Rev. H. H. McNeill in accord, no prohibitionist can offer an objection. It ought to and probably will end all opposition, if any exists in prohibition ranks, to Senator Underwood for the presidency."

Dr. J. M. Dannelly, Prattville: "I endorse the statements whole-heartedly. There is nothing left to cavil over. Every Alabamian knows Governor Comer will name men who stand four-square for prohibition and its enforcement."

Jerome T. Fuller, Centerville: "The agreement should satisfy everybody. I indorse the statements. Mr. Underwood has already convinced me of his desire and will to enforce prohibition, and he should be nominated. No thinknig prohibitionist can have any further doubt as to what he ought to do."

C. W. Ashcraft, Lauderdale: "It was a very patriotic agreement. It ought to have a most satisfying reassuring effect on the people. Governor Comer's endorsement of Senator Underwood could not have been stronger. And we will have a dry man and an enforcer on the platform committee of the Democratic convention. It should have a clarifying effect. I approve of it and endorse Dr. Crumpton and Governor Comer."

Judge N .D. Benson, Opelika: "I think the agreement is a fine thing. I approve of what Governor Comer has done. All true Democrats should now be for Senator Underwood for the presidency. He is the only man we could nominate who could be elected."

Lesson for February 24

THE PERIOD OF THE JUDGES

LESSON TEXT—Judg. 2:6-19; 7:1-23.
GOLDEN TEXT—I will heal their backsliding, I will love them freely.—Hos. 14:4.
PRIMARY TOPIC—The Story of a Brave Leader.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Gideon and His Three Hundred.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Israel Falling and Rising Again.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Long Struggle With Idolatry.

I. A Synopsis of the Book of Judges.

This book covers the period from the conquest of Canaan and the death of Joshua to the judgeship of Samuel. The teacher should master the content of the book in order to teach this lesson, especially chapters 2-16.

1. The Sin of the People (Judg. 2:6-13). While Joshua and the elders of his generation lived, the people in some measure remained faithful to God, in obedience to His Word, but the very next generation went into apostasy. Their degradation may be accounted for as follows:

(1) Failure to drive out the Canaanites from their midst. They had gained the victory over them, but failed to exterminate them. Their mistaken tolerance became their undoing.

(2) Their amalgamation with the Canaanites. They intermarried with the heathen. Tolerance of the enemy is closely followed by union therewith and quick disaster comes in the wake of such union.

(3) Idolatry. Intermarriage with the heathen was soon followed by the worship of the heathen's gods. God's people lose power over the world as soon as they make alliance with it.

2. God's Judgment for Their Sins (Judg. 2:14, 15). He delivered them into the hands of "the spoiler that spoiled them."

3. The Repentance of the People (Judg. 3:9). Under the yoke of their enemies they learned their folly and cried unto the Lord for deliverance.

4. God's Deliverance at the Hand of the Judges (Judg. 2:16-19). God heard their cries and by raising up military chieftains as Judges he saved them out of the hands of their enemies. A repetition of sin, oppression by the enemy, repentance on the part of the people and God's deliverance, constitute the story of the book of Judges.

II. The Victory of Gideon's Band (Judg. 7:1-23).

Gideon was the most outstanding of the Judges. He came from an obscure and uninfluential family (6:15). Before going forward he wishes to be doubly sure (6:36-40). When once he was convinced of duty, he was courageous and enthusiastic. This is characteristic of all truly great men.

1. The Opposing Army (v. 1). Gideon and his army rose early on that eventful day and they came by the spring of Harod. Over against them was the host of the Midianites in battle array.

2. The Sifting of Gideon's Army (vv. 2-8). At Gideon's call 32,000 men responded, ready for the struggle. This seemed a small army to go against the Midianite army, 135,000 strong, but God said this was too many, lest they be led to boasting and self-confidence. The real danger was not in their small army but in their pride. All that were afraid were allowed to go back, leaving only 10,000. Still this was too many. When God was through sifting, only 300 remained.

3. God Gives Encouragement to Gideon. He bade Gideon go down to the Midianite camp, where he would hear something that would cheer his heart and strengthen his hand. When he came near he heard a man telling a dream, which was that of a barley cake tumbling into the camp and smiting it. He also heard the interpretation given to the dream which made Gideon to be that cake.

4. God Gives Victory to Gideon (vv. 16-23). His attack was unique. The whole matter was of faith (Heb. 11:32). Gideon with his 300 men formed into three companies, each man being provided with a trumpet and a lamp concealed within a pitcher. Thus armed they surrounded the camp of the Midianites. They were all instructed to keep their eyes upon their leader and imitate him. At the proper moment they blew their trumpets and broke their pitchers, giving opportunity for the lamps to shine out. This awful crash of broken pitchers, following the sound of trumpets, accompanied by the shout, "The sword of the Lord and of Gideon," threw the Midianites into a panic, causing them to fight among themselves. One hundred and twenty thousand were thus slain, leaving but 15,000 of that mighty army (Judg. 8:10).

WURTEMBERG

A Street of Old Buildings in Kalw, Wurtemberg.

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)

A German state that has made little noise in the world either before or since the World war, but which in proverbial fashion has "sawed wood" until it has become one of the most important regions of the old empire and new republic, is Wurtemberg, middle member of the South German triumvirate: Baden, Wurtemberg, Bavaria.

Wurtemberg with its 7,500 square miles is not large. It would make only a fair-sized island in huge Prussia; and its near neighbor Bavaria—which indeed is usually erroneously thought of as very nearly making up "South Germany"—has an area four times as great. But throughout its history Wurtemberg has been aggressive, and like an aggressive individual, it has got ahead. A century ago it was predominantly an agricultural region, but by the time of the World war it had probably passed all non-Prussian states save Saxony in industry and commerce.

In both geographical and political spheres Wurtemberg is a sort of fountain-head of the German-speaking world. In its territory are head streams of both the Rhine and the Danube. It was the heart of old Swabia, a dominant duchy in the early German empire. The Hohenstaufen family, which ruled over the empire in the Twelfth and Thirteenth centuries, sprang from a hill-top castle in what is now Wurtemberg; and the ancestral home of the Hohenzollerns who swayed the destinies of the latest German empire is in truth geographically a part of Wurtemberg, though politically it is a tiny island all but surrounded by Wurtembergian territory.

There are two distinct phases to Wurtemberg geographically: nearly half the famous Schwarzwald or Black Forest covers the western half of the state, as though it had flowed over from Baden; while the eastern two-thirds of the country is cultivated hill, valley and plateau land, dotted with villages and cities that retain the flavor of the Middle ages, and with castle-topped hills that awaken memories of robber barons, whose descendants became mighty rulers. It is in the Black Forest that Wurtemberg's quaintest atmosphere is found. The forest takes its name from the dark-colored species of pine that cover its mountains. This heavy growth of timber lies over hill and dale like a huge, somber blanket save on some of the highest eminences which protrude above the local timber line. These unforested places are covered with a scanty growth of grass and herbs which affords pasturage. The climate is severe, snow lying on some of these exposed heights for nine or ten months of the year.

Customs and costumes of bygone days lingered longer in the Schwarzwald than in almost any other place in Germany. But in recent decades tourists in growing numbers learned of its charms, and modernity has chased some of its quaintness away.

Old Peasant Customs.

Black Forest peasants, however, have not been pushed into unfamiliar ways of life, but on their hillsides and in their valleys continue to follow the ways of their forbears. One unusual custom makes the youngest son of the family the heir, while the older brothers must seek their fortunes beyond the ancestral roof-tree. The heir comes into his patrimony during the lifetime of his father, and the latter continues to live in the home as a patriarch and Nestor.

The houses of the Black Forest are a story in themselves. Almost invariably they are built on a hillside. Sharply-sloped roofs spring high into the air to the observer from down hill. On that side there may be five or more stories; and they sit solidly, covering a considerable plot of ground. One might fancy at first sight of these most commodious Schwarzwald edifices that each peasant numbered his children and retainers by the dozen. Large families are the rule in the forest to be sure, but the hotel-like homes of the peasants do not owe their size to this fact alone. The secret is that these are not merely residences; they are at once dwellings, stables, granaries and barns. Many of them have entrances from the hillside at three or more levels. On the ground are quartered the farmer's animals. On another level is stored the grain or vegetables and hay; and loaded wagons may be driven directly into this portion of the house over a short bridge from the hillside. On other levels are comfortable family quarters—a vastly superior plan to the sharing of the same apartments by pigs, chickens and people, found in some parts of the world. The portion of a Black Forest house set apart for family use can always be told at a glance by the picturesque little balconies that cling to the walls outside the doors and windows of the living quarters.

The lordly wedding feasts of the peasants of the Schwarzwald are renowned, and again a queer custom is involved. Hundreds of guests attend, bidden and unbidden. A little army of beeves and pigs and poultry are slaughtered and cartloads of loaves and cakes and sundry other articles of food are in evidence. One fears for the family fortunes of the host until he learns that an invitation imposes the obligation to send food and drink, and that the uninvited guests—who are most welcome—must pay for the viands they consume. The wedding, then, merely fixes the occasion and the place; the feast is truly a cooperative neighborhood jubilee.

Attracts Many Visitors.

In the summer the Schwarzwald competes with Switzerland as a pleasure ground. In recent decades numerous travelers on foot, on bicycle or in train have flocked to its cool shadows and babbling streams. Within its confines, both in Baden and Wurtemberg, are a number of well-known watering places, some of which have been frequented by those in search of rest and health since Roman days. Wildbad, toward the north of the forest not far from Stuttgart, is the most celebrated of the Wurtembergian health resorts, and to it the lords of the land have repaired since the days of robber barons.

Stuttgart, capital of Wurtemberg, is in the open country to the east of the Black Forest, in the valley of the Neckar, surrounded by charming villa-dotted hills. Not far away is the site of an old castle-crowned berg from which the country took its name. Few European capitals surpass Stuttgart either in charm of surroundings or inherent beauty. The city even possessed a "Beautification society" which has painted the already handsome civic lily until its beauty is far famed. Beginning with the Schlossplatz where the one-time royal palace is situated, building after building of stately grandeur rises throughout the city. There is an architectural consistency not always found, most of the structures being in true Renaissance style. Large areas of the city are in scrupulously kept gardens and parks. In size Stuttgart is close to Indianapolis and Seattle.

In the extreme south Wurtemberg touches Lake Constance across which lies Switzerland. In Friedrichshafen, chief Wurtembergian port of the lake, Count Zeppelin developed his airship factory that turned out the great sky cruisers with which Germany hoped to destroy London. In this little city the last of the German-built Zeppelins is now being constructed for the United States.

Why You May Need—for Economical Transportation

CHEVROLET

There are three main groups of prospective buyers of Chevrolet automobiles and commercial cars.

First, are all who know from comparisons or through the experiences of friends that Chevrolet provides the utmost dollar value in modern, economical transportation of people or merchandise.

Second, the large group of people with modest incomes who have the false impression that so good a car as Chevrolet is beyond their means.

They do not realize that due to engineering excellence and full modern equipment, Chevrolet operating and maintenance costs average so low that during the life of the car, it delivers modern, comfortable, fast transportation at the lowest cost per mile, including the purchase price.

Third, the smaller but very important group of car owners of ample means, only a small percentage of whom as yet realize that Chevrolet as an extra car virtually costs them nothing, due to the reduction in their transportation expenses effected by it.

We respectfully suggest consideration, investigation and comparison of Chevrolet with any other car at any price.

States Seek Data on Amount of Game Killed

Minnesota and New York were pioneer states in inaugurating systems to ascertain the amount of game killed each year. Today a score or more of the state game departments are striving to collect this important data. The compilation of such data gives a very good idea of game conditions in the different states. By reading the tabulated results from the census of game killed you can also arrive at a pretty accurate conclusion as to the efficiency of the game departments of these states in years gone by.

From a Denver dispatch we learn that it is estimated that 600 deer were killed in Colorado last year. In the same paper comes a report from New Jersey that 860 Virginia deer were killed in that state the past season. When you compare the areas of Colorado and New Jersey, when you think of the difference in density of population and also consider the amount of territory in each suitable for deer, you cannot help but realize that Colorado has been negligent in the past in the care of her game.

National Guard Growing at Rate of 1,800 a Mo

At the present time the Nati Guard has an aggregate strengt 166,000 men, which is increasing the rate of 1,800 a month. In the ter months the increase is slow, just prior to the training season increase is greatly augmented. June 30, 1924, the bureau expects 000 men to be enrolled in the g and by June 30, 1925, it is expected National Guard will number 20 men, and in 1925 average 190,000.

A study reveals the fact that the estimate of $30,577,940, which is lowed by the budget bureau, is not ficient to provide for the training activities of these 190,000 men d the fiscal year of 1925. Although an increase of $763,800 for all Nati Guard activities allowed by the bu bureau over the 1924 appropriati the strength of the National G will be increased over this perio 20,000.—Army and Navy Journal.

WINTER'S LONG STAY

ONE morning old Mother Nature looked over her spectacles at her son Winter, dressed in white. "Oh!" she exclaimed, and then she looked through her spectacles, thinking she had not seen aright.

But she had. Her son wore a very much soiled robe. His ermine once so spotless was dingy and frayed. "It is time he went home," said Mother Nature, "he has stayed too long."

But when she told her son he had better run home, because his sister Spring would soon be peeping out of the ground Winter began to whimper and fuss and beg for one more clean white robe. "Then you shall see, Mother, what a good son I will be," he said.

Winter Had Stayed Too Long.

"Just you dress me up once more and I will go home spandy clean and let sister Spring have full sway."

Now, being a very soft-hearted mother, she did as he asked and sent her little white snowflakes once more over the land. "Now, remember your promise, Winter," she cautioned her son. "Go home while you are nice and tidy or you may be sorry."

Then off went Mother Nature to attend to other work, for, being very busy, she had no time to watch and see that her son kept his promise.

But sly old Winter! He had no thought of running home after he got ...s fresh robe. "I am far too handsome to hide myself now," he reasoned to himself. "Why, this is the best looking robe I have worn this year. No, I'll stay right here and be admired."

Spring under the ground was getting uneasy. It was time for her to be out and the early flowers were all teasing and making things very uncomfortable for Miss Spring.

"It is time for him to be off," said Miss Spring. "That greedy brother of mine always teases to stay longer each year and Mother Nature listens. I'll take a peek and see what is going on up there."

Miss Spring stepped out of her bed and tripped lightly over her white-robed brother as he slept and every place where her warm feet trod there was a dark mark.

When Winter awoke he should have been warned by what he saw. His robe was frayed and soiled but he would not go home. "It is growing colder and perhaps it will snow," he thought, and went to sleep again.

But it didn't snow. Instead the next morning it was quite warm and Miss Spring stepped out of her winter bed. She tossed away the blanket that had covered her and called to her children, the early flowers, to come out and show themselves.

"Oh, look at old Uncle Winter," called a bright crocus. "What a soiled robe and how untidy he looks."

Then out came another crocus to see what her sister was laughing at, and when she saw Winter trying to hide behind the rocks and fences she began to laugh. "Oh, he is so old he cannot run," she said.

Old Winter now saw his mistake. He should have gone home dressed in a neat white robe, but now he must go limping away looking like a beggar. "I won't tease next year to stay longer," he whimpered.

"You had better not," replied Miss Spring, who heard the remark, "because next year I shall be up bright and early and see that I have my rights."

BELLA

YEARS ago when Bella's school reports used to come home with spelling always far below grade, Bella's mother used to say, "She takes after me; I never could spell. All geniuses are bad spellers."

Bella, indeed, rather cultivated bad spelling after that.

Then came the day when instead of coming out as they had planned, Bella found herself an orphan without a cent in the world. She asked her friends what one did under such circumstances, and they all said, "Become a social secretary." So Bella found herself engaged to write the invitations and choose the costumes and plan the parties of Mrs. Newcomb. Things went smoothly and the Newcombs progressed under Bella's guidance. Then came the great event upon which the success of failure of the winter—from the Newcombs' point of view—depended. The planning of the whole affair as usual was handed over to Bella. And cards went requesting "the presents of" everyone with whom the Newcombs were planning to play during the coming season. Perhaps no one would have noticed anything out of the ordinary had not the papers somehow got hold of an invitation. The Newcombs were serious-minded folk and there had never been any geniuses in their family; so Bella began to revise her opinion of the importance of spelling as she sat in her hall bedroom without a job and wondered what next.

Then came the letter from Mrs. Browne asking her to spend the two weeks of Cornelius' vacation at their place in the country. Bella was cheered. Knowing Mrs. Browne to be a stickler for form, and determined to benefit from experience, she looked up all the words in a dictionary before she mailed her answer. Two days later she set forth in her best gown. She was a little surprised to be met at the station by a servant instead of by some member of the family. She had expected Cornelius. On arriving at the house she was taken to her room by a maid. Then they filed into the dining room. During a lull at the table Mrs. Browne brought up the subject of names.

"Nothing seems to me more inexcusable," said Bella's hostess, "than carelessness in the spelling of proper names. I never forgive a person who leaves off my 'e.'" Then Bella understood.

At this crisis she had a simple inspiration. She would study spelling, and be careful of proper names! Of course Mrs. Browne did forgive the omission of that "e," and Cornelius rescued Bella from the hall bedroom. But she never forgot the mishaps due to bad spelling. Years later when her own little daughter brought back a bad spelling report from school she was heard to say:

"Good spelling is just a matter of attention and effort. It is a habit and can be acquired. Only foolish people and slovens neglect the habit of good spelling."

DORA

THE influence of Teutonic literature is responsible for the existence and popular usage of Dora. Though coming originally from the same source as Dorothea, and often regarded as a contraction of that name, since the two translations, "gift of God," are identical, Dora is a completely separate and individual feminine appellative.

The Greek word Theodoros was the root of masculine and feminine names without number. Most of the first named were saints, one of the favorites being a young soldier of Heraclea who burnt the temple at Cybele and was martyred in consequence. The Venetians brought home his legend and made him one of their patron saints, Teodoro.

Theodora named a Greek empress and a beautiful Cappadocian martyr, thus springing to fame as a feminine name early in history. Under Teutonic influence, however, the first syllable was dropped, and Dora, or more properly Dore, became a nationally common name. Teutonic literature is filled with heroines who bear the charming little title which has found such favor in this country. The South has a quaint old-fashioned form—Medora, very popular in ante-bellum days.

The aquamarine is Dora's talismanic stone. It is the gem of friendship, and promises its wearer great popularity and a compelling charm of manner. Tuesday is her lucky day and 5 her lucky number.

The Why of Superstitions

By H. IRVING KING

THE DEATHWATCH

IN EUROPE and in this country the superstition is universal that the "ticking" of that little beetle known commonly as the deathwatch is an omen of death. "I did not hear the dog howl, mother, or the deathwatch beat," says the dying girl in Tennyson's May Queen. The insect gets into the wood of houses, especially old houses, by boring, and makes its peculiar clicking noise by butting its head against the walls of its self-made cell.

The old, old superstition that the noise it makes is a death omen is a reminiscence of tree worship. The presence of the insect in the wood was formerly unsuspected. All our ancestors of old times knew that, from the dead wood, came a steady and monotonous sound. As some people of today, when they hear, or fancy they hear, a knock upon the headboard of their bed when no one is by, think that some spirit of a departed friend is trying to communicate with them, so the man of old, especially if sick and despondent, hearing from the apparently solid wood the steady sound of the deathwatch conceived it as of supernatural origin. It was the dead body of the tree-god talking—death calling unto death.

Salesman Wanted

We want a high-grade, high-powered automobile salesman. He must be a man of good standing, upright, progressive, convincing, the kind of a man whose actions will always reflect credit on the name STUDEBAKER. No other sort would feel at home with us. The right man is going to make this a permanent connection—we don't want to be bothered with a man who expects to try it awhile and then try something else. We prefer a man of family and a home owner, though the right man can readily earn enough to own his own home.

Good salesmen stay with STUDEBAKER because:—

1—STUDEBAKER owners are satisfied with the car they buy and the service they get. They come again and they send their friends because they like our service.

2—We have a big stock of used cars, treat every used car buyer fairly, and have a complete used car guarantee.

3—STUDEBAKER line is complete—there's a car for every pocketbook. The thousand-dollar buyer finds just what he wants and the three-thousand-dollar purchaser is highly pleased with his car. The buyer can select what he wants instead of being forced to take something else or trade elsewhere.

4—The name STUDEBAKER stands for the best in the industry. For 72 years it has meant high-grade vehicles. Back of it are assets of $90,000,000—the car buyer knows that the STUDEBAKER guarantee means something. FOLKS ARE MORE AND MORE TURNING TO THE RESPONSIBLE MANUFACTURER FOR THE AUTOMOBILE THEY BUY

All these things mean increased sales and therefore greater earning power for salesmen. This man should earn $3,000 per year or better.

Mr. Woolf has been in the iry business for some time, ilking a number of cows and aking regular shipments of eam. He has come to realize e necessity for better pastures, he has placed his order for 0 pounds of Dallas grass, car- grass and lespedeza, to plant der the supervision of the coun- agent. Mr. Reinhardt has had nsiderable experience already ith poultry and is equipped for e business as few farmers in e county. He has 100 pure bred ens, White Leghorns and Wyantts, two incubators of 800-egg pacity and two brooders of 500 pacity. For the proposed poulry demonstration he will select White Leghorn hens, feed em according to instructions. nd keep careful records both of e expense and of the returns.

Mr. Lauderdale has received veral applications recently for embership in the Farm Bureau nd is still taking orders for ferlizer for Farm Bureau members. e has received an order for a rm terracing level for O. P. ead, of Montevallo, and was ven assurance by C. L. Meney, president of the Merchants Planters Bank of Montevallo, at he would gladly give the use his own terracing level to any ne who might wish to use it. his makes six of these levels at have been placed in reach of e farmers since Mr. Lauderdale ame into the county. Reports om the different communities dicate that the levels are being sed steadily. Demonstrations in rracing are still being given.

J. F. McGraw, of McGraw Brothers, Vincent, has agreed to nance two cotton demonstrations in his part of the county. urnishing the fertilizer and ma erial for poisoning the boll weevil.

Mr. Lauderdale has secured ery low prices on calcium arsente and is now taking orders for his material. He is asking that armers throughout the county will let him know at once how much they will need so that orders can be placed while the price emains so favorable.

CHURCH ADDITION WILL BE BUILT

Orders for material have been placed and work will be begun in a short time on an addition to the Methodist church of Columbiana that will provide more rooms for the Sunday school.

Plans were started two weeks ago for the addition when something near $200 was pledged for the work and last Sunday the school named a committee, consisting of W. M. Polk, W. L. Christian and Luther Fowler to finish raising the funds and start work as soon as possible. The committee met Sunday afternoon and decided to build a twenty-foot extension to the present structure which will provide two large class rooms. It was also decided to present to the school next Sunday a plan for raising the balance of the funds for the work.

LEE JONES GIVEN TEN YEARS IN PEN

Lee Jones, who was tried in the circuit court of Shelby county last week for the killing of Dock Jones at Shelby in July of last year, was found guilty of manslaughter and his punishment fixed at ten years in the penitentiary. Notice of an appeal to the highest courts was given and Jones was released from jail on bond.

The case was begun Thursday morning and consumed practically three days, there being about 75 witnesses to be heard. The lawyers finished their arguments late Friday afternoon and the verdict of the jury was reported about noon Saturday.

The case of Dewey Lucas, charged with the killing of D. P Walker at Montevallo in November, was continued.

FINUS GOODWIN MEETS DEATH IN PECULIAR MANNER

Fatally injured late Friday night when he stepped backward from a bridge on the Montgomery highway and fell about 100 feet into the Cahaba river, Finus Goodwin, 62, a farmer residing near Pelham, died Saturday morning at his residence, where he was removed immediately after the accident.

Goodwin was en route to his home in a buggy when he reached the bridge now under construction on the Shelby county line. Instead of taking the detour by which he could have passed over the river safely, Goodwin is said to have driven his horse upon the bridge, one end of which was hanging in the air.

After reaching the end of the bridge, Goodwin is said to have stepped out of his buggy and was in the act of turning it around, when he stepped backward off the bridge.—Age-Herald.

CATTLE DIPPING TO BE BEGUN MARCH 3

To the Cattle Owners of Shelby County:

On and after March 3rd all cattle using the range will be expected to have a permit for the use of the range. This permit will be used at the vat by a duly authorized State Live Stock Inspector. When the dipping day comes at your community vat take your cattle to the vat and dip them and get your permit. If you haven't any vat in your community, then go to the next nearest vat. Arrangements were made with the Board of Revenue to furnish cement and lumber for the construction or repairing of vats and two men were employed January 1st to visit the different communities to see the people with reference to vats. The men have made every effort to get vats in each community. Now the time is almost here when we start tick eradication work and if any community hasn't a vat convenient its no fault of the men.

All cattle that are moved within the county or without the county will have to be dipped twice seven to twelve days apart and a permit issued by a duly authorized State Live Stock Inspector at the vat and the cattle moved from the vat to their destination. The reason for this requirement is not to work a hardship on any cattle owner, but to prevent moving ticks from one community to another and from one county to another. This does not mean that you have to obtain a permit in order to take your cattle to the dipping vat.

We will have several State Live Stock Inspectors in the county and will do all in our power to accommodate the cattle owners. If there is any way that I can serve you, I am at your command.

DR. W. E. HINDS WILL LEAVE AUBURN

Auburn, Ala., Feb. 25—Dr. W. E. Hinds has resigned his position as entomologist for the Agricultural College at Auburn and the Alabama Extension Service to take up similar work in Louisiana. More money to conduct work in Louisiana is assigned by him as his reason for leaving Alabama.

Dr. Hinds has been engaged in this work in Alabama since October, 1907. He is widely known throughout the State. He has been conspicuous in boll weevil control work.

BASKETBALL TOURNEY SUCCESSFUL EVENT

The second annual basket ball tournament for high school girls held at Montevallo proved to be a most successful event. Twenty teams, two from each congressional district, and representing every section of the state, were entered in the contests.

The preliminary contests, which were featured by brilliant playing, were begun Thursday, and continued through Friday. The climax of the whole event was reached Saturday morning when the teams from Ramer Consolidated school of Montgomery county and Mortimer Jordan High school, Jefferson county, met to decide the championship The decision went to Ramer by a score of 26 to 22. To win, the championship Ramer defeated the four outstanding teams of the tournament, it is said.

The contests in Home Economics, Art and Expression, proved equally interesting and these features of the tournament will doubtless be made permanent.

Satisfactory progress is being made in building the road that leads from Columbiana to the Montgomery highway near Siluria, according to W. K. Summers, of Vincent, who has the work in charge. Mr. Summers spent a few hours in Columbiana, Tuesday.

VINCENT READY FOR B. Y. P. U. CONVENTION

Plans are all completed for the B. Y. P. U. Convention of Shelby Association, which will be held at Vincent next Sunday, March 2. A strong program, which is given in full in this issue of The Reporter, has been arranged and everything possible to make the day both profitable and pleasant to those who may attend, is being done by the people of Vincent.

Mrs. E. A. Patterson, field secretary, urges that every B. Y. P. U. organization in the association, will let her know at once how many delegates it will send. She wishes to remind the workers that a pennant will be awarded to the B. Y. P. U. that sends the largest number of delegates. A pennant will laso be given to the intermediate union sending the largest number of members.

Churches that have no unions are urged to send representation to this meeting.

EARLY VARIETIES OF COTTON

Many of the so-called early varieties of cotton are in reality not varieties at all, but mixtures of seed from plants selected solely on a basis of early maturity, regardless of the type of the plants or the character of the lint. The first impulse after the boll weevil makes its appearance is to rush to "early" varieties. BETTER VARIETIES, NOT MERELY EARLY varieties is the true remedy. More returns for the same cost and work.

It costs no more to grow a superior cotton than an inferior one, except possibly for the initial cost of the seed, but pure seed at $5 a bushel is cheap compared with mongrel seed at $2 a bushel.

From now on, with the boll weevil over practically the entire Cotton Belt, it will be a case of the survival of the fittest variety. Scrub varieties, like the razor back hog, are doomed.—U. S. Dept. Agriculture.

The delegation, headed by J. F. McGraw, president of the board of revenue, went to Montgomery to ask the commission to adopt the project from Columbiana to Montevallo, but this petition was denied by a unanimous vote of the highway commission.

PASTOR MAYS' SERMON

Rev. W. A. Mays, pastor of the Methodist church of Columbiana, delivered a pleasing sermon Sunday morning before a large congregation from the text: "Enlarge the Place of Thy Tent ——Spare Not, Lengthen Thy Cords and Strengthen Thy Stakes."

In this sermon Mr. Mays developed the thought suggested in an earlier discourse from the subject of "Counting the Cost," the absolutely necessity for a firm and broad foundation for a satisfactory Christian experience; and showed how through study of the Word of God and through prayer a satisfying growth and enlargement of life will come to every Christian, who by "counting the cost" and meeting the requirements, lays for himself such a foundation.

T. E. Darby, his daughter, Miss Katherine, and his son, H. W. Darby, of Harpersville, were visitors to Columbiana, Tuesday.

FARM BUREAU MEMBERS CAN ORDER CALCIUM ARSENATE NOW

TO SHELBY COUNTY FARM BUREAU MEMBERS:

The State Farm Bureau has advised us that they can purchase Calcium Arsenate at 11½c per pound, delivered any point in Alabama, in 100-pound metal drums, minimum car 10,000 pounds.

In buying Calcium Arsenate in this quantity, it is necessary to have a central shipping point, which will probably be Columbiana. In order to meet the draft when the Arsenate arrives, it will be necessary to have the full amount on deposit for this purpose.

Dr. Hinds recommends 30 pounds of Calcium Arsenate per acre for poisoning cotton; calculate your needs accordingly, and send me your order at once on the blank below, together with check made payable to the Shelby County Farm Bureau, so that we may take advantage of this splendid price; in my opinion, this is the best price we shall be able to secure.

A. P. I. ATTENDANCE IS AT A STANDSTILL

PRESIDENT SPRIGHT DOWELL SAYS NEW QUARTERS ARE ABSOLUTELY NECESSARY

ALL RECOMMENDATIONS APPROVED

Since World War "Spirit of Restlessness" Prevails; Students Fees May Be Raised.

Auburn.—Declaring that until new quarters are provided at public expense and the maintenance fund is increased attendance must remain at a standstill and that the failure of the legislature to give relief has made it practically impossible for the college to hold its own, making it impossible to go forward, President Spright Dowell called to the attention of the members of the Auburn board of trustees the serious situation which confronts Auburn as well as other state institutions.

The board of trustees approved all of President McDowell's recommendations, including the proposal to raise student fees made necessary as result of failure of the legislature to give relief. Commenting on student activities, President Dowell told the trustees that "a spirit of restlessness which has prevailed in most of the institutions throughout the country since the World war has prevailed at Auburn, that this spirit has manifested itself in an impulsiveness that seemed easy of display especially under the electrifying conditions of the football season. Tradition and custom are powerful forces and the effort to build up a public sentiment against beating one's way on the train to a football game, a pretty general practice on the part of certain students, both in the state and denominational schools, the effort to suppress the sale and use of liquor and various other problems common in college communities, complicate the question of discipline.

Half-Way House of the Atlantic

Fruit Vendor of the Azores.

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)

The Azores, historic half-way house of the Atlantic, come into their own as a traffic station in the winter when the Europe-bound stream of tourists runs to the Mediterranean countries rather than to northern Europe. Just as Columbus, plying between a port near the Strait of Gibraltar and America, passed among the Azores, so modern steamer lanes touch the islands; and the tourists refresh themselves by hasty visits to its picturesque towns and countryside as the really ocean-weary world explorers cheered and revived their spirits by setting foot once more on terra firma.

These quaint bits of land almost in mid-Atlantic are well worth more than the hasty, passing visit that most tourists give them. The central cluster of the group, formed by the islands of Fayal, Pico, Sao Jorge, Graciosa and Terceira, lies more than 840 miles directly west of Lisbon. About 150 miles northwest of this centrally located group are Flores and Corvo, and approximately the same distance to the southeast Santa Maria, and the largest and most important of all, St. Michaels (Sao Miguel).

The Azores are not, as is generally supposed, a colonial possession, but form an integral part of Portugal. For political and administrative purposes they are divided into three districts, each sending its representatives to the congress at Lisbon.

Owing to their location, the Azores have played a very important part in the history of sea navigation, and even in aerial navigation, for they were the half-way house in the epochal transatlantic flight by American naval officers in the seaplane NC-4.

The keen interest that the Azoreans manifested in the first transatlantic flight had a deeper cause than mere curiosity. They remember that the first sailing vessel that crossed the Atlantic, over four hundred years ago, landed at one of their islands. They were the first to receive from Columbus the news of the discovery of a new world, and they hailed with delight the opportunity to welcome to their shores the first man to win the title of "Columbus of the Air."

Discovered by Cabral.

The discovery of Madeira, the Canaries and the Azores islands was a direct result of the persistent efforts of Prince Henry the navigator, of Portugal, to double Cape Bojador and to discover a new route to India. It was during the glorious period of Portuguese explorations that Goncalo Velho Cabral discovered Santa Maria, the most southerly of the Azores, in 1432. In the course of succeeding years, covering a period of more than a decade, the other islands were discovered.

From that time on down to modern days the Azores, or Western islands, became the scene of many an historic event.

Violent earthquakes have disturbed the Azores during the centuries since their discovery down to the Eighteenth. The annals of the islands vie with those of Italy in graphic accounts of the ever-interesting and terrible volcanic phenomena. Cities were buried, mountains disappeared and sent their ashes to unbelievable distances; islands hundreds of feet high suddenly appeared and as suddenly disappeared, and flames of fire illuminated whole islands and their intervening waters.

There is perhaps no country in the world that has such a heavy tide of emigration, in proportion to the number of its inhabitants, as the Western islands. Some of the emigrants go to Brazil, but by far the majority go to the United States. During the year before the World war, 6,000 Azoreans emigrated to the United States, and it is estimated that there are 35,000 Azoreans in California and over 60,000 in New Bedford, Mass., Providence, R. I., and other parts of New England, making a total of almost 100,000. The population of all the Azores is scarcely 300,000. Many of the emigrants return home, and almost all of the inhabitants of some of the islands have been in the United States.

The Island of St. Michaels does not overwhelm you with the grandeur of a Rocky mountain scene. It captures you subtly. Little by little impressions pile up in your memory until your fancy lingers in the beautiful gardens, whose walls are covered with wisteria and climbing roses, in the magnificent parks, and among the extensive hedges of hydrangea that bloom along the country roads.

By way of contrast, St. Michaels will fret and frown amid fearful, stormy seas. But you are compensated when, on a sunny day, you stand on the summit of one of the many peaks and behold the tranquil scene below you. Then you will see the island studded with towns and villages, the verdant hills laid out in checkered fields and cultivated to the very tops, picturesque dome-like windmills turning their long wings, and the harbor and surrounding ocean dotted with sails that glisten in the bright sunshine.

Ponta Delgada, the largest city in the Azores, has 17,600 inhabitants. Fortunately, it has preserved some of its old features, the inheritance of the past centuries—just enough to breathe an atmosphere of quaintness and to make the place so delightfully attractive that the jumble of high, massive chimneys, the tall walls, and the small balconies that overhang the streets become a part of one's life.

Modern buildings there are, such as the imposing hospital, the quarantine station, the governor's palace, and many private residences. But it is not these one cares to talk about in a place that can boast interesting relics of the past.

Fine Botanical Gardens.

Ponta Delgada still has a number of houses that have been handed down through generations in accordance with the law of the morgados. The morgado was the oldest son, who inherited the estate of his father and upon whom devolved the duty of providing for the other members of the family. The architecture of these houses is the same as that used in olden times by the morgados of northern Portugal. Here they are built of massive lava rock. Many of the gardens have high stone towers that command a view of the sea and surrounding country.

Ponta Delgada has wonderful botanical gardens. They have been pronounced by some as ranking next to those in Portugal, and by others as inferior only to the famous gardens of Brazil. That of Jose de Canto was begun in 1848. Senor Canto was connected with all the different nurseries in the world, and it was his ambition to gather specimens of all the trees and plants that could be obtained. The result is a marvelous collection.

The gardens contain tree ferns originally from Australia, many species of palms (such as the date, sago, and fan), Australian myrtle, great varieties of aloes, magnificent roses and camellias, India-rubber trees, banyan trees, acacias, magnolias, dracenas, brilliant red-flame trees, screw-pines, and fine specimens of the cedar of Lebanon.

Formerly, oranges were the principal article of export, and in 1872, 300,000 boxes were shipped abroad, representing a value of about $500,000. From that time on the orange industry declined, as a result of tree blight.

St. Michaels is a little world in itself, and the Azoreans have a little of everything. They raise their own wine and tea and have their own mineral water and thermal baths; they have their own tobacco and manufacture their own cigars; they cultivate large quantities of sugar-beet and manufacture their own sugar. The rich volcanic earth and humid, but healthful, climate lend themselves to the cultivation of great varieties of agricultural products, including vegetables and fruits of the temperate and tropical zones. Twenty-one thousand head of cattle graze in the hills and help to form one of the principal industries of the islands, the manufacture of cheese. The sea furnishes a livelihood for a large number of its inhabitants, and thousands of lobsters are exported to the continent

MILITARY ORDER'S PLEA TO SENATE

ASKS INVESTIGATION OF THE NATIONAL COUNCIL FOR PREVENTION OF WAR.

By EDWARD B. CLARK

Washington.—The Military Order of the World War, an organization composed of men who served their country as officers in the war with the Teutonic powers, has made a direct plea to the senate of the United States for the appointment of a committee to investigate the workings of the National Council for the Prevention of War, a society which has its headquarters in this city. The plea is made in the columns of the National Bulletin of the Military Order.

In Washington letters from time to time, attention has been called to the attempts of certain organizations to undo the army and navy of the United States and to prevent that proper preparedness which would make for the defense of this country in time of possible war. There are several organizations whose labors seem to be directed not so much to abolish war as to render this country defenseless in case a war of aggression against it should come.

The American Legion already has given attention to the activities of these organizations, and now the Military Order of the World War, virtually all of whose members also belong to the Legion, has taken the matter up.

Women's League Co-operates.

The members of the Military Order in so many words are asked to use their best efforts to combat the insidious and destructive propaganda of the "peace" organization, and to use every legitimate means of preventing "its paid propagandists from making any public speeches."

The Women's International League for Peace and Freedom is declared by the organization of former officers of the service to be a co-operating organization of the Council for the Prevention of War.

One of the members of the executive board of the Women's league is said to be a vice chairman of the council, and the veterans declare that another member, the wife of a prominent government official, has written and published the following as expressive of the attitude that it wishes American women to take in case their country ever becomes involved in war:

"Go to war if you want to, but know this: We have pledged ourselves not to give you our children, not to encourage or nurse your soldiers, not to knit a sock or roll a bandage, or drive a truck, or make a war speech, or buy a bond."

Training Camps Attacked.

From time to time articles have appeared and speeches have been made by representatives of organizations which have had as their bases or argument statements utterly misleading. One article which was given to the public asked the people in effect what they thought of the wickedness of a government which would send 7,000 officers to camp in summer time in order that they might be trained to kill people.

The facts in this case are these: The United States is trying to maintain a reserve corps of officers and men so that if war should come again we would not be caught in the predicament in which we were caught in 1917. There is precious little money to train anybody. There are about 80,000 reserve officers whose names are on paper. It is possible to give only about 7,000 of these officers a camp training in summer time, a training which lasts only two weeks.

The statement of the propagandists ignored everything except the fact that 7,000 men were to be trained, and cites this act as a shocking thing, without one word to disclose the really pitiful preparedness showing which the training plan made.

Frankly, one does not believe that congress can be induced to investigate this organization, for seemingly congress is as indifferent to any possible further war danger to the country as it was prior to 1917, when the insistence on a policy of unpreparedness later cost us the lives of thousands of American boys in the Argonne and along the Meuse, the Marne and the Aisne

Approach of Spring.

Oh, politics and legislation, and a sort of general drabness of things, are in the city of Washington, while across the river in th state of Virginia there are in these February days the first signs of spring.

Rumor that the advance guard of spring had come to the other side of the Potomac was seductive enough to draw one away from the post of observation of what some may call the high matters of state. It is true that, barring a few buds on bushes lucky enough to have a southern exposure, there are as yet few plant or floral symptoms of the advent of the days of springing things, but nevertheless, spring is in the air in this Potomac country in mid-February.

From the long bridge over the Potomac there is a sweeping view of the river now somewhat swollen, making its way bayward. Along the shore and here and there on the bars there are congregations of crows, and with them an occasional herring gull disputing foothold possession with the members of the corvus tribe, and occasionally seeming ready to begin actual hostilities over some choice morsel of food.

LINING UP JIM

SYNOPSIS.—Jennie Woodruff refuses to marry Jim Irwin, young farm hand, because of his financial condition and poor prospects. He is intellectually above his station, and has advanced ideas concerning the possibilities of school teaching and farming, for which he is ridiculed by many. In short, Jim is an off ox. He flocks by himself and reads books and has a philosophy of his own. But there are latent powers in him unsuspected even by himself and Opportunity comes knocking at his door. Jim is nominated for school-teacher, as a joke. The joke results in his election. He visits the scholars. Jennie is nominated for county superintendent of schools. Jim speaks at a public meeting, condemning rural school methods. Prominent women condemn Jim's method of teaching; they demand "culture." His pupils defend him.

CHAPTER VIII—Continued. —7—

Jennie blushed, and to conceal her slight embarrassment, got out for the purpose of cranking her machine.

"But if I cannot line him up?" said she.

"I tank," said Haakon, "if you can't line him up, you will have a chance to rewoke his certificate when you take office."

Jennie thought of Mr. Peterson's suggestion as to "lining up" Jim Irwin as so thoroughly sensible that she gave it a good deal of thought that day. To be sure, everybody had always favored "more practical education," and Jim's farm arithmetic, farm physiology, farm reading and writing, cow-testing exercises, seed analysis, corn clubs and the tomato, poultry and pig clubs he proposed to have in operation the next summer, seemed highly practical; but to Jennie's mind, the fact that they introduced dissension in the neighborhood and promised to make her official life vexatious seemed ample proof that Jim's work was visionary and impractical. Poor Jennie was not aware of the fact that new truth always comes bringing, not peace to mankind, but a sword.

"Father," said she that night, "let's have a little Christmas party."

"All right," said the colonel. "Whom shall we invite?"

"Don't laugh," said she. "I want to invite Jim Irwin and his mother, and nobody else."

"All right," reiterated the colonel. "But why?"

"Oh," said Jennie, "I want to see whether I can talk Jim out of some of his foolishness."

"You want to line him up, do you?" said the colonel. "Well, that's good politics, and incidentally, you may get some good ideas out of Jim."

"Rather unlikely," said Jennie.

"I don't know about that," said the colonel, smiling. "I begin to think that Jim's a Brown Mouse. I've told you about the Brown Mouse, haven't I?"

"Yes," said Jennie. "You've told me. But Professor Darbishire's brown mice were simply wild and incorrigible creatures. Just because it happens to emerge suddenly from the forests of heredity, it doesn't prove that the Brown Mouse is any good."

"Justin Morgan was a Brown Mouse," said the colonel. "And he founded the greatest breed of horses in the world."

"You say that," said Jennie, "because you're a lover of the Morgan horse."

"Napoleon Bonaparte was a Brown Mouse," said the colonel. "So was George Washington, and so was Peter the Great. Whenever a Brown Mouse appears he changes things in a little way or a big way."

"For the better, always?" asked Jennie.

"No," said the colonel. "The Brown Mouse may throw back to slant-headed savagery. But Jim . . . sometimes I think Jim is the kind of Mendelian segregation out of which we get Franklins and Edisons and their sort. You may get some good ideas out of Jim. Let us have them here for Christmas, by all means."

There is no doubt that on Christmas day Jennie Woodruff was justified in thinking that they were a queer couple. They weren't like the Woodruffs, at all. They were of a different pattern. To be sure, Jim's clothes were not especially noteworthy, being just shiny, and frayed at cuff and instep, and short of sleeve and leg, and ill-fitting and cheap. Jim's queerness lay not so much in his clothes as in his personality.

On the other hand, Jennie could not help thinking that Mrs. Irwin's queerness was to be found almost solely in her clothes. The black alpaca looked undeniably respectable. Jennie felt it must have a story—a story in which the stooped, rusty, somber old lady looked like a character drawn to harmonize with the period just after the war.

But Jennie had the keenness to see that if Mrs. Irwin could have had an up-to-date costume she would have become a rather ordinary and not bad-looking old lady. What Jennie failed to divine was that if Jim could have invested a hundred dollars in the services of tailors, haberdashers, barbers and other specialists in personal appearance, and could have blotted out his record as her father's field-hand, he would have seemed to her a distinguished-looking young man. Not handsome, of course, but the sort people look after—and follow.

"Come to dinner," said Mrs. Woodruff, who at this juncture had a hired girl, but was yoked to the oar nevertheless when it came to turkey and the other fixings of a Christmas dinner. "It's good enough, what there is of it, and there's enough of it such as it is—but the dressing in the turkey would be better for a little more sage!"

The bountiful meal piled mountain-high for guest and hired help and family melted away in a manner to delight the hearts of Mrs. Woodruff and Jennie. The colonel, in stiff starched shirt, black tie and frock coat, carved with much empressement, and Jim felt almost for the first time a sense of the value of manner.

"I had bigger turkeys," said Mrs. Woodruff to Mrs. Irwin, "but I thought it would be better to cook two turkey-hens instead of one great big gobbler with meat as tough as tripe and stuffed full of fat."

"One of the hens would 'a' been plenty," replied Mrs. Irwin. "How much did they weigh?"

"About fifteen pounds apiece," was the answer. "The gobbler would 'a' weighed thirty, I guess. He's pure Mammoth Bronze."

"I wish," said Jim, "that we could get a few breeding birds of the wild bronze turkeys from Mexico."

"Why?" asked the colonel.

"They're the original blood of the domestic bronze turkeys," said Jim, "and they're bigger and handsomer than the pure bred bronzes, even. They're a better stock than the Northern wild turkeys from which our common birds originated."

"Where do you learn all these things, Jim?" asked Mrs. Woodruff. "I declare, I often tell Woodruff that it's as good as a lecture to have Jim Irwin at table. My intelligence has fallen since you quit working here, Jim."

There came into Jim's eyes the gleam of the man devoted to a Cause—and the dinner tended to develop into a lecture. Jennie saw a little more plainly wherein his queerness lay.

"There's an education in any meal, if we would just use the things on the table as materials for study, and follow their trails back to their starting points. This turkey takes us back to the chaparral of Mexico—"

"Talk Jim Out of Some of His Foolishness."

"What's chaparral?" asked Jennie, as a diversion. "It's one of the words I have seen so often and know perfectly to speak it and read it—but after all it's just a word, and nothing more."

"Ain't that the trouble with our education, Jim?" queried the colonel, cleverly steering Jim back into the track of his discourse.

"They are not even living words," answered Jim, "unless we have clothed them in flesh and blood through some sort of concrete notion. 'Chaparral' to Jennie is just the ghost of a word. Our civilization is full of inefficiency because we are satisfied to give our children these ghosts and shucks and husks of words, instead of the things themselves, that can be seen and hefted and handled and tested and heard."

CHAPTER IX

The Brown Mouse Escapes.

Jennie looked Jim over carefully. His queerness was taking on a new phase—and she felt a sense of surprise such as one experiences when the conjurer causes a rose to grow into a tree before your very eyes.

"I think we lose so much time in school," Jim went on, "while the children are eating their dinners."

"Well, Jim," said Mrs. Woodruff, "every one but you is down on the human level. The poor kids have to eat!"

"But think how much good education there is wrapped up in the school dinner—if we could only get it out."

Jennie grew grave. Here was this Brown Mouse actually introducing the subject of the school—and he ought to suspect that she was planning to line him up on this very thing—if he wasn't a perfect donkey as well as a dreamer. And he was calmly wading into the subject as if she were the ex-farm-hand country teacher, and he was the county superintendent-elect!

"Eating a dinner like this, mother," said the colonel gallantly, "is an education in itself—and eating some others requires one; but just how 'larnin'' is wrapped up in the school lunch is a new one on me, Jim."

"Well," said Jim, "in the first place the children ought to cook their meals as a part of the school work. Prior to that they ought to buy the materials. And prior to that they ought to keep the accounts of the school kitchen. They'd like to do these things, and it would help prepare them for life on an intelligent plane, while they prepared the meals."

"Isn't that looking rather far ahead?" asked the county superintendent-elect.

"It's like a lot of other things we think far ahead," urged Jim. "The only reason why they're far off is because we think them so. It's a thought—and a thought is as near the moment we think it as it will ever be."

"I guess that's so—to a wild-eyed reformer," said the colonel. "But go on. Develop your thought a little. Have some more dressing."

"Thanks, I believe I will," said Jim. "And a little more of the cranberry sauce. No more turkey, please."

"I'd like to see the school class that could prepare this dinner," said Mrs. Woodruff.

"Why," said Jim, "you'd be there showing them how! They'd get credits in their domestic economy course for getting the school dinner—and they'd bring their mothers into it to help them stand at the head of their classes. And one detail of girls would cook one week, and another serve. The setting of the table would come in as a study—flowers, linen and all that. And when we get a civilized teacher, table manners!"

"I'd take on that class," said the hired man, winking at Selma Carlson, the maid, from somewhere below the salt. "The way I make my knife feed my face would be a great help to the children."

"And when the food came on the table," Jim went on, with a smile at his former fellow-laborer, who had heard most of this before as a part of the field conversation, "just think of the things we could study while eating it. The literary term for eating a meal is discussing it—well, the discussion of a meal under proper guidance is much more educative than a lecture. This breast-bone now," said he, referring to the remains on his plate, "That's physiology. The cranberry sauce—that's botany, and commerce, and soil management—do you know, Colonel, that the cranberry must have an acid soil—which would kill alfalfa or clover?"

"Read something of it," said the colonel, "but it didn't interest me much."

"And the difference between the types of fowl on the table—that's breeding. And the nutmeg, pepper and coconut—that's geography. And everything on the table runs back to geography, and comes to us linked to our lives by dollars and cents—and they're mathematics."

"We must have something more than dollars and cents in life," said Jennie. "We must have culture."

"Culture," cried Jim, "is the ability to think in terms of life—isn't it?"

"Like Jesse James?" suggested the hired man, who was a careful student of the life of that eminent bandit.

There was a storm of laughter at this sally amidst which Jennie wished she had thought of something like that. Jim joined in the laughter at his own expense, but was clearly suffering from argumentative shock.

"That's the best answer I've had on that point, Pete," he said, after the disturbance had subsided. "But if the James boys and the Youngers had had the sort of culture I'm for, they would have been successful stock men and farmers, instead of train robbers. Take Raymond Simms, for instance. He had all the qualifications of a member of the James gang when he came here. All he needed was a few exasperated associates of his own sort, and a convenient railway with undefended trains running over it. But after a few weeks of real 'culture' under a mighty poor teacher, he's developing into the most enthusiastic farmer I know. That's real culture."

"It's snowing like everything," said Jennie, who faced the window.

"Don't cut your dinner short," said the colonel to Pete, "but I think you'll find the cattle ready to come in out of the storm when you get good and through."

"I think I'll let 'em in now," said Pete, by way of excusing himself. "I expect to put in most of the day from now on getting ready to quit eating. Save some of everything for me, Selma—I'll be right back!"

"All right, Pete," said Selma.

Mrs. Woodruff and Jim's mother went into other parts of the house on research work connected with their converse on domestic economy. The colonel withdrew for an inspection of the live stock on the eve of the threatened blizzard. And Jim was left alone with Jennie in the front parlor.

Scanning him by means of her back hair, Jennie knew that in another moment Jim would lay his hand on her shoulder, or otherwise advance to personal nearness, as he had done the night of his ill-starred speech at the schoolhouse—and she rose in self-defense. Self-defense, however, did not seem to require that he be kept at too great a distance; so she maneuvered him to the sofa, and seated him beside her. Now was the time to line him up.

"It seems good to have you with us today," said she. "We're such old, old friends."

"If you can't change your methods," said Jennie, "I suggest that you resign!"

The Difference.

A mountain farmer near Beaufort West, Cape Colony, wanted a telephone. The authorities said a connection would cost him £500. So he laid the line himself. It was inspected and passed—and he has saved £450.

THE OPEN DOOR TO ROMANCE

A housekeeper's guest room affords a picture of her life, according to a keen-eyed, much-traveled acquaintance of mine. What would you make of this one? White paint and a smell of cleanliness; buff, blue and white paper in restful design; quaintly unfashionable furniture of buff-colored ash, trimmed with walnut, rather charmingly painted in walnut-brown designs, and betraying by the utter absence of scars that it has never been in a moving van; fine linen on the towel rack; a leopard skin and a blue Persian rug on a waxed hardwood floor.

Put the room in a house to match. Add a general store on the corner. Place the corner in a village on a rock-bound Maine harbor, with a once-a-day boat, and a twice-a-day autobus to the railhead.

Can't you see Katherine Walls, proprietor of store and home, as a happy wife? And as a low-voiced woman, with a bank account always ready for emergency calls; and with a fund of common sense? Her common sense is the sort that tells how much gingham to buy for the old women, whether to lay in a supply of sport sweaters or of yarn for the making of the same this season, and how to get from a casual summer visitor top prices for the fine hooked rugs which the minister's widow has been persuaded to put on sale.

The coal shortage taxed the brains of many a New England business man last winter. Call it luck or good management or both, that Southwest Harbor did not suffer. A laden barge, headed elsewhere, ran aground outside the harbor; Katherine Walls had the wit and the cash to take the cargo on shares with three other dealers of the county. She believes that it pays to belong to business associations, to read reports of advancing or dropping prices, to go to Boston and Providence and New York, and to meet leading dealers in many lines of merchandise. A modesty and love of the past which keeps her departed father's name still over the store entrance, and makes her father's pet cat the biggest and thriftiest and most spoiled cat in Hancock county are only a few of the traits that set apart one village storekeeper. She is a woman who would succeed anywhere, but who finds her greatest happiness and usefulness on the spot "to which it has pleased God to call her." She has taught Romance, like Fortune, the way to her door.

OUT WHERE THE WHEAT BEGINS

The secretary-treasurer of a farm loan association in St. Paul, Kan., doesn't properly belong in any category of Main Street women. For her back yard contains 318 acres. The work for the farm loan association, and other work for the Big Island school board are casual tasks while the farm is literally the big job.

But Susie Gibbons, an orphan, who has certainly found success by either man's or woman's measuring tape, has accumulated opinions that Miss Town-Bred or Miss City-Born may well ponder.

As to where a girl should seek success—"depends on what kind of backbone the girl has," Miss Gibbons says laconically. "The real question is whether the girl intends to make good, not the size of the town that happens to be her home."

And as to the qualities that have made for her own success—"keeping perpetually busy" is one part of the prescription. Getting along well with people is another essential ingredient even for a farmer, though Miss Susie Gibbons isn't conceited enough to claim the credit due her. Instead she explains: "I have had my housekeeper fifteen years. She is an angel. My farm manager has been here seven years. My friends are veritable Gibraltars. It seems to me the chief tribute they've paid my father—who was the best dad on earth—has taken the form of watching my welfare."

But it's when she explains why she couldn't be hauled or coaxed or driven to life in the big city that Susie Gibbons truly waxes eloquent. "Well! I don't have to wake up in the morning and hear the pattering feet of the family above. No elevated trains—where humanity is packed in like stock in western cattle cars. No ironclad hour for lunch. No dictaphones (thank the good Lord). No coming out of an office at 5:30 to join in a mad homeward rush, with all the lovely day gone. No prisonlike existence within granite walls."

Pins Older Than Needles.

Probably the pin in its primitive form of spike, thorn or fish bone was used to hold a garment together long before the earliest needle and thread was known. The brass wire pin of today was first made in England in 1826. In the same year the first drill eyed needles were made by using a stamping machine.

ALL WOMEN WHO WORK

Should Know how this Worker was Made Strong and Well by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Zahl, N. Dakota.—"I was nervous and weak and was not regular. I also had pains frequently. I was sickly for seven years and finally had a nervous breakdown following an operation. I am a dressmaker and milliner, and a lady I work for told me of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I am taking it and it has made me well and able to do my work again. I have even helped take care of a sick neighbor recently, so you can see how fit I am. I highly praise your medicine and you may use my letter as you see fit. I hope it will help some other woman."—Mrs. OLE NORDLEIN, Box 23, Zahl, North Dakota.

Over 121,000 women have so far replied to our question, "Have you received benefit from taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?"

98 per cent. of these replies answer "Yes."

This means that 98 out of every 100 women taking this medicine for ailments for which it is recommended are benefited by it. For sale by all druggists.

AN EXPLANATION

Mr. Riddle, who operates the typesetting machine for The Reporter, has been sick this week Not being able to get a man to supply for him, it became necessary to send the copy for the paper to Birmingham to our good friends, The Western Newspaper Union, and get them to set the type for us. Copy that came later than Tuesday could not be sent and the type did not reach us till Thursday, making the paper a day late. We are sorry to be late, but very glad indeed not to have missed our weekly visit to you altogether.

JOIN THE FARM BUREAU

There is every prospect of a great forward movement in the development of the agricultural interests of Shelby county. Our farmers are realizing as they have not done before the necessity for adopting new methods and new plans in their work and under the leadership of Mr. Lauderdale, our live county agent, many of them will make use of these new and better methods in this year's operations.

There is one thing, The Reporter believes, that will do a great deal to hasten this development and that will go a long way to establish the farmers of Shelby county as independent business men, that is being overlooked by many of our best farmers. That is the building of a strong farmers' organization, the Shelby County Farm Bureau.

Men engaged in every other business under the sun have found it necessary to organize and they have profited accordingly. The farmers have tried many times to organize but for some reasons their efforts have not been so effective.

The Farm Bureau is undoubtedly the best plan of organization for farmers that has yet been proposed; it has in it elements of strength that other such organizations have lacked and it has already got results that no other farmers' organization has approached. For example the Farm Bureau is making it possible right now for its members to buy fertilizers and other farm supplies at prices that a few years ago would not have been dreamed of. Never before in the history of the farming industry has fertilizer been bought at low prices with cotton selling at high prices. The high prices realized for cotton, hay and other farm products during the past two years, were made possible in large measure by the Farm Bureau.

These advantages, though, as important as they are, are but the beginning of what organization will bring to the farmers. The time has come when the farmers must study his problems as he has never done before, and he must work in the light of acquired knowledge, for the solution of his problems. He will find as others have found that these things can be done only through organization; and a careful study of the plans and the achievements of the Farm Bureau will, The Reporter believes, convince the most skeptical, that of all the plans that have yet been tried, the Farm Bureau is by far the best.

ABOUT MR. UNDERWOOD

Some of the friends of Senator Underwood in Alabama are saying harsh things about those citizens of the state who are not enthusiastically in favor of seeing the senator nominated for president. They seem unable to understand why all the people do not feel about it as they do.

There are several reasons for a lack of enthusiasm for Mr. Underwood on the part of a great many men andwomen who are loyal Democrats. One of these is the growing feeling that Senator Underwood is openly seeking the support of that element of the party that is most determined in its opposition to prohibition. It seems to be true too, that his most enthusiastic support, outside his home state, comes from those who are doing everything in their power to discredit prohibition and bring about a modification of the Volstead enforcement law.

Proof that is true is furnished by the friends of Senator Underwood themselves.

Recently the newspapers received for publication several pages of news matter sent out by the "Committee in the Interest of Oscar W. Underwood For President of the United States." The first article of this collection gives an interview with a woman from Wisconsin who is a member of the National Democratic committee, who said, "Wisconsin will send to the conventionn a delegation favorable to Governor Alfred E. Smith of New York on the early ballots with the likelyhood of a shift to Senator Underwood as second choice." She said further that there will be a primary fight in her state with the supporters of W. G. McAdoo but deciared that the Smith-Underwood faction" would "win out."

Prohibition democrats of Alabama do not understand why Senator Underwood should be any sort of choice of the followers of Governor Smith, if the senator is as safe on the prohibition question as his friends would have us believe. Governor Smith is a Catholic and is so wet that they call him "Al-cohol" Smith. This talk about the "Smith-Underwood faction," coming from the friends of Senator Underwood does not sound right.

Gold Coins Lose Weight.

In 1892 Great Britain began calling in worn coins and substituting new at the public expense. Since then nearly $400,000,000 of gold coins have been replaced. The loss by wear in gold coins was nearly five million dollars. This works out at about five cents loss on every coin called in. But in 1919, for instance, the profit on minting new silver equaled five million dollars.

HAMBONE'S MEDITATIONS

MORE POULTRY FOR THE FARM

(By A. A. Lauderdale, County Agent.)

Hens are a factory for converting feed material into a wholesome food product, the egg. Under average conditions they lay more eggs in the Spring; therefore, spring conditions should be imitated in winter when eggs are high priced.

First, furnish comfortable living quarters. You would not let your horse stand under a tree for protection; so don't expect the hen to roost in a tree and pay you a profit. In our mild climate, the poultry house need not be expensive, but if you are building a new house make it right. (Plans will be furnished from this office upon request.) See that your poultry house is comfortable in winter, well ventilated, convenient and easy to keep clean.

Second, an egg is composed of water, fat, protein and mineral. If the hen is fed enough water and fat to make an egg, but not enough protein and mineral matter, all she can do is to wait until she gets the necessary protein and mineral matter. Sometimes she is forced to wait a long time. If your hens are not laying possibly it is because they are waiting for something. Green food is essential for laying hens; it furnishes both protein and mineral. Oats make a desirable green food where it will not winter kill. Rye is to be recommended for the colder sections. Beets, turnips, cabbage, all kinds of vegetables, silage, clover, etc., are all desirable green feeds. Milk will furnish protein and mineral and should be provided at all times for laying hens. The following are suggested rations:

Scratch feed:

1 part corn, 1 part wheat, 1 part oats.

Dry Mash:

1 part corn meal, 1 part wheat bran, 1 part shorts, 1 part ground oats, 1 part meat scrap or tankage.

Third, for the hens to produce maximum number of eggs, they should be kept free of parasites and disease. Cleanliness is the best preventative that we can give. The poultry house, roosts, nests, etc., should be sprayed with kerosene oil or some good disinfectant once or twice a month. For lice and mites, sodium fluorid is recommended as a dust.

The average farm hen produces about 70 eggs a year. Flocks well bred and properly cared for average twice that many. It is not setting the standard too high to have for our slogan:

AT LEAST A HUNRED HENS ON EVERY FARM and A HUNDRED EGGS FROM EVERY HEN.

"CHARLES LEWIS" CANARD IS NAILED AT ITS SOURC

Telegrams From Parties Involved Show Conclusively That Re Issued by Senator Underwood's Opponent is a Political Frame

DR. CRUMPTON ISSUES CARD CLEARING ANTI-SALOO LEAGUE

To the Democratic Men and Women of Alabama:

My attention has been called to a circular issued by the Musgrove Campaign Committee, quoting a special from Birmingham to the Chattanooga News, stating that Senator Underwood had requested the Secretary of the National Democratic Executive Committee to reserve rooms at the Waldorf-Astoria, New York, during the time of the National Convention, for Charles Lewis. The circular also says that this same Charles Lewis is a representative of the liquor interests.

As soon as I saw one of the circulars I telegraphed Senator Underwood, asking him whether or not the charges in this circular were true. He replied as follows:

"Washington, D. C., Feb. 16,1924.

Hon. A. M. Tunstall,
Exchange Hotel,
Montgomery, Alabama.

Telegram received. Neither I nor anyone connected with my office or the Underwood Committee have made or authorized any request for reservation at the Waldorf or any other hotel in New York for Mister Charles Lewis, directly or indirectly.

O. W. UNDERWOOD."

Mr. George F. Mara, Secretary of the National Democratic Executive Committee telegraphed National Committeeman Walter Moore on February 12th as follows:

"New York, Feb. 12, 1924.

Hon. Walter Moore,
Am. Trust Bldg.
Birmingham, Ala.

Reservation at the Waldorf Astoria for Charles W. Lewis was not made by Senator Oscar Underwood nor the Oscar Underwood Committee or in fact anyone acting for Oscar Underwood. Disregard my letter on this point as I was misinformed. My Lewis reservation being entirely a personal matter of Mr. Lewis,

GEO. F. MARA,

Assistant to Chairman,
Democratic National Committee."

I also telegraphed the Underwood Campaign Committee at Washing and received the following reply:

"Washington, D. C., Feb. 16, 19

Hon. A. M. Tunstall,
Exchange Hotel,
Montgomery, Alabama.

Telegram received. Senator Underwood states that he has knowledge of reservation refer to. Over long distance 'phone Secretary Democratic Committee New York stated to me that would wire National Committeeman Walter Moore and Natio Committeewoman, Mrs. McNeel forming them mistake had be made and Senator Underwood h not requested any such reservation. Neither Senator nor anyo connected with his office or committee made any request reservation for Mr. Lewis or a other individual at Waldorf or a other hotel in New York.

WM. H. MAY,
Washington Secty, Underwo Committee."

These telegrams show conclusi that the report is false and that entire matter was framed up by political enemy of Senator Under for the sole purpose of deceiving misleading the voters of Alabam

We submit without further comm the foregoing statement for your sideration and action.

(Signed) A. M. TUNSTALL, Chairma

To the Citizens of Alabama:

ear Mr. Tunstall.

am in receipt of your letter ive to the dissemination in some parts of the country of political propaganda charging that I am a member of the Catholic Church and have renounced my affiliation with the Masonic fraternity.

These statements are untrue, I am a thirty-third degree Mason, in good standing; have been a member of the Episcopal Church since I was a boy eighteen years of age; and have no other religious affiliation. My wife and sons also are affiliated with the Episcopal Church. . . . . .

Thanking you for affording me this opportunity to express my views, I am,

Sincerely yours,

O. W. UNDERWOOD.

Masons all over the State, aroused at the deception and misrepresentation through which scheming politicians have sought to play upon their credulity, are loyally standing for justice for an abused brother. This is reflected in a rush to the Underwood standard by those members of the craft who see the scheme in its true light—reeking with selfish politics.

Masonry is far above the plane of politics and the members of the order, outraged at its attempted abuse by political self seekers, are rushing to the defense and support of Oscar W. Underwood, 33rd degree Mason, American, Patriot and Alabamian, whose Masonry rings true and needs no defense.

March 11th, will see a deserved rebuke administered to those who would tear down the pillars of this institution and trample it in the muck of politics, for selfish gain.

Reduce The Railroads' Bills
and They Will Reduce Yours

Many people seem to think that by simply repeating the magic words "We will reduce rates", the railroads can make a big cut in rates. Evidently they do not realize that existing rates are based upon what it costs railroads to furnish transportation. About 80c on every $1 collected by the railroads now goes for operating expenses, leaving only 20c to pay interest; replace worn-out equipment; make necessary improvements and expansions; pay taxes and the dividends to which stockholders are legitimately entitled.

While railroad rates, on an average, are 50% higher than in 1916, operating expenses are 100% higher; and these costs are not fixed by the railroads and cannot be regulated by them. Before the public can enjoy the benefit of lower rates, the railroads must be given the benefit of lower costs on the essentials of operation. This means that everyone depending on the railroads would have to accept smaller pay.

Through greater efficiency in all operations, railroads have been able to effect many savings; which have been passed back to the public in improved service and in rate reductions amounting to more than one billion dollars during the past three years.

If the railroads are to continue to furnish adequate service, a general reduction of rates will not be possible until operating expenses can be reduced; which can be done only when those things which the railroads purchase are reduced in price.

In the final analysis, lower railroad rates hinge entirely upon the public's ability and willingness to live at lower cost.

FROM JOHN F ALLEN

Editor Reporter:

I read with much interest Brother Tom's article in last week's paper on the need for Square Men, and will write something along this line of thought that I hope will be helpful, at least to the children.

The first line of the square is physical. We must try with all our might to be healthy, strong, robust and enduring; able to do a man's work and God's work. Our parents are supposed to start us in this work, then by studying what hurts us and what helps us we soon find the path for ourselves By abstaining from tobacco, alcohol and late hours, and by taking wholesome food and regular rest and sleep, we may build up the bodies our Creator intended us to have.

The next line in the square is social. Man is a gregarious animal and can not live happily nor usefully by himself. Babies will cry for company; the young people long for the counsel of those who are older and wiser; the old people enjoy the hearty greeting and cheerful words; the merry laugh of the young. So the child to make a square man must learn to meet and mix and mingle with people, with reverence for the old and with respect and fairness to all. He must learn to be fair in his play, always courteous and kind, allowing others any privilege he would claim for himself.

The third line in the square is intellectual. By all means go to school, go to college. Take advantage of every opportunity to learn don't be afraid you will learn it all for you can't. But if you are deprived by circumstances of any of these advantages, you can still learn. In this good day of books, newspapers and association with educated people, there is no excuse for growing up in ignorance. We can learn by simply giving close attention to what we read and hear and see. Every line in the square, I am picturing depends largely on information, so dig deep and learn all you can.

The fourth line in the square, which is absolutely essential to bind the others together is the spiritual. You can never be a square man unless you accept God as your Father, Christ as your Savior, and His commands as your rule of conduct. Unless you love your neighbor as yourself you will fall short of what God intended you to be and a failure here and hereafter.

John F. Allen.

Have You Indigestion? How's Your Blood?

Perhaps This May Interest You

Atlanta, Ga.—"I had been suffering a good while with indigestion, also very frequently with shortness of breath; and my blood was undoubtedly in very bad condition. I took three bottles, according to directions, and by this time I was relieved of all those ailments. Therefore I can cheerfully recommend Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery."—Mrs. G. H. A Live Topic

The professor was really very profound, and he wasn't such an elderly professor, either. His style was concise, and when he had finished with a subject but little remained to be said. The girls on the campus were discussing this with admiration. The scholarly ones had declaimed at length, when a little bobbed-haired beauty spoke.

"The professor tells me he now has a subject he can't say enough about," she said.

"And what is this subject, girlie?" they inquired.

"Me."

Knitted Spanish Shawl Popular; Tailored Dresses for Spring

KNITTED artistry records a new triumph. Of all the fashion themes worked out in knitted stitch, the Spanish shawl of lustrous silk, painted with vivid flowers and vines and deeply fringed in multi-colors, is the masterpiece.

Not all the traditional lore of the Spanish classic itself dims the loveliness of the knitted shawl which, in the picture herewith, so gracefully enfolds la belle Americaine. Yet pen and camera fall short of conveying the beauty, the grace, the color glory of this Spanish shawl in the original of its knitted splendor.

It would seem as if to the romantic charm of this heirloom of senora and senorita in old Spain, Twentieth century fashionists had added another stroke of genius.

Spanish Shawl of Lustrous Silk.

As a wrap over lingerie frocks the shawl is ideal.

The Spanish shawl here illustrated bears also a distinct style message for the future in that it foretells ornate and elaborate treatment throughout the realm of knitted togs. Exhibitions of advance modes include knitted plaids, some shaded, others of true Scotch inspiration, also Roman stripes.

The fashion for wraps to match the beach capes of joyous riot of color, the coming season promises much in the way of the picturesque.

Spring comes, like the Greeks, bearing gifts, of enticing new apparel and a peep at it makes our hearts beat a little faster. The mode has preserved some of the things that we cherish, revived some of our early loves, called back the banished tailored suit and presented all that we need in cleancut, satisfactory and most becoming styles.

It is no secret that there is not to be a change in silhouette—it is still the fashion to be—or look—slender—or more slender, but never less slender than nature and careful costuming allows us to be. "Straight-line" and "tubular" are two terms which the fashion reporter will be obliged to continue to overwork. But designers have devised many new ways of achieving the slenderness that sits enthroned in the realm of fashion. The tunic has returned, side draperies are ingeniously varied, sleeves go to great lengths in slenderizing the arms, or almost efface themselves, but do not absent themselves from daytime dresses. Braiding has come back, appearing in new patterns.

Tunic Dress for Spring Wear.

dress is an apparel feature this season, and especially in the realm of knitted outerwear the idea is exploited in fine achievement. Cape costumes are the order of the day, and knitted art is indulging not only in vivid color combinations, but in unique design wherein novelty shawl and scarf effects complement the skirt or one-piece dress, as the case may be.

What with the brilliant Spanish shawl, the oriental mandarin wrap, scarfs which are wide and graceful, a survey of the tunic dress pictured here finds it bearing the handwriting of the new season. It is of navy poiret twill with emplacements of beige cloth and braiding of beige-colored soutache braid. Its sleeves are an exception to the rule of the long close-fitting model for daytime wear, the underskirt is plain and reveals the proper length, which is from ten to twelve inches from the floor.

Lesson for March 2

THE REVIVAL UNDER SAMUEL

LESSON TEXT—I Sam. 1:7.

GOLDEN TEXT—Prepare your hearts unto the Lord and serve Him only.—I Sam. 7:3.

PRIMARY TOPIC—God Calls the Boy Samuel.

JUNIOR TOPIC—The Victory at Ebenezer.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How Samuel Served His Nation.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Revival Under Samuel.

Gross immorality and even anarchy prevailed during the close of the period of the judges, as we see recorded in the last chapters of Judges. Through the ministry of the last judge, Samuel, a brighter day dawned upon Israel.

I. Features of Israel's History in This Period.

1. A Demoralized Priesthood.

(1) The priests were actuated by greed (I Sam. 2:12-17). It was God's will that those who ministered at the altar should live of the things of the altar, but they broke through the divine revelations touching this matter and were securing their selfish ends by force.

(2) The priests polluted the courts of God's house with the grossest immorality (I Sam. 2:22). We thus see that the condition of the nation was most appalling. When God's ministers are actuated by greed and practice uncleanness, degradation and ruin rapidly follow.

2. An Alienated People. The only thing which separates people from God is sin. The people who choose sin shall be thus separated from God.

3. A Cessation of Divine Revelation (I Sam. 3:1). God was silent ("The word of God was precious in those days, there was no open vision"). The message from the Lord was a matter of memory.

II. God Calls Samuel (I Sam. 3:2-10).

Samuel's name means, "Asked of God." He was given to Hannah in answer to prayer. In asking God for this son she vowed to dedicate him to the Lord. Accordingly at an early age she took him to the sanctuary and gave him over to the charge of Eli. Thus in his tender years he ministered to the Lord. The beautiful life of Samuel was in striking contrast to the degradation of the nation.

III. Samuel's First Prophetic Message (I Sam. 3:11-18).

Up to this time Samuel obeyed the one who was over him, but the time had now come when he must directly hear and obey the Lord. The first message intrusted to him is a most terrible one. He hesitated to tell it to Eli, but, when pressed by him, he manifested the true courage which was lying back of his fear. He announced a fearful visitation upon Eli's house because of the sins of his sons.

IV. Samuel Established in the Prophetic Office (I Sam. 3:19-21).

"And Samuel grew, and the Lord was with him, and did let none of his words fall to the ground, and all Israel from Dan even unto Beer-sheba knew that Samuel was established to be a prophet of the Lord."

V. Victory of Samuel (I Sam. 7:1-14).

1. Samuel Calls Israel to Repentance (vv. 1-4). Some twenty years have now elapsed since Israel was humiliated by the Philistines. He asks the people to turn to the Lord with all their hearts, the proof of which would be:

(1) To put away their own licentious worship. This was really gross licentiousness under the guise of religion.

(2) To drect their hearts unto the Lord and serve Him only.

2. Israel Assembled at Mispeh (vv. 5, 6). The purpose of this assembly was the confession of their sins. They poured water before the Lord, thus symbolizing their need of cleansing and the pouring out of their hearts in penitence before the Lord. They fasted and publicly confessed their sins.

3. The Philistines Attack Israel (v. 7). The assembly of Israel at Mizpeh alarmed the Philistines. They interpreted the gathering as a preparation to attack them, so they decided to attack first.

4. The Intercession of Samuel (vv. 8, 9). Samuel accompanied his intercession with a burnt offering, showing that he looked for acceptance in the sacrifice of another, even Christ.

5. The Victory Over the Philistines (vv. 10, 11). This was the result of God's interposition. "The Lord thundered with a great thunder that day and discomfited them."

6. A Memorial Set Up (vv. 12-14). Samuel set up a stone between Mizpeh and Shen and called it Ebenezer, which means, "Hitherto hath the Lord helped us."

THE BLUE PENCIL MARK

The Blue Pencil Mark, if there is one around the label on your paper, is put there to remind you, either that your subscription has already expired, or will expire in a short time. In either case it is intended to be as kindly a request as I know how to make that you renew your subscription and so keep your membership in the select company that makes up "The Reporter Family."

The Reporter has now over 1100 subscribers. I doubt if there are many other weekly papers in the state that can show such a record of growth in so short a time. The list continues to grow; new subscriptions are being received every week. The paper should have 2000 subscribers by the end of another year. Shelby county needs a paper of just such strength as that.

You will agree with me though that in order for the paper to reach this goal it must not only continue to receive new subscriptions, IT MUST KEEP THE OLD SUBSCRIBERS.

So friends, I take this appeal to you to continue to give the paper your support. The more strength you give to the home paper the more of service will it be able to render to you and to Shelby county.

Sincerely yours,
LUTHER FOWLER,
Editor.

White House Martyrs.

The strain of entertaining a nation at the White House killed four wives of presidents of the United States. They were Mrs. Tyler, Mrs. Fillmore, Mrs. Harrison and Mrs. Wilson. The whole labor of conducting the social life of the government falls on the president's wife, and democracy, which makes the presidential pair accessible to every respectable caller, imposes a fearful nervous strain.

FOR ONE DAY ONLY

SHELBY COUNTY HIGH SCHOOL

On Wednesday morning of last week Mr. Harry Gordon made a splendid talk to the pupils of the high school, making a strong plea for accuracy, concentration and good manners. He closed his remarks by stating that he would gladly give his garden for the use of the baseball team, which generous offer is much appreciated by the school.

Recently Shelby High was placed on the Honor Roll of the State Department of Educationo the second time that our school has won this distinction. Only ten high schools out of a possible 62 can be placed on the honor roll.

Instead of trying to have a team in basket ball this year the high school organized within the school five teams and held a series of games, thus giving to practically every body the opportunity to learn to play basket ball.

There are several reasons for not having a regular team this year:

First, the desire to put out football and baseball teams, well equipped and coached.

Second, it was thought that to have three major sports would be too great a financial undertaking. It is the policy of the school to pay all athletic obligations promptly.

By following this course the association does not owe a single debt and has a good balance in the bank.

E. A. Coshatt, of Maylene, moved last week with his family to Columbiana, where they will make their home. They are occupying the home of Mrs. J. S. Pitts on College street.

C. E. Jones, Route 2, Calera, a progressive farmer, who recently became a member of the Shelby County Farm Bureau, was in town Tuesday to place with the county agent his order for fertilizer.

Harry Gordon last week bought from Mrs. Lillie Duran, the Duran building on Main street in Columbiana. Mr. Gordon states that he will begin at once to make some improvements in his new property.

Interest in the Community Bible Study Club continues. Practically every member of the class was present at the meeting last week, which was the fourth to be held.

Mrs. J. R. White and granddaughter, Mis Dorothy Brooks, are visiting relatives in Birmingham this week. Mrs. White, as secretary of the Sylacauga district Woman's Missionary society, attended the annual conference last week.

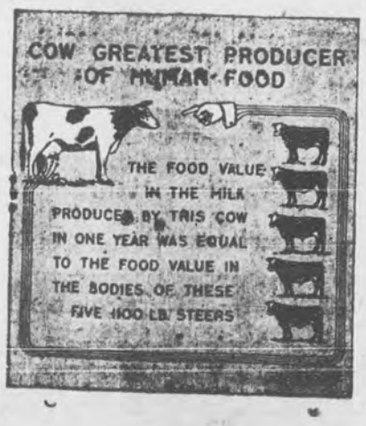
Showers of Fishes.

Accounts of showers of fishes, according to one scientist, are not necessarily "fish stories." He says such falls of fishes from the sky may be caused by high winds, whirlwinds and waterspouts that draw up the fishes from the water and then let them drop as their force is spent.

Removing Spots From Furniture.

The white marks on furniture caused by heat or water may frequently be removed successfully by holding a hot iron near them. Care must be taken, however, not to hold the iron close enough to scorch the wood. If the spots are obstinate try covering them with cooking soda and holding the hot iron close to the mark. Such treatment will give the furniture a new appearance.



Henry Ford's Personal Representative, J Worthington, and Officials of the Tennessee River Improvement Association Urge Citizens to Support Senator Underwood

Should the people of Alabama, at the approaching p election, take for granted that he would certainly be elect not come out to give him an overwhelming vote, there is little that our enemies at Washington would immediately seize and tise this as conclusive evidence that Alabama had turned the Ford offer and had repudiated Senator Underwood on t count.

We appeal to the people to turn out at the polls and gi a great complimentary vote and thus assure the Ford fri Washington of Alabama's fidelity to her faithful distinguished ter, and to the acceptance of Henry Ford's offer for Muscle S

Harpersville School Has Closing Program

By R. B. Posey)

Harpersville, Alabama, Mar. 3.—Just as the town clock struck ten Friday night the 46th session of the Harpersville school came to a close with one of the largest gatherings that we ever saw here and we have been here a long time. This has been a splendid school. Rev. J. O. Ray of Vincent was the principal and his assistants were Misses Lona Vann and Margaret Pollard, of Mignon.

Thursday night was taken up with the grades running up to the seventh, and the pupils all acquitted themselves very nicely, and their exercises were very entertaining. Friday at 11 o'clock a. m., Rev. R. L. Durant of Columbiana preached a splendid sermon in the Baptist church, which was full and running over.

Dinner was then spread on the ground and there was enough for several hundred people and some to spare. The people all went to the schoool house and Prof. Parker, principal of the Shelby County High School made a splendid speech on Educational lines and was followed by C. M. Mauldin, who made a splendid tolk also along educational lines. We all knew that Mr. Mauldin was a great talker but we did not know that he was a speaker. His speech was fine. Judge Riddle was called next but the other speakers having covered all the ground did not talk any on that line. What he did say was listeded to with marked attention and was highly appreciated. This wound up the speaking.

Next was a ball game but, as no regular teams was present a mixed game was played which was highly enjoyed. This wound up the program for the day.. By six o'clock the crown began to arrive for the play at night and by 7 o'clock the school house was full and running over. Dozens of people were turned away as the house could not hold them. The play day was a splendid success and something over fifty dollars was made which went to the school fund. The school had gotten into debt but it don't owe a cent now and has money in the treasury.

This was a great day for Harpersville and there was more people here than I ever saw before on such an occasion. Everybody seemed to enjoy everything said and done. These teachers have taught us a good school and we would be glad to see them back another year.

THE BLUE PENCIL MARK

The Blue Pencil Mark, if there is one around the label on your paper, is put there to remind you, either that your subscription has already expired, or will expire in a short time. In either case it is intended to be as kindly a request as I know how to make that you renew your subscription and so keep your membership in the select company that makes up "The Reporter Family."

The Reporter has now over 1100 subscribers. I doubt if there are many other weekly papers in the state that can show such a record of growth in so short a time. The list continues to grow; new subscriptions are being received every week. The paper should have 2000 subscribers by the end of another year. Shelby county needs a paper of just such strength as that.

You will agree with me though that in order for the paper to reach this goal it must not only continue to receive new subscriptions, IT MUST KEEP THE OLD SUBSCRIBERS.

So friends, I take this appeal to you to continue to give the paper your support. The more strength you give to the home paper the more of service will it be able to render to you and to Shelby county.

Sincerely yours,
LUTHER FOWLER,
Editor.

ALABAMIANS!
RALLY TO ALABAMA'S GREATEST OPPORTUNITY!

The eyes of the nation will turn on Alabama on March 11th. The nation will look to see how Alabamians regard their opportunity to have a President of the United States.

Alabamians, men and women, have a just pride in their state. Alabamians are loyal to their traditions. Every Alabamian takes pride in the thought of an Alabamian in the White House. Senator Oscar W. Underwood of Alabama is an outstanding Democrat whose fame is nationwide. He has an opportunity to be nominated by the Democrats of the nation as their standard-bearer.

In the face of state pride, in the face of loyalty to our traditions, we must put aside whatever petty differences we have had in the past and unite to the end that Alabama shall have one of her citizens at the helm of the national government. Opportunity is knocking at our door and we must not shut the door in the face of that opportunity, which we have never had before in the state's history.

Probably not in the life of an Alabamian now living will an opportunity to have an Alabamian in the White House come again. We must go to the polls on March 11th and by our ballots tell the nation we are as one to put an Alabamain in the White House. We must give Senator Underwood an overwhelming majority. Loyal men and women of Alabama, go to the polls on March 11th, and by your votes tell the nation you see your opportunity and are ready to seize it.

MAY USE CONVICTS TO MAKE CEMENT

DATA ON PRACTICABILITY OF PLAN BEING SOUGHT BY THE HIGHWAY COMMISSION.

PURPOSE IS TO AID ROAD BUILDING

State Owns Large Cement Rock Deposits Which Would Cut the Initial Expense.

Montgomery—Whether or not establishment of a cement manufacturing plant by the state and the operation of such a plant by convict labor would be practical, will be taken up with the state board of administration in the near future by the state highway commission. The highway commission, through Secretary of Commerce Herbert Hoover, will also ascertain what amount of saving, if any, could be effected through purchase by the state of cement imported from abroad. Action along these lines is provided for in a resolution which has been adopted by the state highway commission.

As to a state operated cement plant, it is stated that there are large deposits of cement rock on lands now owned by the state, a fact that should figure largely in cutting down the initial expense of establishing such a plant. Another factor which would figure materially in the manufacturing of cement by the state, would be the employment of convict labor. It is claimed that this labor could be used to equal advantage in maintaining a cement manufactory, as in a cotton factory, several of which are now operated largely by the labor of convicts.

The primary purpose of the establishment, equipment and operation of a state owned plant for manufacturing cement, would be to provide cement used in the construction of state roads, it is stated. The residue, it was stated further, would be sold on the open market, thus providing for disposal of the overplus of production, if any.

POLITICIANS FEAR THE ALIEN BILL

JOHNSON MEASURE, APPROVED BY COMMITTEE, MAY BE MADE LESS RESTRICTIVE.

By EDWARD B. CLARK

Washington.—Some of the leaders of both parties today are showing signs of fear that immigration legislation as framed may injure their chance of success in the presidential election. The nature of the proposed restrictive bill is making some of the members tremble.

Democratic members of house and senate who happen to represent districts outside the great cities seemingly are as strongly in favor of restrictive legislation as are the Republicans from districts usually called rural, but the majority party in congress must bear the brunt of possible antagonism from certain voters next year, because even if the legislation goes through by a non-partisan vote, the dominant party naturally will be held responsible.

Rumors have been floating about recently to the effect that the Republicans will insist on changes in the Johnson bill which will rob it of some of its restrictive features and which presumably might save to the party the votes of some Americans whose hearts in the half part at least are over the water. Belief is fairly strong here, however, that party politics will have little or nothing to do with the voting in congress when the bill reaches the stage of action. There have been developments in American life in the past few years which make it appear the question of immigration no longer is a party one.

Johnson Bill Is Commended.

The house committee on immigration has reported the Johnson bill favorably by a majority all-sufficient to give it standing. In reporting the bill the majority members of the committee have said that it meets every requirement which investigation has developed and that its terms meet everything which the experience of the immigration bureau have shown to be proper.

The basic law of 1917 is maintained in Representative Johnson's measure, but it must be remembered that this law has no percentage quota provision within it. If the provision should be dropped out of the new law the chances are that the United States literally would be over-run with immigrants within the next year or so. This is provided against, however, in the Johnson measure by the retention of the numerical limitation given in the act of May 19, 1921, but the basis of the quota of that law is changed from the census of 1910 to the census of 1890.

It readily can be seen how this will act on the quotas of the different countries of the old world. The number of the southern Europeans which can enter the country if the Johnson measure shall become a law will be materially reduced, while the number from the northern countries who will be admitted will be considerably increased. This is probably what the advocates of the new immigration law are driving at.

New York State Interested.

In New York state there is an actual drive on to bring pressure to bear to defeat the Johnson bill. New York cities have hundreds of thousands of voters who, it is believed, will be influenced in the next election more by what happens to the immigration bill than by what happens to the tax reduction bill.

Nevertheless, this insistence on the part of thousands of the voters in the big cities that the immigration law shall be framed to let more voters in, is making other communities more insistent that the foreigners should be kept out. If congress should vote as its members feel on this subject, the Johnson bill probably would go through with few negative votes.

However, the matter seems to have become one of fear to the party politicians, and it may be that the fact that this is a presidential year will act to prevent the passage of the bill in its present form. It can be taken for granted, however, that congress will not vote for anything which will give admittance to more immigrants than are allowed to come in under the present law.

Tax Reduction Fight Stubborn.

There is a hard continuing fight today in the lower house of congress between the different schools of thought on the best methods of reducing taxes. There are growing evidences that despite the known preference of President Coolidge for the Mellon plan as at first proposed, he will sign a bill which, if otherwise satisfactory, shall provide a compromise which will place the surtaxes at a figure considerably higher than that at which the secretary of the treasury would like to see them fixed.

In letters from Washington recently it was predicted that the administration would accept a compromise in this matter. There were those who believed that the prediction was baseless, but a recent letter written by the President's private secretary, Mr. Slemp, to Representative Davey makes it appear that the forecast was sound. In his letter Mr. Slemp said: "I think he (the President) is averse to making any unqualified statement that would seem to commit him to a course of action in advance of detailed knowledge of the form the legislation will take. All of the President's discussions have indicated that he is disposed to a liberal attitude."

Secretary Mellon has maintained from the first that the masses of wage and salary earners who pay income taxes will benefit from a reduction of the surtaxes.

Position of Republican Party.

The position of the Republican party on this matter is shown by what the Republican national committee has just had to say on the subject:

"The Democratic tax plan would continue to drive men of wealth to invest their capital in non-taxable securities and thereby diminish the taxes which men of wealth pay the federal government. The Mellon tax plan reduces the surtax rate to a point where men of wealth would find it more profitable to invest their money in industry, business and other profitable enterprises and pay taxes on the profits they make at the surtax rate fixed by the Mellon plan, than they would to invest their money in tax-exempt securities."

The Democrats combat this view and so prominent a Democrat and financier as William G. McAdoo, one time secretary of the treasury, has declared the Republican argument "is all bunk."

The desire of the Republican leader of the house of representatives Nicholas Longworth, is to effect a compromise on the surtax rate matter which will bring to his support those Republicans who believe that the surtax should remain where it is at a 50 per cent figure rather than be reduced to the 25 per cent figure asked by Mr. Mellon.

The Democrats in their plan have agreed upon a 44 per cent figure for the surtaxes. If the Republican leader can effect the compromise that he wishes it is believed that the final surtax figures will be 35 or 37 per cent.

Arguing Against a Deficit.

One of the Republican arguments is that the present tax law together with the tariff law as it exists provides enough money to meet the operative costs of the government and to admit a surplus of over $350,000,000. This surplus, they say, could be used to pay off the public debt at a faster rate than is now the case, but they add it also could be squandered in appropriations. The Republican declaration is that the policy of the administration is to do neither of the two things. "It proposes to reduce the taxes sufficiently to eliminate the surplus." "But," it is added, "it is apparent that taxes cannot be reduced in the aggregate more than the existing surplus, else there will be a deficit. It is not economy, it is not even common sense, to propose a tax reduction program which on the face of it immediately will produce a national deficit."

The Democrats in congress are meeting such statements as this with their own arguments in rebuttal. They maintain that the taxes can be reduced $623,000,000 without injury to surplus or anything else. It will take a good while for any tax reduction bill to prove whether it will work ill or good to the country. Therefore it seems to be certain that during the coming campaign all that can be said for or against the effect of any tax legislation must largely be in the nature of surmise.

Scouts Give Double Service

"How did we get along before we had the boy scouts, and what would we do without them?" were the queries raised by the Casper (Wyo.) Tribune in reporting two recent good turns by local scouts, in finding a lost child and in saving his mother's life by prompt first-aid. In 15 minutes after the scouts were mobilized to search for two-year-old Norman Wilson who had been lost several hours, the triumphant squad had found the little chap. When they reached the child's home they aided in restoring consciousness to the child's mother who had fainted.

Not Fit for Mother

"I hope that's a nice book for you to read, darling," said a conscientious mother to her engrossed schoolgirl daughter.

"Oh, yes, mummy," said Miss Thirteen. "It's a lovely book, but I don't think you would like it. It's so sad at the end."

"How is it sad, darling?"

"Well, she dies, and he has to go back to his wife."

Lingering Farewell

A golfer with a reputation for excessive thrift was playing at St. Andrews, and, having teed his ball, he hesitated for so long a time that another Scotchman became annoyed and exclaimed: "What are ye dilly-dallying about, Tammas? Play off!"

"Mon," replied the other glancing down at the tee, "yon's a bran new twa-shillin' ba'—and I may never see it again."

Blind Scout Ranks High

A blind boy scout who has so successfully combated his handicap as to be ranked an expert in knot-tying and "qualified to serve as instructor in this branch of scoutcraft," is twelve-year-old William Nottingham of Eaton, Ind., a student at the Institute for the Blind at Indianapolis. Because of his efficiency the lad during the past summer was made official timekeeper at the scout camp. The lad is said to be a "wizard" at signaling, and is interested in nature study, being able to identify a large number of plants and trees.

MARY SUCCEEDS ON MAIN STREET

By LAURA MILLER

"IT HAIN'T NEVER BEEN DONE"

She started off on the wrong foot, seemingly. One of the worst girls in high school, at seventeen hilariously promising to bring home a nice, handsome cowboy, she became a teacher who "rode with the ranchers, gossiped with the women, danced with the cowpunchers, and didn't go to church but once while in Wyoming." Can't you imagine all the old grannies—male and female—shaking their heads?

Actually, Olga Edith Gunkle was blessed with superabundant health and energy. The schoolgirl "saved herself from disgrace" by cramming four years' work into three, and loving grubby children of a mission class. Came college, university and settlement work. But let Olga Edith be her own vigorous self. She discovered that:

"In New York or Wyoming people needed something besides food and raiment and leisure time; they needed something that would make their lives glad and joyous and daring and noble. In other words, they needed 'that something' by many called religion. So I came to Zanesville, Ohio, as a director of religious education (much against my friends' advice, who insisted that I stay in New York) and here I was licensed to preach. My reasons for coming to a small place were these:

"I believe that many people work in a large city, not because they love their job and because of the job's sake, but because they love New York and would work at anything for the sake of staying in it. I don't believe it is 'How big is the town your job's in?' that matters so much as 'How big have you made your job in the town you are in?' that really counts.

"The second reason for working in a small town (especially if one's work is rather new) is that Old Tradition hasn't been placed upon a throne and taught to wave a little stick to the tune of, 'It hain't never been done like that before.' Because I was the first director of religious education in Zanesville there were no traditions as to how I should look, act or do my work. So I was able to do things very much more easily and with less friction than if I had been compelled to vanquish old Brother Tradition.

"Thirdly, to say in the parlance of the ministerial profession, a young person becomes poised, and well balanced more quickly in a small place than in a large because of her larger opportunities for notice and advancement for efficient, effective work."

THE DESERT AND THE MILK OF HUMAN KINDNESS

"The locality is irrelevant" is the dictum of a successful woman of Tucson, Ariz., when asked whether she thinks the business college graduate should go to a big city for work. "I advise her not to go if she can find work at home," Mrs. Reynolds continues. "There's just one provision that is important. It is that the girl can adhere to a standard of morality which will always preclude loss of self-respect."

This is no preachment from a professional reformer. Novela Routt Reynolds has learned that "an honest code pays in the end" from the many-sided business world that the Reynolds Commercial school keeps her in touch with.

World war need found Mrs. Reynolds and other business women of Tucson just as readily as if they had hurried to Washington or New York. It even brought legitimate prosperity since her service lay in equipping an unparalleled number of students for government work.

Tucson holds, Mrs. Reynolds has found, an extra appeal to the heart of any employed woman who has a spark of the material fire. The hordes of health seekers need cheery suggestions on how to adapt themselves to arid surroundings, unaccustomed conditions and homesickness. Mrs. Reynolds declares this chance for service where service is so sorely and so constantly needed is the most interesting part of being a business woman in Arizona.

Like many successful women, Mrs. Reynolds has developed outside her business an association that keeps her in touch with what women are doing everywhere. In her case the doorway to world interests is membership in the Daughters of the American Revolution. She is historian, Tucson chapter, and member at large on the national historical research committee. In April she was sent as delegate from the D. A. R. to Washington for a conference of the Woman's Universal alliance, a world organization.

Too Late

An Englishman and a Scot were having a discussion on success in life. Said the former: "Success easier than most people think. Why, when I was a young man I knew a youth who got a job in a big city and it wasn't long before he owned the whole place." The Scotchman nodded his head. "Aye, no doubt," he said, "but since then they've invented cash registers."

"ALL WRONG"

SYNOPSIS.—Jennie Woodruff refuses to marry Jim Irwin, young farm hand, because of his financial condition and poor prospects. He is intellectually above his station, and has advanced ideas concerning the possibilities of school teaching and farming, for which he is ridiculed by many. In short, Jim is an off ox. He flocks by himself and reads books and has a philosophy of his own. But there are latent powers in him unsuspected even by himself and Opportunity comes knocking at his door. Jim is nominated for school-teacher, as a joke. The joke results in his election. He visits the scholars. Jennie is nominated for county superintendent of schools. Jim speaks at a public meeting, condemning rural school methods. Prominent women condemn Jim's method of teaching; they demand "culture." His pupils defend him. Jennie invites Jim to a Christmas dinner to line him up.

"Yes," repeated Jim, "old friends. . . We are, aren't we, Jennie?"

He reached over and possessed himself of her hand. She pulled it from him gently, but he paid no attention to the little muscular protest, and examined the hand critically. On the back of the middle finger he pointed out a scar—a very tiny scar.

"Do you remember how you got that?" he asked.

Because Jim clung to the hand, their heads were very close together as she joined in the examination.

"Why, I don't believe I do," said she.

"I do," he replied. "We—you and I and Mary Forsythe were playing mumble-peg, and you put your hand on the grass just as I threw the knife—it cut you, and left that scar."

"I remember, now!" said she. "How such things come back over the memory. And did it leave a scar when I pushed you toward the red-hot stove in the schoolhouse one blizzardy day, like this, and you peeled the skin off your wrist where it struck the stove?"

"Look at it," said he, baring his long and bony wrist. "Right there!"

And they were off on the trail that leads back to childhood. They had talked long, and intimately, when the shadows of the early evening crept into the corners of the room. Jennie recalled the time when the tornado narrowly missed the schoolhouse, and frightened everybody in school nearly to death.

"Everybody but you, Jim," Jennie remembered. "You looked out of the window and told the teacher that the twister was going north of us, and would kill somebody else."

"Did I?" asked Jim.

"Yes," said Jennie, "and when the teacher asked us to kneel and thank God, you said, 'Why should we thank God that somebody else is blowed away?' She was greatly shocked."

"I don't see to this day," Jim asserted, "what answer there was to my question."

In the gathering darkness Jim again took Jennie's hand, but this time she deprived him of it.

He was trembling like a leaf. Let it be remembered in his favor that this was the only girl's hand he had ever held.

"You can't find any more scars on it," she said soberly.

"Let me see how much it has changed since I stuck the knife in it," begged Jim.

Jennie held it up for inspection.

"It's longer, and slenderer, and whiter, and even more beautiful," said he, "than the little hand I cut; but it was then the most beautiful hand in the world to me—and still is."

"I must light the lamps," said the county superintendent-elect, rather flustered, it must be confessed. "Mamma! Where are all the matches?"

Mrs. Woodruff and Mrs. Irwin came in, and the lamplight reminded Jim's mother that the cow was still to milk, and that the chickens might need attention. The Woodruff sleigh came to the door to carry them home; but Jim desired to breast the storm. He felt that he needed the conflict. Mrs. Irwin scolded him for his foolishness, but he strode off into the whirling drift, throwing back a good-by for general consumption, and a pathetic smile to Jennie.

"He's as odd as Dick's hatband," said Mrs. Woodruff, "tramping off in a storm like this."

"Did you line him up?" asked the colonel of Jennie.

The young lady started and blushed. She had forgotten all about the politics of the situation.

"I—I'm afraid I didn't, papa," she confessed.

"Those brown mice of Professor Darbishire's," said the colonel, "were the devil and all to control."

CHAPTER X

Facing Trial.

A distinct sensation ran through the Woodruff school, but the schoolmaster and a group of five boys and three girls engaged in a very unclasslike conference in the back of the room were all unconscious of it. The geography classes had recited, and the language work was on. Those too small for these studies were playing a game under the leadership of Jinnie Simms, who had been promoted to the position of weed-seed monitor.

The game was forfeits. Each child had been encouraged to bring some sort of weed from the winter fields—preferably one the seed of which still clung to the dried receptacles—but anyhow, a weed. If any pupil brought in a specimen the name of which he himself could not correctly give, he paid a forfeit. If a specimen was brought in not found in the school cabinet—which was coming to contain a considerable collection—it was placed there, and the task allotted to the best penman in the school to write its proper label. All this caused excitement, and not a little buzz—but it ceased when the county superintendent entered the room.

For it was after the first of January, and Jennie was visiting the Woodruff school.

The group in the back of the room went on with its conference, oblivious of the entrance of Superintendent Jennie. Their work was rather absorbing, being no more nor less than the compilation of the figures of a cow census of the district.

"Altogether," said Mary Talcott, "we have in the district one hundred and fifty-three cows."

"I don't make it that," said Raymond Simms. "I don't get but a hundred and thirty-eight."

"The trouble is," said Newton Bronson, "that Mary's counting in the Bailey herd of Shorthorns."

"Well, they're cows, ain't they?" interrogated Mary.

"Not for this census," said Raymond.

"Why not?" asked Mary. "They're the prettiest cows in the neighborhood."

"Scotch Shorthorns," said Newton, "and run with their calves."

"Leave them out," said Jim, "and tomorrow, I want each one to tell in the language class, in three hundred words or less, whether there are enough cows in the district to justify a co-operative creamery, and give the reason. You'll find articles in the farm papers if you look through the card index. Now, how about the census in the adjoining districts?"

"There are more than two hundred within four miles on the roads leading west," said a boy.

"My father and I counted up about a hundred beyond us," said Mary. "But I couldn't get the exact number."

"Why," said Raymond, "we could find six hundred dairy cows in this neighborhood, within an hour's drive."

"Six hundred!" scoffed Newton. "You're crazy! In an hour's drive?"

"I mean an hour's drive each way," said Raymond.

"I believe we could," said Jim. "And after we find how far we will have to go to get enough cows, if half of them patronized the creamery, we'll work over the savings the business would make, if we could get the prices for butter paid the Wisconsin co-operative creameries, as compared with what the centralizers pay us, on a basis of the last six months. Who's in possession of that correspondence with the Wisconsin creameries?"

"I have it," said Raymond. "I'm hectographing a lot of arithmetic problems from it."

"How do you do, Mr. Irwin!" It was the superintendent who spoke.

Jim's brain whirled little prismatic

"Remember How You Got That."

clouds before his vision, as he rose and shook Jennie's extended hand.

"Let me give you a chair," said he.

"Oh, no, thank you!" she returned. "I'll just make myself at home. I know my way about in this schoolhouse, you know!"

She smiled at the children, and went about looking at their work—which was not noticeably disturbed, by reason of the fact that visitors were much more frequent now than ever before, and were no rarity. Certainly, Jennie Woodruff was no novelty, since they had known her all their lives. Most of the embarrassment was Jim's. He rose to the occasion, however, went through the routine of the closing day, and dismissed the flock, not omitting making an engagement with a group of boys for that evening to come back and work on the formalin treatment for smut in seed grains, and the blue-vitriol treatment for seed potatoes.

"We hadn't time for these things," said he to the county superintendent, "in the regular class work—and it's getting time to take them up if we are to clean out the smut in next year's crop."

They repeated Whittier's Corn Song in concert, and school was out.

Since that Christmas afternoon when Jennie had undertaken to follow Mr. Peterson's advice and line Yim Irwin up, Jim had gone through an inward transformation. He had made up his mind that he would marry Jennie Woodruff. He saw her through clouds of rose and pink; but she looked at him as at a foolish man who was making trouble for her, chasing rainbows at her expense, and deeply vexing her. She was in a cold official frame of mind.

"Jim," she said, "I want you to give up this sort of teaching. Can't you see it's all wrong?"

"No," answered Jim, in much the manner of a man who has been stabbed by his sweetheart. "I can't see that it's wrong. It's the only sort I can do. What do you see wrong in it?"

"Oh, I can see some very wonderful things in it," said Jennie, "but it can't be done in the Woodruff district. It may be correct in theory, but it won't work in practice."

"Jennie," said he, "when a thing won't work, it isn't correct in theory. But my theory is correct, and it works."

"But the school board are against it."

"The school board elected me. They stood by and saw the contract signed," said Jim, "and—yes, Jennie, I know I am dealing in sophistry! I got the school by a sort of shell-game, which the board worked on themselves. But that doesn't prove that the district is against me. I believe the people are for me, now, Jennie. I really do!"

"Unless You Resign I Shall Hear the Petition for Your Removal."

Jennie rose and walked to the rear of the room and back, twice. When she spoke, there was decision in her tone—and Jim felt that it was hostile decision.

"As an officer," she said rather grandly, "my relations with the district are with the school board on the one hand, and with your competency as a teacher on the other."

"Has it come to that?" asked Jim. "Well, I have rather expected it."

His tone was weary. The Lincolnian droop in his great, sad, mournful mouth accentuated the resemblance to the Martyr President. Possibly his feelings were not entirely different from those experienced by Lincoln at some crisis of doubt, misunderstanding and depression.

"If you can't change your methods," said Jennie, "I suggest that you resign."

"Are you to be called upon to suggest that?" asked Jim.

"A formal complaint against you for incompency," she replied, "has been lodged in my office, signed by the three directors. I shall be obliged to take notice of it."

"And do you think," queried Jim, "that my abandonment of the things in which I believe in the face of this attack would prove to your mind that I am competent? Or would it show me incompetent?"

Jennie was silent.

"I guess," said Jim, "that we'll have to stand or fall on things as they are."

Jennie had drawn on her gloves, and stood ready for departure.

"Unless you resign before the twenty-fifth," said she, "I shall hear the petition for your removal on that date. I bid you good evening!"

"I'd kinder like being a wild-eyed reformer, Jim."

Pigeon Finds Way by Sight.

A British royal air force pigeon, released from a balloon a mile and a half above the ground, was unable to see the earth below on account of a thick blanket of clouds. After flying around for a little time the bird gave up all hope of finding its way back to its home, some 150 miles away, and settled down comfortably on the balloon, much as Noah's dove settled on the ark when it could find no place to rest on account of the waters. The pigeon, however, had better luck than Noah's dove. After a time a rift appeared in the clouds, and the bird swooped from the balloon through the gap in the vapor, and two hours later had delivered the message tied to its leg. This incident indicates that a pigeon finds its way home by sight, not by instinct, as many have thought.

Lesson for March 9

THE REIGN OF SAUL

LESSON TEXT—I Sam: 15:13-23.

GOLDEN TEXT—Behold, to obey is better than sacrifice.—I Sam. 15:22.

PRIMARY TOPIC—A King Who Disobeyed God.

JUNIOR TOPIC—A King Who Lost His Kingdom.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Saul's Successes and Failures.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Lessons From Saul's Reign.

In order to properly present this lesson, a survey of chapters 8 to 15 of I Samuel should be made.

I. The People Demand a King (I Sam. 8:1-22).

1. Their Reasons (vv. 1-5):

(1) Samuel was incapacitated by old age.

(2) The unfaithfulness of his sons whom he had appointed as his successors. Samuel greatly blundered in this, for the office of judge was not hereditary.

(3) The desire to be like other nations. Since the surrounding nations had kings as leaders, they wanted a king who would fight their battles.

2. Samuel's Protest (vv. 6-18). He took the matter to the Lord in prayer and the Lord instructed him to solemnly point out to the people the meaning of their action.

(1) The king would make slaves of their daughters and make their sons to serve in his army and do all kinds of hard work on his farms and in his house.

(2) He would take their lands, even those inherited from their fathers, and give them to his favorite officers and servants. Not content with that, he would take the tenth part of their produce to give to his favorites.

3. Protest Disregarded (vv. 19-20). Having made up their minds, they deliberately shut their eyes to the truth and madly rushed into the experiment.

II. Saul Chosen as King (I Sam. 9-11).

1. The King Pointed Out (9:1-10:16). Saul was sent to search for his father's asses that had wandered away. While on this errand, Samuel found him and anointed him. Saul and his father were acting freely in this matter, yet at the same time God's purpose was being carried out.

2. The King Chosen at Mizpeh (10:17-27). Saul was chosen because of his fitness. If they would have a king, the Lord gave them the one best fitted for their needs.

(1) A fine physique. He was head and shoulders above the rest of the people.

(2) Modesty. (3) Self-control. (4) Military instinct.

The method of choice was by lot. When the choice was made, part of the people enthusiastically cried, "God save the king." Others mocked and refused allegiance.

III. The King Confirmed at Gilgal (I Sam. 11).

Saul took advantage of the great victory over the Ammonites to get all the people to crown him king.

IV. Saul's Failure (I Sam. 15).

This is one of the saddest pictures in all history.

1. The Command to Saul (vv. 1-3). He was commanded to utterly exterminate the Amalekites. The reason assigned was their evil treatment of Israel after they came up out of Egypt (Exod. 17:8; Deut. 25:17).

2. The Disobedience of Saul (vv. 4-9). The commandment was carried out only in part. Agag, the king, was spared, and the best of the goods appropriated.

3. Saul Rejected by God (vv. 10-23).

(1) Samuel cried to God (v. 11). The news of this disgraceful affair greatly disturbed Samuel, moving him to cry unto God day and night.

(2) Saul's hypocritical pretense (vv. 15-16). This pretense carried a lie upon its face. Though disturbed by a guilty conscience, he tried to conciliate Samuel, but the very bleating of the sheep and the lowing of the herds betrayed him. He then tried to put the blame upon the people.

(3) Samuel rehearses before Saul God's dealing with him (vv. 17-23). Samuel met his hypocrisy by bringing him to squarely face his sin. God is more concerned in having His subjects render obedience unto His commandment than He is for them to offer unto Him sacrifice.

4. The Judgment Upon Saul (vv. 26-35). For the presumptuous offering of the sacrifice, the dynasty passed from Saul's house, and for this act of flagrant disobedience, the kingdom was rent from him. He confessed his sin and begged Samuel to still honor him before the elders of the people. Samuel forsook him and left him alone to suffer in disgrace.

Invention of Stamps

Adhesive postage stamps were invented by James Chalmers of Dundee in 1834. After the passage of the uniform penny postage bill by the English parliament in 1840, envelopes bearing an impressed stamp, or mark, for postage were introduced at the suggestion of Rowland Hill, but failed to find favor with the public. The adhesive postage stamp of Chalmers was thereupon substituted and did much to insure the success of the penny postage scheme. Postage stamps were introduced into America in 1847.

L&N Employees With Their Families Would Form A City Of 200,000

The Louisville & Nashville Railroad has on its pay-roll 52,000 employees to whom it paid in 1923 over $75,000,000. Most of them have families, and every one, no doubt, contributes to the support of some family.

Computing by the Government average of 4.3 persons to an American family, there are wholly supported or to some extent benefited, by the wages of L. & N. employees, over 200,000 people—a number greater than the population of a city the size of Atlanta, Georgia.

In addition, thousands of other people are given employment in various industries from which the L. & N. purchases materials and supplies of all descriptions, aggregating in 1923 over $37,000,000.

Moreover, these 200,000 people of the L. & N. family constitute a complete city; because there is no class of labor, and hardly a single profession, not represented among the L. & N.'s 52,000 employees.

These, and other facts which the L. & N. is making public, will enable you to realize the economic value of this great transportation system to the territory it serves, They should help you to remember that as this railroad prospers so you and your neighbors prosper, and that whatever hurts the L. & N. and restricts its capacity for profitable public service must necessarily hurt you and your community.

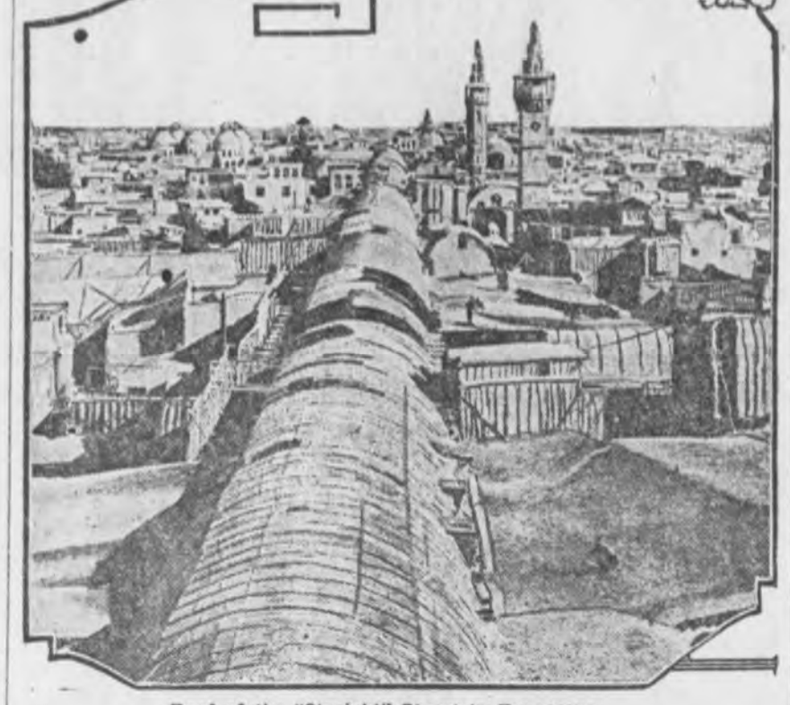
"PARADISE of the EARTH"



Roof of the "Straight" Street in Damascus.

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)

If Adam and Eve returned to our spinning sphere they could step into an American automobile and commute between the Garden of Eden and "paradise on earth."

This is no mere figure of speech, because Christians place Eden in the Euphrates valley near Babylon, while Mohammedans consider Damascus "paradise of the earth," and now Damascus and Bagdad, just over the way from Babylon, have been linked by a passenger transport using motor cars "Made in the United States."

The station-caller for the new rubber-tired caravan is a likely candidate for conductor on the Magic Carpet. Before the sun peeps over Mt. Carmel the head gasoline sheik pokes his head in the door of the best hotel at Haifa, Jerusalem's Mediterranean port, and probably shouts in stentorian train-caller tones:

"All aboard for Bagdad! Stops made at Sidon, Tyre, Beirut, Mt. Lebanon Pass, Damascus, Ramadi, and points east, leaving Haifa Saturday, 10 a. m., arrive at Bagdad noon Monday."

If it is not the Magic Carpet, it certainly is a near approach to that long sung mode of transportation. Even in 1914 Haifa was almost a month from Bagdad by overland travel, and three weeks of that month had to be spent in tedious, racking camel-travel. But the hotel entrance discloses no planes; only three sleek American motor cars purring like great cats, and a view of the blue Mediterranean.

These three motor cars traveling twice a week between Haifa, Damascus and Bagdad are the latest jolt to the changing and changed East. It means that products of American mechanical genius have conquered what is probably the oldest trade route known to man, the sandy waste between the Holy Land and the rich valley of the twin rivers, Tigris and Euphrates, where Babylon raised her mighty towers.

Less than twenty years ago ancestors of these motor cars which cover 700 miles of desert in two days and a half, were snapped up by New York sportsmen if they could chug around a half-mile board track without stopping. What wonder that the shuffle-footed camels, masters of this desert trail for more than 6,000 years, elevate their noses in painful disgust when Akron (Ohio) tires throw sand in their eyes.

Motoring Through Historic Land.

London is brought within 10 days of Bagdad by the new transport which now carries mail as well as passengers. Travelers can connect with the service at Haifa by train from Alexandria or ship directly to the port of Beirut and join the caravan there. The motor cars, in addition to three expert chauffeurs, carry a motor mechanic and also, on reaching the true desert, an Arab skilled in politics as well as travel. Leaving Haifa, on the Bay of Acre of Crusader fame, the cars descend directly to the sand beach. This affords one of the finest motor roads in the world. So closely do the cars hug the shore that waves often lap the wheels.

Before reaching Tyre, Gibraltar of the ancient world, and Sidon, its one-time New York, the swift cars must turn inland to evade dunes. But a perfect pike awaits them, for Allenby's chicken-wire road stretches before the motorists. When the English fought the Turks in Palestine they found that prosaic wire mesh would support a flivver in the sand, and it is this same war road which the passenger transport uses.

Tyre, and Sidon, whose destruction Ezekiel most aptly phophesied and which Jesus declared were but little better than wicked Sodom, look innocent enough today. Like Los Angeles and San Francisco, these two ports carried on an ancient feud for supremacy. Today Sidon is the largest. It exports thousands of cases of oranges and tons of olives from the fruitful Syrian plain. Ancient Sidonese extracted a beautiful purple dye from Mediterranean shellfish but the copyright laws were loose in Solomon's day and so the world knows this shade as Tyrian purple.

Tyre deserves more than a glance from the motorist. It was built on a rocky island with the sea for a moat. Phoenicians erected walls 150 feet high around their stronghold and from this port dispatched their sailors who are said to have been the first to steer by the stars. More than 2,000 years before Vasco da Gama Tyrian mariners circled Africa, arriving at the "Gates of Hercules," as Gibraltar was called. A colony of Tyrians, fleeing court intrigues, settled Carthage.

On to Beirut and the new East. It has a monument to the Twentieth century; the American college overlooking the Mediterranean. Here 150 American instructors teach Persians, Greeks, Syrians, Arabs, Egyptians, Armenians and the Turks in the same classrooms. Their heritage of mutual distrust is here converted to friendship by hard knocks on the football field.

To Damascus, the "Paradise."

Along the shore route the blue of the sea contrasts with the snow of the Lebanons and, leaving Beirut, the automobiles start for the famous peaks on the road that ex-Kaiser Wilhelm traveled on his theatrical Eastern tour not many years ago. Olive orchards clothe the mountain side as of old, but the famous cedars are few. Solomon and his kith and kin failed to think of future generations when they cut timber for temples. When Mohammed saw Damascus from the pass which the motor cars mount in the lesser Lebanons he cried out "I dare not go in. Man can enter paradise but once, and if I go into Damascus, this paradise on earth, I shall not be able to enter paradise thereafter." But the traveler from the Occident will probably exclaim, "Beautiful, isn't it? I hope they have a good hotel," and take a snapshot.

Damascus may be compared to Montreal, Richmond, Virginia, or Albany, New York. They are at the head of water navigation—Damascus is the head of desert navigation. Travelers cannot escape this significance as the three dusty cars throttle down to push into the traffic of "the street called Straight" where Ananias met Paul. The street is practically a direct line between the south gate and the north gate and is said to be the only straight street in Damascus. It is domed with a continuous semi-circular iron roof, high enough for a "man on a camel with spear."

A riot of sounds and smells enliven this corridor. Fez-capped merchants shout the marvels of their candies; brass workers, cross-legged, work their trade when not exhorting. Turbaned sons of the desert market cucumbers three feet long; rug merchants, ice cream salesmen, lemonade men, peddle their wares. Everyone has heard of the famous Damascus swords. Here they are for sale but they are "Made in Germany." Other "antiques" come from Manchester.

Caravans Halt There.

As head of desert navigation Damascus is the halting place of many caravans. Men and camels alike refresh themselves in the sparkling mountain stream of the town. It is known to Bedouins and Moslems alike as "The Pearl of the Desert." Railroads run on three most important ancient routes out of Damascus today and the new motor transport follows the fourth—to Bagdad. One goes north to Aleppo, another west to Beirut and a third to Mecca. The latter carries thousands of pilgrims each spring.

One of a party of four women who recently made the trip reports only one inconvenience, the prohibition of washing before lunch because of the necessary economy with water. About thirty miles out of Damascus the cars are right in the heart of the desert. The ground is even and very hard, so that it is possible to bowl along at a rapid pace. There is no defined road, but the same track will be followed each journey and very soon it is expected there will be a marked route. Baring delays the convoy bounces along on the cobblestones of the city of the "Arabian Nights" by noon of the third day from Haifa.

Will Your Family Be Happy This Spring?

If yours is one of the few remaining families lacking an automobile, no doubt you have finally decided to get one within the next four months.

A low-priced modern automobile like the Chevrolet has become indispensable to the family of ordinary income. A million other families can easily prove to you that the better way is with Chevrolet. The beauties of nature, the interesting and educational features of other places and ways of living, remain things to read about or seen dimly in cold photographs until you are free to get to them at your convenience and pleasure.

But, suppose you have definitely decided to buy a Chevrolet this spring. This does not necessarily mean you are going to get it. Anyone posted on conditions in the automobile business will tell you that thousands of families are going to be unable to get cars this spring. This has been true almost every spring for the last ten years. There are just two ways of making sure of getting your Chevrolet for use when the flowers and balmy breezes of spring lure you to the country roads—buy it now or order it now.

If you do not want to pay for it in full at this time, any Chevrolet dealer will arrange terms to suit your convenience. You will be surprised to learn how easy it is to pay for a Chevrolet and use it while you are paying for it.

Please realize these statements are made by us in good faith and we mean just what we say about the possible difficulties of getting a car delivered to you this spring if you wait until then to order it. The only way to be sure of a Chevrolet this Spring is to order it NOW.

Lobster Discards Its Shell Quite Frequently

Few living creatures have such striking habits as the lobster. It begins to molt or discard its outgrown clothes the second day after hatching, and continues to do so with increasing frequency until it has ceased to grow at all.

When the old shell becomes too small a new skin begins to grow underneath it. When this growth nears completion the lobster becomes a "shedder," ready to cast off not only its old shell, but even the lining of its esophagus, stomach and intestines.

Restless and uneasy as the molt approaches, there comes a break where the tail joins the shell. The lobster then turns over on its side, bends itself to the shape of a "V," with the break at the apex. Pressure is applied, and gradually the rear end of the old shell breaks loose from the one beneath. Step by step the process of liberating the imprisoned body from its outgrown armor sweeps forward, until finally the claws are withdrawn through the narrow openings. Presently, with a mighty effort, the lobster emerges from its coat of mail, casts off the linings of its digestive tract and steps out, full-panoplied in a soft new shell.—Geographic Magazine.

Human Voice Causes Avalanche in the Alps

Avalanches, which in the last few years have caused much damage in the Bernese Oberland, are sometimes started by trivial causes. Even a whisper has been known to set them off, and lives have been lost by a climber shouting to his companions when crossing a snow slope.

The starting of an avalanche which a few years ago overwhelmed a caravan of sleighs in an Alpine pass was attributed to the tinkle of sleigh bells, and ever since the use of bells on this route has been prohibited.

Newcomers to Switzerland often inquire what purpose is served by the little barriers dotted about the mountain slopes. These are the avalanche breakers, without which traffic on many of the Alpine lines and passes would be impossible for part of the year. It would be futile to place obstructions across the foot of the track taken by an avalanche; once the mass has gained momentum it sweeps all before it. So thick stone barriers are built on the slopes of the mountains.—Manchester Guardian.

Not to Be Put Off

The minister had come home with the Browns for dinner. When they sat down to the meal Mr. Brown asked the guest to say grace. This he did. However, the preacher talked so softly that those at the table did not hear his whispered "Amen."

Freddy, though, had been watching the minister out of one corner of his eye, so when the family still sat with bowed heads after the grace was finished, Freddy exclaimed: "All heads up and let's go to eatin'!"

THAT PAIN IN YOUR CHEST MEANS YOU HAVE TAKEN COLD

But Don't Waste Time Taking Liniments—You Need Cheney's Expectorant

You woke up this morning with a pain in your chest and a feeling of tightness and wondered if you might have taken a severe cold. Then you looked for a bottle of liniment and rubbed till the skin was blistered and wondered why you didn't get any better.

Well, the liniment couldn't get at the seat of the trouble, which was inside. You have a deep-seated cold and probably are threatened with pneumonia or pleurisy. You have got to get something inside of you—right into your circulation to reach the inflammation that is going to become congested if you don't hurry up and stop it.

Cheney's Expectorant goes right to the spot—dispels the inflammation, soothes the congested tissues and opens up all the air passages and makes breathing easy. The pain will disappear and you will feel easy in no time. You had better keep a bottle in the house for use in emergency.

For sale by all druggists and in small towns by general merchants at 30c and 60c a bottle.—Advertisement.

SENATOR UNDERWOOD IS 33RD DEGREE MASON IN GOOD STANDING

Hon. Julian F. Spearman, of Anniston, Past Grand Master of the Masons of Alabama, Answers Letter From Worshipful Master of Jacksonville Lodge No. 42, A. F. & A. M., Concerning Senator Underwood's Masonry

"IS HELD IN HIGH ESTEEM BY MASONIC FRATERNITY OF ALABAMA"

Gives Full Information As to Fellowship Forum and Its Connection With the Masonic Fraternity and States: "Any Attempt to Deliver the Vote of Masons of Alabama for Selfish Purposes Has Always Proved Failure and a Boomerang" Anniston, Ala., Feb 25, 1924.

Mr. M. A. Nunnally,

Worshipful Master

Hiram Lodge No. 42, A. F. & A. M.,

Jacksonville, Ala.

Dear Bro. Nunnally:

Your letter of Feb. 23rd received and in reply will say that I retired as Grand Master on Dec. 6th last, so do not consider this reply as coming from a present official of the Grand Lodge of Alabama. During the two years in which I served the Grand Lodge as its Grand Master it was my pleasure to be associated with Bro. Geo. Fleming Moore, Editor-in-Chief of the Fellowship Forum. I appointed Bro. Moore as Grand Orator of the Grand Lodge of Alabama and regard him as a warm personal friend. I do not mind answering your letter freely and frankly, as I have nothing to conceal, neither do I object to you making public the contents of this letter which is in reply to your letter.

I am reliably informed that Bro. Moore was not requested to resign as the active head of Scottish Rite Masonry for the Southern Jurisdiction, but that he requested that he be transferred from this position which he held for life, and in accordance with his request he was transferred and made the Sovereign Grand Commander for the Scottish Rite of the Southern Jurisdiction Emeritus, with full salary for life.

The Fellowship Forum is not a Masonic periodical. It has never been and is not now the spokesman for Masonry in Alabama. The only thing that is official so far as the Grand Lodge is concerned is the Grand Lodge itself; the Grand Master between the communications of the Grand Lodge and the Masonic Manual published by the Grand Lodge which contains everything but the traditional part of Freemasonry.

In regard to Senator Underwood, he is a 33rd degree Mason and is at present in good standing. He has never repudiated Masonay, neither has Masonry repudiated him. He is held in high esteem by the Masonic Fraternity in Alabama.

Masonry is not a political organization or order. We have on our roster practically 50,000 voters in Alabama who vote as their consciences dictate. We have among our membership both democrats and republicans and some who are neither. We have both the old line parties represented in the Grand Lodge officers. It has been my observation that any attempt to deliver the vote of the Masons of Alabama to serve for selfish purposes has not only been a failure but has always proved to be a boomerang.

Yours fraternally.

JULIAN F. SPEARMAN.

FORD SHOALS BILL PASSED BY HOUSE

Late Monday afternoon the house of representatives of the United States congress passed the McKenzie bill providing for the acceptance by the government of Henry Ford's offer for Muscle Shoals, by a vote of 228 to 142. The bill now goes to the senate where a hard fight is expected to be made against it. Friends of the measure however, feel confident that it will pass the upper house before summer.

The bill as passed was, it is said, in just the form in which Mr. Ford himself would have written it. A large number of amendments to the bill was proposed by those opposed to its passage, only one of which passed and this amendment was voted down in the final passage of the bill, because it was believed to be unsatisfactory to Mr. Ford.

This action is the first great victory won by friends of the Ford offer, after a delay of two years.

SHELBY GOES FOR UNDERWOOD

With little interest in the election and with a very light vote Shelby county gave Senator Underwood a majority in the primary election Tuesday. Returns from only a few beats were received up to the time of going to press. Returns from these were as follows:

Columbiana, Underwood, 108; Musgrove 16; Dinsmore 1.

Calera, Underwood, 27, Mus-

Montevallo, Underwood 150; Musgrove 22; Dinsmore 3.

Grove 20: Dinsmore 5.

Vincent, Musgrove 73: Underwood 18, Dinsmore 0.

Harpersville, Underwood 16; Musgrove 8; Dinsmore 1.

Boothton, Underwood, 111; Musgrove 7; Dinsmore 0.

Wilton, Musgrove 51; Underwood 2, Dinsmore 5.

Saginaw, Musgrove 16; Underwood 8, Dinsmore 1.

Shelby, about 30 votes, nearly all for Underwood.

No election was held at Wilsonville.

According to the Age-Herald statement Wednesday morning Underwood carried the state by 12,000 votes. Underwood managers claimed to have carried 59 of the 67 counties. Morgan, Coffee, Jackson, Madison and Walker were among those conceded to Musgrove

THE BLUE PENCIL MARK

The Blue Pencil Mark, if there is one around the label on your paper, is put there to remind you, either that your subscription has already expired, or will expire in a short time. In either case it is intended to be as kindly a request as I know how to make that you renew your subscription and so keep your membership in the select company that makes up "The Reporter Family."

The Reporter has now over 1100 subscribers. I doubt if there are many other weekly papers in the state that can show such a record of growth in so short a time. The list continues to grow; new subscriptions are being received every week. The paper should have 2000 subscribers by the end of another year. Shelby county needs a paper of just such strength as that.

You will agree with me though that in order for the paper to reach this goal it must not only continue to receive new subscriptions, IT MUST KEEP THE OLD SUBSCRIBERS.

So friends, I take this appeal to you to continue to give the paper your support. The more strength you give to the home paper the more of service will it be able to render to you and to Shelby county.

Sincerely yours,
LUTHER FOWLER,
Editor.

WRECK ON SOUTHERN

The Southern train from Anniston to Wilton was wrecked Friday evening at 6 o'clock about a mile below Columbiana, caused by the breaking of an axle under the tender. The entire train was thrown from the track, the baggage car and the tender were turned over, and considerable damage was done to the track. Two members of the train crew sustained slight injuries, but none of the passengers was hurt.

STATE WIDE SUNDAY SCHOOL-CHURCH DAY

Sunday, March 30, 1924, has been designated "State Wide Sunday School and Church Day," by a committee of the Alabama Sunday school Council of Christian Education and an appropriate opening exercise has been prepared, which is hoped will be given in every church and Sunday school in Alabama. The program for this exercise will be given in a later issue of the Reporter.

A proclamation by Governor Brandon officially designating the day and given reasons for its observance, has been issued. It is stated in the governor's proclamation that there are in Alabama "five hundred thousand white children and youths and three hundred thousand black children growing up without personal knowledge of God and his laws."

In connection with the exercises of the Field Day, a demonstration in the planning and care of school grounds will be given under the supervision of the Extension Department at Auburn. Childersburg will be one of only five schools in the state to have demonstration school grounds this year. These exercises will continue throughout the day and a cordial invitation is given every one who is interested. Since the completion of a magnificent consolidated school building a few years ago, Childersburg has become one of the school centers of Talladega county.

FARMERS EXCHANGE BEATS THE MAIL ORDER HOUSES ON PRICES

In the full page advertisement of the Farmers Exchange carried in the Reporter last week there was one item mentioned that deserved special attention. This was "A good all leather Endicott Johnson plow shoe for $1.95." The accompanying cut shows the shoe referred to.

This item is important because a comparison with the catalogue of a well known mail order house shows this identical shoe listed at $1.98. Here is an instance in which the local store is not only offering values as good as can be obtained by sending money away to a distant state, but is actually offering the same goods for less money.

Mr. Harwell of the Farmers Exchange, since coming to Columbiana, has made it a rule to tell the people frequently through the columns of the home paper, about the values he has for them. He states that he has found it highly profitable to do so, and readily attributes to this fact a large part of the growth his business has enjoyed since coming to his new location.

The Reporter hopes that its readers will make it a rule to study carefully the advertisements of the local merchants as they are carried in the paper from week to week. In doing this there is little doubt that other instances of opportunity for greater values and more satisfactory service in trading at home, will be observed.

MONTEVALLO KEEPS "COLLEGE NIGHT"

Montevallo, March 11.—"College Night" has become one of the regular traditions of Alabama College. There is no corresponding exercises given in any other college so far as is known here.

During the month of March, one evening is set apart for a general contest between all the students of the institution. They are divided into two groups—the purple and gold. The program consists of songs, stunts, and impersonations. These are presented alternately by the two contending parties.

Mary Riley of Sylacauga was the leader for the Golds and Mary Bradshaw of Beatrice led the Purples. Edith Montgomery of Warrior chairman of the Student Government Association, made the announcements.

The contests was close and vigorous and there was considerable doubt in the entire audience as to which side was the winner. However, the judges, consisting of Charlton G. Smith, Brierfield, Guy L. Chamberlin, Boothton, and Miss Alice Wyman, Librarian of the state University, Tuscaloosa, awarded their decision in favor of the Purples.

A splendid dinner was served by Miss Annie Irvin, the able food supervisor of the college. After the dinner and exercises were over the audience repaired to the assemly hall and there engaged in friendly conversation for some time.

The prize to be awarded was a leather banner, but it failed to reach Montevallo in time to be given when announced. The winning side will present it to the college when it arrives.

Work has been delayed on the big new building for the City Garage by the unfavorable weather conditions.

GEO. ROBERSON HANGED FRIDAY

George Roberson, the negro who took the life of William Murphy near Columbiana in July of last year, paid for that, and a long list of other crimes, with his life when he was hanged in the Shelby county jail on Friday of last week. The execution took place at 9:30 o'clock and was witnessed by a small number, as prescribed by law.

The condemned negro was brought to Columbiana a few days before that set for his execution and kept under close guard night and day.

At first he seemed stolidly indifferent to his approaching end, but as the time drew near he became restless and begged his guard Deputy Hugh Shaw, to remain with him.

Just before being led to his death Roberson was permitted to make a statement to the large crowd assembled in front of the jail. He talked at length of his "life full of trouble" saying that from the time he was 16 years old up to the time of his arrest last year, he had taken the lives of nine men. He refused to give the names of his victims. In a statement to certain individuals, Roberson is said to have confessed to having taken the lives of 13 men, women and children.

Roberson stated that he had no reason for killing Murphy that Mr. Murphy had never done him any wrong, but that he had intended to kill Louie Verchot because he said, Verchot had "beaten him up" one night in the post-office.

Following his statement Roberson walked up stairs and stepped on the death trap without the least show of hesitation. The noose was adjusted by Deputy Frank Fallon and the trap was sprung at exactly 9.30 by Deputy L. P. Godwin. Roberson's neck was broken by the fall and the doctors pronounced him dead in 13 minutes.

This is the first hanging in Shelby county in ten years, a negro, Tom Patterson having been hanged during the administration of Sheriff J. H. Fulton, and it may be the last legal hanging in Alabama. A recent law provides that in the future men condemned to death shall be electrocuted at the State Penitentiary.

Ground Hog Wins Out.

Careful observers seem to be agreed that the ground hog is having his way with the weather this time. In addition to continued rains that have prevailed since ground hog day, the first part of this week brought one of the coldest snaps of the whole season. In Columbiana the steady rain of Sunday was followed by a considerable snow storm Sunday night that covered all the buildings and in places covered the ground. This was followed by a freeze Monday night that sent the mercury down to twenty-four degrees.

Work to Start Soon on Sunday School Annex

Material is being placed on the ground and work on the Sunday school annex to the Methodist church in Columbiana was to have been begun this week. It is expected that the addition will be ready for use in a very short time.

COMMUNITY BIBLE STUDY CLASS WILL BE REORGANIZED

The first series of lessons for the Community Bible Study Class will be completed with the lesson for tonight. The class will be mmediately reorganized and a new series of lessons will be begun.

STATE LEASES FLAT TOP FOR CONVICTS

COAL IS TO BE DELIVERED ON BOARD CARS AT $1.30 PER TON.

STATE TO HAVE COMPLETE CONTROL

An Important Step In The Complete Abolition of Lease System, It Is Said.

Montgomery.—Gov. W. W. Brandon has approved a contract entered into between the state board of administration and the Sloss-Sheffield Steel and Iron company, effective July 1, 1924, doing away with the present system of working convicts at Flat Top coal mine. Terms of the contract provide that the coal shall be delivered by the state at the surface on railroad cars at $1.30 per ton of 2,000 pounds washed coal, the state leasing the mine. The state will have complete control, not only of convicts employed in the mine, but of all employes engaged in the operation of the mine, and the signing of the contract is declared to represent an important step in the actual abolition of lease system which has for so many years been desired.

The number of convicts employed at Flat Top is given at approximately 485. It will be noted that the contract differs from that recently made with the Bessemer Coal, Iron and Land company for Bell Ellen mines, in that the state will deliver the coal at the surface, the company retaining ownership and disposition of the fuel, while at Bell Ellen the mines were leased on a royalty basis, the state to sell the coal.

It was pointed out that Flat Top is a much larger operation than Bell Ellen, with an output of around 2,200 tons of coal daily, and it was deemed advisable to try out the sale of coal by the state on a moderate scale at first. The lease system is abolished in both cases, it is stated.

Spring's New Modes Are Beaded; Day Dresses for Busy Women

TO BEAD or not to bead—that is the question that has been settled by stylists—and the beaded gown, for afternoon or evening, is among those present in every representative display. Beading is used conservatively—there is much refinement of design and great beauty of coloring revealed in the new beaded dresses.

A new effect in beading has made its appearance on gowns of fine silver lace, or silver net, with Egyptian figures wrought in tiny beads (red, yellow, green and blue) arranged in bands that encircle the figure to a point below the thigh. They are separated by very narrow bands of small jet cabochons.

Attractive Beaded Dinner Gown.

A conservative and attractive model appears in the dinner gown pictured, which will serve for afternoon as well. In the new models the beads are chosen to tone in with the color of the material used—the dominant color in the beaded design the same as that in the gown. Any one of the approved lighter colors for spring might be chosen for a gown which is required for either afternoon or evening wear. As a rule the new models are not heavily beaded, but the patterns are delicate as in the vine tracery about conventional flower motifs, shown in the picture.

Beading appears on many informal dinner and afternoon frocks, in rows of narrow bands about the bottom of the skirt, on wide hip bands and outlining the neck lines. This kind of beading is not too tedious for seamstresses.

The all-day dress is a very adaptable affair, more or less plain and unadorned, according to the occupations of the day that sponsors it. The modern woman who is to be engrossed with running about on business errands all day will choose a plain all-day dress, a utility coat and a tailored hat. She who is to shop, lunch, attend a matinee or club meeting between breakfast and the dinner hour, will undertake to wear an all-day dress that is less plain, or will choose a coat with some degree of elaboration in its make-up, or look to a dressy touch on her hat to make her costume fit in with various backgrounds.

A smart, plain coat makes almost any day dress possible, since the wrap is taken off indoors. Its removal may disclose a regulation afternoon frock, like the pretty model shown at the left of the two pictures. This is of black crepe de chine in a heavy quality, and has a short tunic draped to one side and lengthened by a deep silk fringe. Its narrow, flat collar is extended into a short scarf-end, also finished with silk fringe.

Sometimes occupations reverse their usual order and one begins the day's outside activities in something dressy and must finish them in something entirely informal. In this case the day dress is plain and the coat and hat take on the responsibility of seeing their wearer through a luncheon or matinee—to disappear when she is busy teaching a class at night school or making herself otherwise useful. One of the new braided coats and a semi-dress hat, as shown in the picture, will acquit themselves well in a case like this.

Lesson for March 16

THE REIGN OF DAVID

LESSON TEXT — II Sam. 7:18-26; 8:14, 15. (Read I Sam. 16 to II Sam. 24.)

GOLDEN TEXT—I delight to do Thy will, O my God.—Ps. 40:8.

PRIMARY TOPIC—A Shepherd Boy Becomes King.

JUNIOR TOPIC—David and Goliath.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—David a Character Study.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—What David Achieved for Israel.

I. Chosen King While a Shepherd Boy (I Sam. 16:1-13).

1. Samuel Sent to Bethlehem (vv. 1-5). Samuel was directed to go to Bethlehem and from among the sons of Jesse choose a successor. God instructed him to avoid publicity by the concealment of his real purpose. Samuel was not under obligation to tell all that he knew, especially since the parties had no moral right to know.

2. Samuel Anointed David (v. 13). Though the Lord has refused to choose one of the eldest sons of Jesse, when this stripling of a boy came before Samuel, the Lord indicated His choice. This anointing typified the enduement of the Holy Spirit which is essential for any and all service for God.

II. David's Training.

1. In the Open Fields (I Sam. 16:11-13; 17:34-37). As a young man, his business was to keep his father's sheep. The prevailing tendency of such an occupation would be to take things easily, but David did not fall into a life of indolence. He became such a skilled musician that he was called to play his harp before the king. He was also an expert marksman, so that he could throw a stone with such precision as to need only one throw to down the Philistine giant. Then, too, he was physically fitted, for he had been "educated in the school of the lion and the bear."

2. In the King's Court (I Sam. 18:2, 21:9). Here was formed that tie of friendship with Jonathan which not only was a bright spot in David's life, but lives in history as a unique affair.

3. In the Camp of the Outlaw (I Sam. 21:10; 31:13). The king had given commandment to kill David. When the truth of this was realized David fled to the king of Gath, where he feigned madness. Though David did some foolish and unbecoming things during this time, he is to be commended for his self-mastery in that he would not touch the Lord's anointed.

III. David Made King of Judah (II Sam. 2:1-4).

Trusting God, David went to Hebron, where the men of Judah anointed him king over them. Thus, a part of the nation recognized him as king and ratified the work which Samuel did years before.

1. The Dual Kingdom (II Sam. 2:8; 4:12). Most of the tribes of Israel held to Ishbosheth, Saul's son, whom Abner had proclaimed king of Mahanaim. Feuds continued between the rival factions. David's power increased, while that of Ishbosheth waned. This period of civil war lasted seven and a half years.

2. David Crowned King of United Israel (II Sam. 5:1-5). Abner's death and Ishbosheth's assassination put an end to David's opposition. Besides, David's behavior during this time gradually won for him the confidence of the tribes, so that they all came to him at Hebron and anointed him as their king. They assigned as their reasons for anointing him their king:

(1) He was their brother (v. 1).

(2) He was their true leader in war, even in Saul's time (v. 2).

(3) He was the Lord's choice (v. 2).

IV. David's Worship and Prayer (II Sam. 7:18-26).

1. For God's Goodness to Him (vv. 18-22). This was shown in promising to build him a house. The content of this covenant is set forth in verses 8-16. It contains the following elements:

(1) A house, or posterity (v. 13).

(2) A throne—a royal authority (v. 13).

(3) A kingdom (v. 13).

(4) Perpetuity, that is, forever (v. 13).

This was an absolute promise. Disobedience on the part of David's seed would entail chastisement, but not an abrogation of the covenant.

2. For God's Goodness to the Nation (vv. 23-26). No other nation in all the world had been accorded such treatment. The central thought is God's goodness centered in his redemption of the nation from Egyptian bondage.

V. God Preserved David Wherever He Went (II Sam. 8:14, 15).

God will do the same for all those who trust Him.

He could k of nothing else as he sat at the ple supper which he could scarce- taste. Incompetent! He was in- petent. He picked up a pen, and an writing. He wrote, "To the norable the Board of Education of Independent District of ———" d he heard a tap at the door. His ther admitted Colonel Woodruff.

Good evening, Colonel," said Jim. ke a chair, won't you?"

No," replied the colonel. "I ught I'd see if you and the boys the schoolhouse can't tell me some- ng about the smut in my wheat. I rd you were going to work on that ight."

I had forgotten!" said Jim.

I wondered if you hadn't," said the onel, "and so I came by for you. was waiting up the road. Come and ride up with me."

The colonel had always been friend- but there was a new note in his nner tonight. He was almost defer- ial. He worked with the class on problem of smut. He offered to the boys in every possible way in ir campaign against scab in pota- s. He suggested some tests which uld show the real value of the atment. The boys were in a glow pride at this co-operation with onel Woodruff. This was real k! Jim and the colonel went ay together. It had been a great ning.

Jim," said the colonel, "can these s spell?"

I think," said Jim, "that they can spell any school about here."

Good," said the colonel. "How are y about arithmetic and the other nches? Have you sort of kept m up to the course of study?"

I have carried them in a course allel to the textbooks," said Jim, d covering the same ground. But as been vocational work, you know elated to life."

Well," said the colonel, "if I were , I'd put them over a rapid re- w of the textbooks for a few days ay between now and the twenty- h."

What for?"

Oh, nothing—just to please me. . And say, Jim, I glanced over a mmunication you have started to more or less Honorable Board of ucation."

Yes?"

Well, don't finish it. . . . And y, Jim, I think I'll give myself the xury of being a wild-eyed reformer once."

Yes," said Jim, dazed.

And if you think, Jim, that you've no friends, just remember that I'm you."

Thank you, Colonel."

And we'll show them they're in a rse race."

I don't see . . ." said Jim.

You're not supposed to see," said colonel, "but you can bet that 'll be with them at the finish; and, thunder! while they're getting a ll meal, we'll get at least a lunch. e?"

But Jennie says," began Jim.

Don't tell me what she says," said colonel. "She's acting according her judgment, and her lights and her organs of perception, and I n't think it fittin' that her father ould try to influence her official nduct. But you go on and review em common branches, and keep ur nerve. I haven't felt so much ke a scrap since the day we stormed ookout mountain. I kinder like be- g a wild-eyed reformer, Jim."

CHAPTER XI

Fame or Notoriety.

The office of county superintendent as, as a matter of course, the least sirable room of the courthouse. oor Jennie! She anticipated noth- g more than the appearance of essrs. Bronson, Peterson and Bon- r in her office to confront Jim Irwin. ut at nine fifty-six the crowd in nnie's office exceeded its seating ca- acity, and Jennie was in a flutter as e realization dawned upon her that is promised to be a bigger and more ublic affair than she had anticipated. At nine fifty-nine Raymond Simms pened the office door and there filed enough children, large and small, fill the room. In addition there re- ained an overflow meeting in the ll, under the command of that dis- nguished military gentleman, Colonel lbert Woodruff.

Say, Bill, come here," said the olonel, crooking his finger at the puty sheriff.

What you got here, Al?" said Bill, oming up the stairs, puffing. "Ain't it a little early for Sunday school picnics?"

"This is a school fight in our district," said the colonel. "It's Jennie's baptism of fire, I reckon . . . and say, you're not using the courtroom, are you?"

"Nope," said Bill.

"Well, why not just slip around, then," said the colonel, "and tell Jennie she'd better adjourn to the big room."

Which suggestion was acted upon instanter by Deputy Bill.

"But I can't, I can't," said Jennie to the courteous deputy sheriff. "I don't want all this publicity, and I don't want to go into the courtroom."

"I hardly see," said Deputy Bill, "how you can avoid it. These people seem to have business with you, and they can't get into your office."

Jennie quailed. "All right, all right!" said she. "But, shall I have to sit on the bench!"

"You will find it by far the most convenient place," said Deputy Bill.

Was this the life to which public office had brought her? She was perched on the judicial bench, which Deputy Bill had dusted off for her, tipping a wink to the assemblage while doing it. And that crowd! To Jennie it was appalling. The school board under the lead of Wilbur Smythe took seats inside the railing. Jim Irwin, who had never been in a courtroom before, herded with the crowd.

She couldn't call the gathering to order. She had no idea as to the proper procedure. She sat there while the people gathered, stood about whispering and talking under their breaths, and finally became silent, all their eyes fixed on her, as she wished that the office of county superintendent had been abolished in the days of her parents' infancy.

"May it please the court," said Wilbur Smythe, standing before the bar. "Or, Madame County Superintendent, I should say . . ."

A titter ran through the room, and a flush of temper tinted Jennie's face. They were laughing at her! She wouldn't be a spectacle any longer! So she rose, and handed down her first and last decision from the bench —a rather good one, I think.

"Mr. Smythe," said she, "I feel very ill at ease up here, and I'm going to get down among the people. It's the only way I have of getting the truth."

"Madame County Superintendent, I Should Say—"

She descended from the bench, shook hands with everybody near her, and sat down by the attorney's table.

"Now," said she, "this is no formal proceeding and we will dispense with red tape. If we don't, I shall get all tangled up in it. Where's Mr. Irwin? Please come in here, Jim. Now, I know there's some feeling in these things—there always seems to be; but I have none. So I'll just hear why Mr. Bronson, Mr. Peterson and Mr. Bonner think that Mr. James E. Irwin isn't competent to hold a certificate."

Jennie was able to smile at them now, and everybody felt more at ease, save Jim Irwin, the members of the board and Wilbur Smythe. That individual arose, and talked down at Jennie.

"I appear for the proponents here," said he, "and I desire to suggest certain principles of procedure which I take it belong indisputably to the conduct of this hearing."

"Have you a lawyer?" asked the county superintendent of the respondent.

"A what?" exclaimed Jim. "Nobody here has a lawyer!"

"Well, what do you call Wilbur Smythe?" queried Newton Bronson from the midst of the crowd.

"He ain't lawyer enough to hurt!" said the thing which the dramatists call A Voice.

There was a little tempest of laughter at Wilbur Smythe's expense, which was quelled by Jennie's rapping on the table. She was beginning to feel the mouth of the situation.

"There is nothing in the school laws, as I remember them," said Jennie, "giving the parties any right to be represented by counsel. You may advise your clients all you please, but I'm not going to waste time in listening to speeches, or having a lot of lawyers examine witnesses."

"I protest," said Mr. Smythe.

"Well, you may file your protest in writing," said Jennie. "I'm going to talk this matter over with these old friends and neighbors of mine. I don't want you dipping into it, I say!"

Jennie's voice was rising toward the scream-line, and Mr. Smythe recognized the hand of fate. There was a little wrangling, and a little protest from Con Bonner, but Jennie ruled with a rod of iron, and adhered to her ruling. When the hearing was resumed after the noon recess, the crowd was larger than ever, but the proceedings consisted mainly in a conference of the principals grouped about Jennie at the big lawyers' table. They were talking about the methods adopted by Jim in his conduct of the Woodruff school—just talking. The only new thing was the presence of a couple of newspaper men, who had queried Chicago papers on the story, and been given orders for a certain number of words on the case of the farm-hand schoolmaster on trial before his old sweetheart.

By the time at which gathering darkness made it necessary for the bailiff to light the lamps, the parties had agreed on the facts. Jim admitted most of the allegations. He had practically ignored the textbooks. He had burned the district fuel and worn out the district furniture early and late, and on Saturdays. He had introduced domestic economy and manual training, to some extent, by sending the boys to the workshops and the girls to the kitchens and sewing-rooms of the farmers who allowed those privileges.

He had used up a great deal of time in studying farm conditions. He had induced the boys to test the cows of the district for butterfat yield. He was studying the matter of a co-operative creamery.

He hoped to open to the boys and girls the wonders of the universe which are touched by the work on the farm. He hoped to make good and contented farmers of them, able to get the most out of the soil, to sell what they produced to the best advantage, and at the same time to keep up the fertility of the soil itself. And he hoped to teach the girls in such a way that they would be good and contented farmers' wives.

"An' I say," interposed Con Bonner, "that we can rest our case right here. If that ain't the limit, I don't know what is!"

Jennie turned to Jim.

"Now, Mr. Irwin," said she, "while you have been following out these very interesting and original methods, what have you done in the way of teaching the things called for by the course of study?"

"I'm willing," said Jim, "to stand or fall on an examination of these children in the very textbooks we are accused of neglecting."

Jennie looked steadily at Jim for a full minute.

"How many pupils of the Woodruff school are here?" she asked. "All rise, please!"

A mass of the audience, in the midst of which sat Jennie's father, rose at the request.

"Why," said Jennie, "I should say we had a quorum, anyhow! We'll have school here. And Mr. Irwin, please remember that you state that you'll stand or fall on the mastery by these pupils of the textbooks they are supposed to have neglected."

"Not the mastery of the text," said Jim. "But their ability to do the work the text is supposed to fit them for."

"Well," said Jennie, "I don't know but that's fair."

"But," said Mrs. Haakon Peterson, "we don't want our children brought up to be yust farmers. Suppose we move to town—where does the culture come in?"

* * * * * * * *

The Chicago papers had a news item which covered the result of the examinations; but the great sensation of the Woodruff district lay in the Sunday feature carried by one of them.

It had a picture of Jim Irwin, and one of Jennie Woodruff—the latter authentic, and the former gleaned from the morgue, and apparently the portrait of a lumber-jack. There was also a very free treatment by the cartoonist of Mr. Simms carrying a rifle with the intention of shooting up the school board in case the decision went against the schoolmaster.

"When it became known," said the news story, "that the schoolmaster had bet his job on the proficiency of his school in studies supposed and alleged to have been studiously neglected, the excitement rose to fever heat. Local sports bet freely on the result, the odds being eight to five on General Proficiency against the field. The field was Jim Irwin and his school. And the way these rural kids rose in their might and ate up the textbooks was simply scandalous. When the fight was over, and the dead and wounded cared for, the school board and the county superintendent were forced to admit that they wished the average school could do as well under a similar test.

"The local Mr. Dooley is Cornelius Bonner, a member of the 'board.' When asked for a statement of his views after the county superintendent had decided that her old sweetheart was to be allowed the priceless boon of earning forty dollars a month during the remainder of his contract, Mr. Bonner said, 'Aside from being licked, we're all right. But we'll get this guy yet, don't fall down and fergit that!'

"'The examinations tind to show,' said Mr. Bonner, when asked for his opinion on the result, 'that in or-r-rder to larn anything you shud shtudy somethin' ilse. But we'll git this guy yit!'"

"Jim," said Colonel Woodruff, as they rode home together, "I'm just beginning to understand what you're driving at. And I like being a wild-eyed reformer more and more."

MANY INQUIRIES DUE TO POLITICS

STARTED OR PROPOSED IN THE SENATE BECAUSE THIS IS A PRESIDENTIAL YEAR.

By EDWARD B. CLARK

Washington.—A pleasantly ironical Washington writer, in commenting on the investigating fever of the senate, suggests that an inquiry should be started to fix the responsibility of the Punic wars, and suggests also "that there are a good many uncovered circumstances concerning the mystery of who hit Billy Patterson."

There are so many committees of investigation at work in the senate that during some of the sessions of the greater body the only quorum present is that of the pages. Of course some of the greater investigations are absolutely necessary, but some of the minor ones probably have been started for political effect, for neither of the great parties has been at all backward in attempts to force a digging into affairs which perhaps might injure the other party's presidential prospects.

If there were no presidential campaign on this year there probably would be less investigating activity in congress. Not all of the demands for investigation have been granted, but a favorite method of senators and representatives is to put in a resolution for an investigation because they think the mere calling of attention to something or other may arouse suspicion and perhaps produce votes for the party to which the resolution-introducer belongs.

Some Aspirants Hurt.

In a way the turmoil over oil and some other things seems to have crowded out the interest in the campaigns for the presidential nominations. As a matter of fact the oil affair has injured the chances for the nomination of one or two gentlemen who formerly were well placed and running strong in the race. Just now, especially in the Democratic party, there seems to be a casting about for information concerning the present availability of some man whose availability in the past was not doubted.

Opinion here seemingly is that Calvin Coolidge will secure the Republican nomination without doubt. A few weeks ago there was some doubt about it, but now the leaders of the Republican party seem convinced not only that he will be nominated but that he must be nominated.

The friends of Senator Johnson have in no wise given up hope that he will secure the prize, but seemingly they are pinning their hopes more upon possible new developments in legislation and in the investigating field to strengthen their cause enough to bring about the defeat of the President and the nomination of the senator.

Naturally enough Washington politicians, notably the Democrats, were intensely interested in the Chicago meeting of William G. McAdoo's friends to determine whether or not his connection as an attorney with the Doheny oil interests militated against his nomination ambitions sufficiently to make him unavailable as a candidate. It was rather expected that the Chicago meeting would declare that the former secretary of the treasury should remain in the field, and remain in the field he will.

Underwood's Chance Improved.

It will take some little time to determine whether his candidacy has been injured by the fact that he acted as an attorney for the Doheny interests although having nothing at all to do with the matters of the leases which have roused so much controversy. It can be taken for granted now that the McAdoo campaign will go on with vigor.

It seems to be unquestionably true that the prospects of Senator Oscar W. Underwood of Alabama, who is an aspirant for the Democratic nomination, have been brightened by the seeming setback which came to the McAdoo cause. There are politicians here, however, who seem to think that another than either Mr. McAdoo or Mr. Underwood will get the prize. Who this is to be no one cares to predict definitely, but the name of Samuel M. Ralston of Indiana frequently is mentioned.

The other day in the senate Senator Ralston made his maiden speech. Senatorial courtesy is not all that it is cracked up to be, for many of Mr. Ralston's political opponents did not remain in the chamber to hear his first effort. His party members, however, announced themselves as exceedingly pleased with the way the Indiana senator treated the subject in hand.

John W. Davis of West Virginia, American ambassador to the court of St. James during the latter part of the Wilson administration, still is mentioned as a possible dark horse or a compromise candidate if either of the first favorites in the convention shall fail to get the two-thirds majority necessary.

Cuba to Honor Mrs. Gorgas.

The government of Cuba soon is to entertain as its guest an American woman, Mrs. Marie Doughty Gorgas, widow of Maj. Gen. William Crawford Gorgas, the great sanitarian. Accompanying Mrs. Gorgas to Cuba, also as a guest of the island government, will be Mrs. Katherine Davis Gaillard, widow of the distinguished American engineer who dug the Culebra cut of the Panama canal, a cut which now bears in his honor the name of Gaillard cut.

In the Cuban government there is a cabinet officer known as the chief of the sanitary department. Sanitation in Cuba is a prime requisite. It was Major General Gorgas, better known in the service as Doctor Gorgas, who, while a lieutenant colonel and stationed in Havana years ago, put that city into a condition which made it immune from that plague of its life, yellow fever.

When he was formulating his great work in Cuba General Gorgas was accompanied by his wife. She ran all the risks of the plague which the men of the service ran, and her courage endeared her to the Cubans. Of course, in greatest part, the high honor which has come to this American woman in the form of an invitation to be the guest of a government is in recognition of the services of her husband to the Cuban people, but the honor due to his widow also was a moving factor in the Cuban invitation to her to visit Havana as the honored guest of the Cuban people.

Gorgas' Great Work for Havana.

It was Dr. Walter Reed, acting with other physicians and with American Medical Corps volunteers, who proved that yellow fever was transmitted by the mosquito known as the stegomia faciata, but it was Doctor Gorgas, who formulated and put into operation all the methods and the plans for ridding Havana of yellow fever at a time immediately following the mosquito transmission discovery. This whole work was that of Doctor Gorgas.

Just after Havana had been cleared of the plague through the skill and high understanding of Doctor Gorgas, he was ordered to Panama to make safe the Canal zone. He put into force the plans, regulations and methods which he had formulated and had used with such signal success in Havana, and added to them new methods as the work suggested them, that Panama might be made the safest place on earth so far as threats of disease were concerned.

Mrs. Marie Doughty Gorgas, the great physician's widow, is writing a life of her husband in connection with Burton J. Hendrick, who edited and connected the letters of Walter Hines Page, our war-time ambassador to Great Britain.

It is a remarkable thing that yellow fever played a part in the lives of William C. Gorgas and his wife from the time that they first met. The story is a romantic one from every possible viewpoint.

Romance of Yellow Fever.

The two met for the first time in a frontier post when Doctor Gorgas was a young lieutenant in the Medical corps. Yellow fever struck the garrison. Mrs. Gorgas, then Miss Doughty, contracted the disease, and Doctor Gorgas was her physician. All hope that she might survive was abandoned and her grave was dug, and in the absence of a clergyman, Doctor Gorgas was to read the service. She recovered and then the doctor was taken ill; he narrowly escaped death, but came through, and later they were married.

It is not hard to understand why yellow fever and all the problems connected therewith became of intense interest to this American army surgeon. He was called upon after his Panama success to go to South Africa, and there instituted methods which reduced the pneumonia plague to a low percentage.

Doctor Gorgas was surgeon general of the American army when this country entered into the World war, retiring age came to him before the war was over. At the conclusion of the conflict the British government asked him to go to Africa to solve a plague problem which was affecting one of its great tracts of territory.

Doctor Gorgas went to London, intending from there to start on his mission, but he was taken ill and was removed to a military hospital where he died. Before his death the king went to the hospital and decorated the general with the Order of St. Michael and St. George. After General Gorgas' death he was accorded the honor of a funeral in St. Paul's, all the available troops being turned out to do his memory honor, and later the British government offered a battleship to carry the body to the United States. Mrs. Gorgas, however, preferred that an American vessel should bring home to his native heath the body of her husband.

The Last Straw

Mr. Busiman was exasperated with the telephone. Ten times that morning he had tried to get a number and each time something had prevented him from speaking. At last he got through.

"Hello!" he said. "Is Mr. X. there?"

"Yes," replied a voice. "Do you want to speak to him?"

That was the last straw. Back went the reply in icy tones: "Oh, no! I merely rang him up to hand him a cigarette."

A new type of air suspension of motor car bodies is being used in England, wherein the body floats on a type of encased rubber tubing in such a manner that it acts much the same as a pneumatic tire, permitting the car the same resilience afforded by the pneumatic tire, while at the same time the wheels themselves are shod with less expensive hard rubber tires.

Columbiana Needs Organization—

Columbian needs some kind of live civic organization. We need it for the good we might be doing, if our people were organized, in the way of building our community and our county. There are a great many opportunities for constructive service that are going by simply because we lack such an organization. If we were organized we would be looking for something to do; as it is we are not even seeing the opportunities that are going by us.

In the efforts that have been made for orgaizating our community, the thought of those leading the movement seemed to be centered on some big enterprise, such as locating a cotton mill in Columbiana. And because there has not seemed to come such an opportunity, to put over some big thing all at once, we have become altogether indifferent to the possible good of organized effort. The Reporter ventures to go on record as believing that we have in our own community already located, an enterprise that if developed as it should be would be worthy infinitely more to our community that the location of even a cotton mill.

The Reporter believes that an organized, united, effort should be made to enlarge and strengthen the work of the Shelby county high school. Considering the fact that there are so few high schools in Shelby county, our local high school ought to be made one of the very largest and strongest in the whole state. Here is an enterprise big enough to demand all the strength we as a community can command, and we could not find a more worthy cause in which to use our organized united strength.

As great and as important as would be the building of a great high school for Columbiana and Shelby county, there is a kindred opportunity for great service that is equally worth while. That is to build a great consolidated grammar school. Surely if there is any one thing upon which we can all agree, it is the need for better school facilities for the children of this territory. There are at least five schools that could be consolidated with Columbiana. Then with an adequate building provided, we should be able to have a nine months school for all the children in this whole territory. Not only that in a consolidated school of this character we could have the very best teachers, and the school could be so equipped as to make it possible for each teacher to do the best work, which would mean that each child would receive the very best instruction. Contrast this if you will with the present methods. Five month terms, sorry buildings, poorly arranged and equipped, with teachers trying to teach more grades than is possible for them to teach, if the best work is to be done, and in many instances perhaps, with young inexperienced teachers trying to do the most important work there is to be done in all the world, the training of boys and girls at their most impressionable age for citizenship.

Surely here is an enterprise worthy the best individual effort of every citizen and also worthy the best effort of an entire community, working together in perfect harmony and with all the enthusiasm at its command. Nor is this opportunity before Columbiana alone. There are other communities in our county that could be at work along similar lines with great profit.

Let's Observe Sunday School and Church Day—

The Reporter hopes that in every community in Shelby county the good people will begin at once to make preparation for observing on Sunday, March 30, State Wide Sunday School and Church Day. Here is an opportunity for every man and every woman, every boy and girl who believes in the Christian religion to do something to help strengthen the cause of that holy religion in his or her community.

Every man knows that there is no way to build a community along the best lines if the church is left out. Every man knows too that the best communities in Shelby county ,the communities in which men enjoy most to live and in which they feel that the best opportunity is furnished for rearing a family to honorable usefulness, are those communities that are willing to put the work of the church in its true place, in the life of the community.

Reports come to this office from time to time of communities in our county that have grown indifferent to the church and the Sunday school and in every such instance almost, there come accounts of lawless deeds, and in some instances of organized defiance of the very laws upon which our civilization is built and under which life and property are made safe. Surely there is nothing more disastrous to any community than to permit its church and Sunday sshool to be closed up. It is like serving notice to the devil that he is to have undisputed opportunity at the lives of the boys and girls to do with them as he will. And too often, according to the records of the courts, he finds it an easy matter to have his way.

Our appeal is to the Christian people of Shelby county of every denomination and of all denominations, to make Sunday, March 30, a day on which we shall begin to reorganize the forces of righteousness throughout the county, for a new and more determined effort to push forward the claims of our religion and so to drive from our borders the influence of wickedness and sin.

L&N
THE OLD RELIABLE

An Enviable Record of Service

On March 5, 1850, the Louisville & Nashville Railroad received its charter from the State of Kentucky.

Since that date, ideas and customs have changed; panics have come; great wars have been fought; population has increased; the country has developed; and businesses have come and gone; but the "Old Reliable" L. & N. has survived all of the struggles and the ups and downs of railroading for this nearly three-quarters of a century—from pioneering a section of 185 miles to operating a system of 5,039 miles, traversing and serving thirteen states in the heart of the South.

During all of these years, thru good times and bad, the L. & N. has weathered the financial storms; has never changed its corporate name, and is one of the few class-1 railroads in the country that have never been in receivership.

The L. & N. has never failed to meet its obligations to the public; pay every dollar due its workers, its creditors, its bondholders; and, a majority of these years, has been able to pay its stockholders something for the use of their money.

The management is earnestly striving to make the L. & N. a bigger and better railroad—more efficient and capable of better serving you. Your co-operation to this end is solicited,

Care of Sows at Farrowing Time

(By A. A. Lauderdale)

A sow, if properly handled, should farrow two litters of pigs a year. She should be bred to farrow in March and September as near as possible. It is time we were thinking of saving and raring for our spring litters.

A profitable sow should farrow from 8 to 10 pigs and raise a large percentage of them. The number of pigs a sow will farrow is largely inherited, so we should select for prolific sows; the per centage of pigs raised is very largely determined by the way the sow is handled at farrowing time. The heavy mortality of a litter of pigs is in the first week, so it is necessary to protect the pigs and keep the sow from stepping or lying on them until they are strong enough to get out of the way.

The sow should be separated from the herd about one week before farrowing and placed in a lot provided with a house well bedded. The house should be floored to keep the sow from digging out a bed or a hole. Guard rails should be placed around the inside of the house about 8 inches from the floor; these guard rails should be made of boards 2 x8. The pigs can get under the rails and keep the sow from lying on them, which will save the small pigs.

The sow's feed should be decreased just before farrowing, and she should have only water for 24 hours after farrowing. The feed should be light for a few days and gradually increased until she is getting full feed when the pigs are 10 days old.

The best ration to give the sow during the suckling period is the cheapest and yet the most productive of a large milk flow. The amount of milk the sow gives determines the rate of development of the pigs during this period. Green feeds, such as oats and vetch or rape, are conducive to heavy milk flow.

Let us save our pigs; feed the sow well, furnishing plenty of green feed, and make this the best litter of pigs we have ever raised.

(Blue prints of hog house will be furnished from this office upon request.)

Golf Balls Kill Birds.

Driving a long, low shot from the tenth tee, W. L. Wass, playing on the Thorpe Hall golf course, Essex, saw his ball hit a titlark as it rose about fifty yards from the tee, and such was the force of impact that the bird was killed. Ten minutes later, Wass's partner, A. F. Hart, playing his second shot, struck a lark in flight, the ball killing the bird outright.

Let us not become discouraged but go to work when the weather does permit with a vim and we may make fine crops.

Is Your Back Giving Out?

ARE you miserable with an aching back? Do you get up lame and stiff—lag through the day, tired, weak and worn out? Do you wonder why you are so run down? Many times this condition is due to weak kidneys. Winter's colds and chills are hard on the kidneys. The kidneys are apt to slow up in their work of filtering body-poisons from the blood. These poisons accumulate. Then comes backache, with rheumatic pains, headaches, dizziness and kidney irregularities.

Don't risk serious kidney trouble! Use Doan's Pills—a stimulant diuretic to the kidneys. Doan's have helped thousands. They are recommended by many grateful people. Ask your neighbor!

"Use Doan's," Say These Good Folks:

W. C. Knight, prop. of general store, 4th St., Sylacauga, Ala., says: "The flu left my kidneys disordered and my back became weak and lame. If I stooped, I could hardly get up on account of the sharp pains in my back. My kidneys acted irregularly, causing me to get up often at night to pass the secretions. Mornings my muscles were stiff and drawn. Doan's Pills relieved me."

Mrs. J. A. Billingsley, 7 S. Jordan St., Samson, Ala., says: "I used to be troubled right smart with my kidneys and my back was lame and weak. There was a dull ache in my back all the time and I was bothered by the irregular action of my kidneys. I began using Doan's Pills and it wasn't long before they drove the trouble away."

WOMAN'S ADVENTURES IN CONTENTMENT

"Tar heel born, tar heel bred,
When I'm dead, it's a tar heel dead."

So do the girls of North Carolina sing with gusto. So do they live, work, marry, die, proud of the 98 per cent native-bornness of their state. They feel that a big city is no place for those "who ain't went out much, not fur!"

So reports Fronde Kennedy, who has known the Carolinas from the day she was born, "a long time ago," as she says, to the present "office of the dean of women of Trinity college." Her letter carries its own charm:

"I do not know when I began to find my chief delight in the printed page. I can remember lying flat on the floor with my chin cupped in my hands, poring over Lempriere's Classical Dictionary and Swiss Family Robinson impartially before I was ten. I regard my heritage from my father as a priceless gift, but it included so small amounts of dollars and cents that the education I was able to secure was pitifully different from what he had kindled in me a desire for. I was fortunate in my course at college to fall under the influence of at least one real scholar, who kept alive in me the flame of intellectual curiosity. At the age of eighteen I had my diploma and was ready to begin teaching. It was necessary that I at least relieve my mother of the expense of my own support, and I did so—on a salary of thirty dollars a month, fifteen of which I paid out for board.

"Probably to some people I seem a good example of a woman who has succeeded in life. I have not, really, in comparison with my own standards and dreams, achieved anything, and yet I concede that I would be most unreasonable and ungrateful not to acknowledge my blessings; and I have many. I am tuned to rural life. I like to hear of setting hens and newly planted gardens, and to watch farmers' almanacs and see how well they hit the weather. I like to go to a millinery opening and sit down with the crowd and advise my friends about the hats they are trying on. I like to 'set a spell' with my friends. So, although I love New York and go whenever I can for a little while, I expect to live in a rural section, preferably in a town of about twenty thousand people, I hope through a green old age!"

MUNICIPAL HOUSEKEEPING

Of all the part-time jobs that have recently developed for women, those connected with "municipal housekeeping" seem to have proved the most interesting. Local political tasks ordinarily pay so little that they can be undertaken only by the woman who has sufficient income to meet her needs, plus some time that she would like to put to service outside her home.

A book which modestly announces itself as the "Who's Who and What's What of the Woman's World," lists Mrs. E. E. Brown's work as member of the town council of Oakdale, La., as a real achievement. To get the background of her work it is said, it's almost necessary to have visited Louisiana; to know the force that old French plus old Southern tradition is still exercising to keep out innovations; and to have felt the power exerted by the dictum, "We want our women to be ladies of the old type."

The first councilwoman in Louisiana trained herself in knowledge of parliamentary law, public questions, etc., by serving in the State Federation of Women's Clubs. She organized and has for nine years been president of the Oakdale Civic league. "Meanwhile, she kept the devotion of husband, children and neighbors. The young people of Oakdale know that her home is always open for parties. She finds time to produce two or three plays a year for charitable purposes that bring all the civic spirits of town and parish together. Withal she is a most perfect hostess of a charming home which is never neglected."

To all this, Mrs. Lutie Fitzgerald of Oakdale who thus describes her neighbor, adds courage. In the city government questions arose which Mrs. Brown could settle neither by tact nor by parliamentary skill. Politics ranged itself on one side. Mrs. Brown's belief in how it ought to be done ranged itself on the other side. Influence sided sometimes with politics. If politics was wrong on the one question, "Will this thing leave a mark for good on the city?" Mrs. Brown consistently voted against politics.

America's First Orchestra.

Bethlehem, Pa., is the most remarkable town musically in the United States. The settlement had an orchestra as early as 1780. Their modern musical festival is often referred to as the American musical Oberammergau or the American Beyreuth.

WEEKLY MENU SUGGESTIONS

While the wintry winds still blow, hearty foods are enjoyed and even in spring an occasional hot dish is agreeable for supper that in warm weather might be too substantial for the last meal of the day.

If dinner is served at night the dinner menu will take the place of supper.

SUNDAY—Breakfast: Fried ham, coffee cake. Dinner: Roast chicken with creamed dried corn. Supper: Mush and milk, salt codfish.

MONDAY—Breakfast: Buckwheat cakes. Dinner: Pot roast of beef with potatoes. Supper: Creamed chicken on toast.

TUESDAY—Breakfast: Toast and bacon. Dinner: St. James pudding. Supper: Scalloped potatoes.

WEDNESDAY—Breakfast: Salt pork fried, cream gravy, baked potatoes. Dinner: Roast of mutton, canned peas. Supper: Waffles with maple sirup.

THURSDAY—Breakfast: Ham and eggs. Dinner: Pigs' feet with sauer kraut. Supper: Sliced roast mutton.

FRIDAY—Breakfast: Oatmeal with top milk. Dinner: Salmon loaf. Supper: Milk toast.

SATURDAY—Breakfast: Stewed prunes, doughnuts. Dinner: Beefsteak, baked potatoes. Supper: Pork and beans.

Coffee Cake.

Take two cupfuls of light bread sponge, add one cupful of sugar, two well-beaten eggs, one cupful of warmed milk, the grated rind of a lemon, mix well; add flour to make a mixture that will roll out. Place in small dripping pans, cover with softened butter, sprinkle with cinnamon and brown sugar and when very light bake in a moderate oven. Raisins or currants may be added, making a very rich, delicious breakfast cake. Cut in inch slices, divide in halves when serving.

St. James Pudding.

This is a simple, delicious pudding without eggs. Melt three tablespoonfuls of butter, add one-half cupful of molasses, the same of milk, one and two-thirds cupfuls of flour, a half teaspoonful each of soda, salt, cloves, allspice, nutmeg and one-half pound of dates cut in fine pieces. Steam in pound baking powder cans for two and one-half hours.

The ill-timed truth we might have kept—
Who knows how sharp it pierced and stung?
The word we had not sense to say—
Who knows how grandly it had rung?

EARLY SPRINGTIME DESSERTS

To stimulate the appetite and furnish mineral matter and acids which the system craves and needs at this season, fresh fruits and vegetables are invaluable.

Banana Dessert.—Heat a pint of milk in a double boiler until scalding hot. Add two tablespoonfuls of cornstarch which has been mixed with one-fourth of a teaspoonful of salt, and one-third of a cupful of sugar, then add one-fourth of a cupful of cream. Cook thirty minutes, stirring occasionally. Add the well-beaten yolks of two eggs, return to the boiler and stir, cooking until smooth and thick, using care not to over cook and curdle the eggs. Add a teaspoonful of orange extract and put in a cool place.

Cut sponge cake into slices and arrange in a glass dish in layers with sliced bananas, having a bottom layer of cake and the top of bananas. Pour over the chilled custard, cover with a meringue, using the egg whites and two tablespoonfuls of powdered sugar. Flavor with lemon extract and heap spoonfuls on top of the custard.

Cherry Sherbet.—Take one cupful of stoned cherries, two and one-half cupfuls of water, one-half cupful of sugar and one tablespoonful of softened gelatin. Heat the cherries, water and sugar, add the gelatin, cool and add the juice of an orange. Freeze to a mush and pack in salt and ice. Serve in sherbet glasses.

Cream Pie.—Take two cupfuls of top milk, two eggs, separating the yolks and whites, beating well. Mix the yolks with three-fourths of a cupful of brown sugar and one-half cupful of flour. When well-blended add the milk, scalded, a teaspoonful of vanilla and a tablespoonful of butter after the mixture is cooked and smooth. Cool and fill a baked crust. Cover with a meringue made from the two egg whites and two tablespoonfuls of sugar. Bake until the meringue is brown.

Pineapple Rice.—Cook one-half cupful of rice in two quarts of boiling salted water until tender, but unbroken. Drain, blanch with cold water. Cut two cupfuls of sliced pineapple into small pieces. Beat one cupful of heavy cream until stiff. Fold the cream and pineapple into the rice. Serve in sherbet cups with bits of cherries for a garnish or fresh, sugared strawberries.

Frank Rikert, Who Left Illinois for California in Covered Wagon in 1864, Wouldn't Take $100 for Bottle of Tanlac.

Frank Rikert, well-known resident of North Sacramento, Cal., who came to the state from Illinois in a covered wagon in 1864, along with other hardy pioneers, recently exhibited a bottle of Tanlac, which he had just purchased, to a friend at his home and remarked: "If I thought this was the last bottle of Tanlac I would ever be able to buy, I wouldn't take one hundred dollars for it," thus proving the high valuation he places on the famous treatment.

"I believe Tanlac really saved my life when I took it after the Flu about a year ago," continued Mr. Rikert, "for the attack left me 20 pounds off my weight, and unable to turn over in bed without assistance. I tell you I thought my time had surely come.

"But, thanks to my wife's insistence I kept on taking Tanlac till I was able to do all my work again, had back all my lost weight, and I've been feeling years younger ever since. I'm always telling my friends about Tanlac, and can't say too much for it."

Royster's "cured" fertilizer is certified fertilizer

More profitable crops result from the use of fertilizer that has been thoroughly "aged"

You can't look at the ordinary bag of fertilizer and tell how good it is. You have to risk the time and money of a season's work before you KNOW. It isn't known to be good until you get your money!

Certified Fertilizer

But Royster's "cured" fertilizer is like a certified check.

It is certified by the forty years we have spent in learning the needs of the soil you work.

It is certified by the experience of successful farmers all about you, who say "Royster's fertilizer increased my earnings."

"Cured" Fertilizer is better plant food

It is certified by the "curing"—a feature of Royster's fertilizer which increases its value because of a more complete chemical action, making the plant food readily available to the plant. (Royster's goods age in great bins for four to six months. They are then remilled and bagged).

Ask for "Royster's"

Stop guessing about fertilizer. Look for the name "Royster" on your bags of fertilizer and you have found the assurance that your crops will have proper feeding from seed time to harvest.

McEwen Speaks For College Y. M. C. A.

Efforts of pupils of Birmingham-Southern college to raise funds for a Y. M. C. A. building for their campus were explained to the people of Columbiana Sunday by Noble McEwen, a pupil of the college and a former student of Shelby County High School, in an address before the Methodist Sunday school.

Mr. McEwen spoke of the rapid growth the college has enjoyed and of the fine college spirit that prevails as evidenced by this movement for a Y. M. C. A. building that was initiated by the students and is being carried on by them. He gave opportunity for those interested to help in the work, by selling bricks for the building at $1.00 each.

Thos. B. Falkner

In the death ef Thomas B. Falkner, of Sterrett, which occurred at the home of his daughter, Mrs. J. W. Goodwin, at 6 p. m. February 29, Shelby county has lost an upright and valued citizen; the community in which he lived, a man who was always interested in the things that would build up the community. The local cemetery which is one of the best kept in the county, received much attention from him and to his efforts is largely due its clean and neat appearance.

The church (Beulah Baptist) has lost one of its oldest and most loyal members. He was born on March 25, 1865, and therefore would have been 68 years old his next birthday. A coincident of his death was that his devoted wife preceded him to the great beyond just 20 years to a day and for whose death he felt a deep sorrow. He was the youngest of seven sons of Joel Falkner, Sr., who immigrated from Randolph county in 1857, and lived in the Sterrett community all his life and will be greatly missed by all.

His funeral was conducted at Beulah church by Rev. Hearn of Birmingham, assisted by Rev. Coshatt, a former pastor. Six of his nephews acted as pallbearers as follows: P. C. Falkner, A. R. Goodwin, Elmer Falkner, J. R. Falkner, Jeff B. Falkner and B. W. McGinnis.

He is survived by four children, Mrs. J. W. Goodwin of Sterrett, Mrs. C. E. Goodwin of Columbiana Mrs. W. R. Kirk, and J. Bunyan Falkner, of Birmingham; one brother, Joel (Jote) Falkner, Sterrett, one sister, Mrs. Belle Goodwin of Oxmoor, several grandchildren, a number of other relatives and a host of friends to mourn his departure.

"Beyond the smiling and the weeping,
Beyond the waking and the sleeping,
At rest and home."

ALABAMA COLLEGE

Montevallo, Alabama, March 6.—The Joyerofters Club of Birmingham has within the last few days presented Alabama College with a scholarship. This has been awarded to Miss Lillian Stewart, of Daphne, Alabama, a member of the senior class. Miss Stewart is one of the brightest members of the class, and her friends are delighted that she has received a scholarship.

Dr. David G. Lyon, of Harvard University, is visiting Alabama this week, and will deliver his first lecture in the state at Alabama College. He is a native of Lowndes county, Alabama, and a graduate of Howard College when it was located at Marion. Since his graduation at Howard, he has been continuously connected with Harvard University. He is recognized as one of the great American scholars. From Alabama College he goes to Howard College at Birmingham to deliver a series of lectures.

Mrs. J. B. Hall of Chicago, a member of Stonewall Chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy of that city, has recently presented to the Stonewall Chapter a gift of $2,000 for a scholarship to aid a worthy girl, a descendent of a Confederate soldier, to pursue a college course. Alabama College has been selected as the institution in which the award will be made. For some years, this chapter has been presenting to the college $50 to help a pupil. This gift on the part of Mrs. Hall makes the scholarship a permanent one, and a larger amount will be available than has heretofore been given.

This is the first substantial gift that has come to Alabama College from an individual living outside the state. The scholarship will be known as the Lucy Harper Hall Scholarship Fund.

Interest in the study of Art at Alabama College has so greatly increased that the institution has decided to rebuild the kiln for pottery and have students begin that work again. About ten years ago a kiln was bought and much interest was developed in that work.

Recently this kiln has been put in good order and students will begin this work at once. A number of pieces are now ready to be placed in the kiln and can be shown before the class of the present session.

Petition Highway Commission to Build Road

Petitions are being circulated this week asking the state highway commission to make provision for beginning at once the construction of the highway from Columbiana to Calera. It will be recalled that at a recent session the commission voted unanimously against undertaking to build this part of the road but ordered that work should be begun as soon as practicable on that part of the road leading from Calera to Montevallo.

J. W. Heflin of Route 2, Wilsonville, was among the visitors to the Reporter office Saturday. He was accompanied by Rev. R. W. Weaver of Birmingham, who was recently called to the pastorate of Bethel Baptist church.

Mayor J. A. Brown and his little son, J. A. Jr., and Carl Houlditch of Montevallo, were visitors to Columbiana Wednesday.

Geo. R. Stone of Fourmile community, was a visitor in Columbiana Saturday.

J. C. Reinhardt of Wilsonville, was arong those in town Saturday.

C. T. Hughes of Chapel community was a visitor in town Saturday.

Jno. A. Darden of Goodwater, candidate for circuit judge, was in Columbiana Friday, meeting the voters.

Mrs. R. L. Durant spent the first part of the week visiting relatives and friends in Birmingham.

Rev. R. L. Durant, pastor of the Baptist church, went to Vincent Friday night where he delivered an address to a large audience. The arrangement for the meeting was made by the Vincent chapter of the Order of the Eastern Star. Mr. Durant was accompanied to Vincent by J. P. Pearson.

D. W. Crowe, Route 1, Columbiana, who moved recently from Ensley to go into the poultry business was in town Friday delivering eggs to his customers. He brought to the Reporter office an unusually large White Leghorn egg; it weighed nearly 5 ounces. Mr. Crowe stated that he got over 125 dozen eggs during the month of February.

Picture Shows Use of Nitrate of Soda

The use of nitrate of soda in growing cotton was explained to the farmers of Shelby county last week by E. M. Cauthen, representing the Chilean Nitrate Association. Mr. Cauthen carried a moving picture outfit and gave lectures in several parts of the county to good crowds.

The name of the picture was "White Magic," the name given by the negroes to nitrate of soda because in some way not understood by them "you des puts it in de groun' an it makes de cotton." Mr. Cauthen showed that by use of nitrate of soda on land properly prepared and with well selected seed it is possible to produce a good crop of cotton before the boll weevil begins its activity. That, he explained, was the experience of the farmers in North Carolina last year where the yield under boll weevil conditions was surprisingly good.

Mr. Cauthen was accompanied by Dr. Wilson of Montgomery, a representative of the U. S. Bureau of Animal Industry and a specialist in the diseases of hogs, and between reels Dr. Wilson spoke to farmers from his topic. County Agent Lauderdale also made the rounds with Mr. Cauthen. This visit together with the visits of other specialists, is one of the direct benefits of having a county agent in Shelby county. These workers rarely go into a county that does not employ a county agent.

MONTEVALLO EXCHANGE CLUB HAS RECORD OF ACHIEVEMENT

(By O. C. Carmichael, Sec'ty.)

Montevallo, Alabama, Mch 13.—Montevallo is the smallest town in the United States to boast of an Exchange Club. Its record for 1923, is perhaps equal to many of the clubs in many larger towns and cities.

One of the first matters taken up by the organization was building up the highways leading into Montevallo. Approximately $2,000 was collected by the committee and spent on the roads which meant a great deal to the town and county.

Thru a committee's effort the schedule of the train from Calera was changed so as to enable those coming from Montgomery in the afternoon to catch the Montevallo Train.

A hard working committee of the club after ten months solid effort succeeded in getting a station enlarged at Wilton. The railroad spent $2,500 in meeting the demands of the club and surely money was never better spent.

Towards the end of the fiscal year it was discovered that $50,- was available from the state department for circulating libraries in case the county would match that amount and an organization match the county. The Exchange Club raised $50 and thereby secured circulating libraries to the value of $150 for the schools of Shelby county. The librarian of the college is controlling the circulation of these books

Towards the end of the summer when the college saw a large number of pupils were going to be turned away, the matter was taken up with the Exchange Club and within two weeks sufficient funds were raised in the Club and in Montevallo to erect a dormitory which is housing today sixty pupils and one teacher. The final payment has been made on this this building and the total cost was more than $4,000.

No one can tell what the value of such a club can be to a community. No one can tell how great has been its value to the sixty girls who are living in the "Exchange Cottage" and other sixties that will come from year to year.

These few items show the main outline of the various activities of the Exchange Club during its first year of active endeavor. Many other things are in prospect and the Exchange Club of Montevallo will yet be heard from.

And along with all this we have had a jolly good time together at the bi-weekly luncheons in addition to some extras in the form of Ladies Night. The Montevallo club entertained the Selma club on one occasion.

CALF WEIGHS 115 LBS

Montevallo, Alabama, Mch 15.—Joanna, the famous young Holstein cow of the Alabama College herd that produced eleven gallons two quarts and one pint of milk per day for several days in 1923, presented to the college yesterday a new male calf that weighed one hundred fifteen pounds. The reports show that only one other calf has ever reached this weight at birth. Alabama College dairy therefore come up to the world's record in the weight of a calf. The youngster on his second day showed himself the equal in activities with other calves three weeks old. He drank one and a half gallons of milk for his breakfast, and probably will want that amount at every meal.

The college dairy has several of the finest bred Holstein cattle in the state. The beginning of this herd was purchased three years ago from Peabody College, Nashville, Tennessee.

During last summer, seven pure bred Jerseys were purchased from the noted strains of the dairy of Jemison and Prayton of Trussville Alabama. These cows are making a record that bids fair to equal any Jerseys in the state.

The dairy of Alabama College is maintained for the purpose of supplying the students with the best sanitary milk and for use as a laboratory for the classes in dairy ing.

There will be singing at Chapel church the Fifth Sunday in March in the afternoon. Everybody invited to come.

SILURIA

Thompson High unrolled some of its baseball togs one day last week and had a short limbering up affair. The weather, as usual, showed its appreciation by sending a good sized snow the following day The boys expect to put in every day in the future in order to be in as good condition as possible for the opening game in Thorsby, Friday, with the Thorsby Institute.

We were glad to see Miss Johnson back Thursday in her room after she had been absent two weeks with measles. She refuses to state how much she enjoyed them but says she does not care for another case.

During the week we had two weddings in the village. Collins-Edwards, and McCracken-Armstrong Both couples slipped away without anyone's knowledge or consent and motored to Columbiana,where the ceremonies were held. Each one was back on the job in the mill the following day as if nothing had happened.

Mr. Speights, bookkeeper and asst. vice-president and Mrs. Simms, secretary, both with the Buck Creek Cotton Mills, surprised their many friends by quietly getting married in Birmingham Saturday afternoon. They returned to their work Monday.

Protracted meeting began at the Methodist chuhch Sunday. Dr. McNutt, Presiding Elder of Sylacauga, preached Sunday morning. His text was: "The Winner." Rev. R. M. Phifer, of Gadsden, came in Sunday afternoon and took charge that night, and will continue with the meeting until it closes. Prof. Cole, of Birmingham will have charge of the singing. Much good should be derived from this meeting as Mr. Phifer is a very fine preacher and will have Brother Steele, the pastor, to aid him.

The Boy Scouts are doing extra fine regardless of the bad weather they have met at every meeting. Plans are on foot for the entire Troop to spend two weeks at Camp Andrews this summer. With the coming of warm weather, hikes will be made and at least one night in each week will be spent in the open. Troop No. 79 would be glad to arrange games of baseball with other Troops this spring and summer, and will take care of all visitors at their cabin.

Buck Creek has almost finished the improvements of the streets of Siluria. Mr. Taylor did the grading and cherting. He has only the Baseball field to finish and we will put our town against any in the county then.

Governor's Proclamation. (To be read by superintendent.)

A PROCLAMATION
By the Governor

WHEREAS, Thirty leading men and women of the different denominations in Alabama composing a Committee on Program of Work of the Alabama Sunday School Council, is calling upon all the denominations and all Religious Organizations of Alabama to join in a State-wide Sunday School and Church Day, Sunday, March 30th, 1924, for the purpose of gathering the people of Alabama into the Sunday schools and Churches on said date, that they may be taught the religion of their choice, and

WHEREAS, Religious illiteracy is a blot on our State, and Nation and no State can develop a law-abiding citizenship without giving to its childhood and youth the fundamentals of the Christian Religion through the teaching of God's word, and

WHEREAS, The State through its educational Department and cooperation of the Federated Women s Clubs, is striving to drive out illiteracy from our beloved State, and since there can be no real education without the development of the spiritual life and since the religious training of the childhood and youth of Alabama restes upon the churches of this state, and

WHEREAS, Since Alabama is 75% rural and the majority of the unreached boys and girls are in the rural districts and since the cities and cogested industrial districts must depend upon the rural districts for brain and brawn and since very few of the boys and girls who grow up in the rural districts and come to the city and congested districts are ever reached for God and trained Christian citizenship and since the future welfare of our State and Nation depends upon the rural districts for its very existence, the great task that confronts the church, the State and Nation today, is to build an adequate program of Christian Education for its childhood and youth in the rural districts.

NOW, THEREFORE, I, William W. Brandon, Governor of the State of Alabama, do hereby proclaim Sunday, March 30th, as State-Wide Sunday School and Church Day and call upon the press and the people of the State to observa this day set apart especially for creating an atmosphere for religious training and the awakening of a consciousness that will see to it that every boy and girl in Alabama is brought under the direct influence of the teaching service of the churches and that every man and woman in the State is won for God and righteousness.

All pastors and religious workers of all denominations and creeds are asked to join with their respective denominations in making State-wide Sunday School and Church Day a day when the entire citizenship of the State will consider the need of religious training.

I urge the pastors throughout the State to preach on the need of developing the spiritual life of the boys and girls of our commonwealth on the above date and to give to their congregation the alarming fact that there are five hundred thousand white children and youths and three hundred thousand black children in our commonwealth growing up without a personal knowledge of God and his laws.

It is, therefore, urged that every praying man and woman of Alabama join in an effort to reach the last man and woman boy and girl in their respective communities, win them to the Sunday school of their choice and help develop them into a citizenship that will stand foresquare with God.

IN TESTIMONY WHEREOF, I have set my hand and caused the Great Seal of the State to be affixed at the capitol in the City of Montgomery, on this the 18th day of February, in the Year of Our Lord One Thousand Nine Hundred and Twenty-Four. WM. W. BRANDON, Governor.

BOARD OF REVENUE ORDERS MACHINERY

The Board of Revenue was in session Monday and had quite a busy day. The most important item of business was the purchase of two tractors to be added to the road machinery of the county. Before placing the order for tractors the board made careful investigation and they selected the type of machine that in the experience of road builders had proved most satisfactory. The large road machine was traded in as part of the purchase price of the new machine.

Mr. Cameron, federal live stock agent for the county in charge of tick eradication was present at the meeting of the board and reported that satisfactory progress is being made in starting the work of tick eradication. Montevallo Honors Sol D. Bloch

Montevallo, Alabama, Mch 18.—During the hour of the funeral of the Honorable Sol D. Bloch, at four o'clock in Mobile, a quiet hous was observed at Alabama College. All business was suspended, and every one connected with the college remained quiet for that period. The college chapel bell was tolled for ten minutes.

The name of Sol D. Bloch will ever be associated with the early history of this college. He was the author of the bill establishing the institution, and served as its trustee for more than twenty years. He was ever its true and faithful friend, and was anxious to render any service at any time to the student body. At every Christmas Easter and Commencement, he sent appropriate gifts to the students which were highly appreciated.

Handsome floral offerings were sent by the students, by the college, and by individuals. A program is being arranged for appropriate memorial service at the Y. W. C. A. Sunday evening.

While Mr. Bloch was an Israelite, he took a very deep interest in the Y. W. C. A. Nearly every year he delivered an address at its service. He always strongly advocated the employment of a Y. W. C. A. Secretary, believing that such an officer would be of great help to the institution.

Professor E. H. Wills left for Mobile Monday evening to attend as the official representative of Alabama College, the funeral exercises.

E. M. JONES BUYS PARTNERS' INTERESTS

E. M. Jones, who came to Columbiana a little more than a year ago to organize The E. M. Jones Auto Company, authorized Ford Dealers, has bought the interests of those associated with him in the company and is now the sole owner of the business.

The business will be continued along the same lines as formerly and every effort will be made to care for the interests of those who may need its service.

Last week an order for a pen was sent in by Roy Morrison of Boothton, who sent the subscriptions of W. H. Sharp and J. O. Morrison both of Boothton and L. N. Nabors of Montevallo. Roy's pen was mailed to him on Saturday.

This makes five premiums that have been given in the short time since the offer was announced. Just now there are a number of subscriptions running out. It will be easy for any boy or girl who is willing to do just a little work for the Reporter to get one of these handsome pens as a premium, which is almost like having it given as a birth day present.

BONUS GETS AID FROM OPPONENTS

THEIR STUPIDITY LIKELY TO RESULT IN THE PASSAGE OF THE MEASURE.

By EDWARD B. CLARK

Washington.—Those members of house and senate who were not for the bonus at heart, but who originally intended to vote for the measure for political reasons, came to the conclusion some time ago that the country was opposed to the measure and they would be safe in withholding from it their support. Now, some of these members have been forced back to their first position, and the forcing, curiously enough, has been done by opponents of the whole bonus scheme in all its aspects.

Veterans of the World war today are looking forward to a bonus victory instead of a defeat, a victory made possible by the action of the enemy. Men in Washington who are conscientiously opposed to bonus legislation are wondering why it is that the propagandists in opposition to the legislation had so little sense when they outlined their campaign.

Many of the American legionnaires in Washington who, yesterday, did not want the bonus bill to become a law, today are in favor of its passage. The ranks of the veterans are being solidified behind a cause to which only recently many of them were opposed. The instant that it was made to appear that coercive methods were being used to defeat the legislation in congress, bonus opponents flocked to the standard of its proponents. It is regarded as even possible that because of some of the methods which have been disclosed in promoting the anti-bonus legislation, President Coolidge may change his attitude in the matter.

Opponents Kill Their Cause.

"Leave it to the enemy" is not a rule of either strategy or tactics, but in this case "Leave it to the enemy" may prove to have been all sufficient.

It is held that if the Garner revenue act, even in a form somewhat compromised, shall become the law of the land, it will be more difficult to pay the bonus than ever, but even with a deficit instead of a surplus in the revenues facing the country, the chances now seem to be that the bonus bill will be enacted, and then let what may happen, happen.

In an old melodrama which, as memory has it, was called "Youth," there was a line not altogether snappy, but nevertheless truthful. It was to the effect that the man who talks too much is a fool, and that the man who writes anything is an idiot.

Letters seemingly have proved the undoing of the cause of those men who, for patriotic or other reasons, have opposed bonus legislation. How a manager of any great corporation could have thought for a minute that he could write letters to his employees charging them in turn to write letters to their congressmen in opposition to the bonus, and hoping that the fact of the writing would not become known, passes understanding, or at any rate the understanding of Washington where letter writers have met their fate on many an occasion.

Quinn Changed the Situation.

It may be, as a good many men here seem to think, that bonus legislation will keep taxes up and do a lot of other things unpleasant to the peace of mind of the average American citizen. There is a wonder here, however, how some corporation chiefs ever succeeded in business when they have shown so little sense in handling this particular matter.

When John R. Quinn, the national commander of the American Legion, was in Washington a day or two ago, he disclosed things of which he had written proof, which changed the whole bonus legislative situation within the time that it took him publicly to read the letters.

It is only a coincident, probably, that two or three of the group which seemingly have been active in anti-bonus activities are of the so-called Mellon interests. Doubtless the secretary of the treasury knew nothing about the activities of some of the companies in which he formerly was interested, but the fact that these concerns were in a part at least of the so-called Mellon group of industries, has helped to damage the anti-bonus cause.

In view of what has happened recently this would seem to be an exceedingly bad time to bring to bear in the field of legislation influence from sources which in the present state of the public mind, rightly or wrongly, are regarded with suspicion.

Huguenot Anniversary.

President Coolidge has been presented with the first of the new Huguenot fifty-cent pieces, which have been struck in commemoration of the coming three-hundredth anniversary of the landing of the first Huguenot refugees in the United States. The day also will be the three-hundredth anniversary of the founding of New York city.

There are some matters of human interest, matters which show how the world has moved, in connection with this celebration, and particularly with the presentation of the Huguenot fifty-cent pieces to President Coolidge. Present on the occasion, a chief figure, was J. J. Jusserand, ambassador of France to the United States, a Roman Catholic taking high place in the presentation of a medal intended to do honor to a sect of Protestants whom his country once persecuted in many cases to their death.

On one side of the coin are shown the profiles of Admiral Coligny of France and William the Silent of Holland. Admiral Coligny was shot twice and badly wounded two days before the great body of Protestants were killed on the night of St. Batholomew's day, Aug. 24, 1572. On the "night of St. Bartholomew" the house where the admiral was lying wounded was entered and he was put to the sword. The corpse was given up for three days to the fury of the people, and finally was hung up by the feet on a gibbet.

French Now Honor Coligny.

In Paris there is a church on the Rue de Rivoli which has in its yard facing the Louvre a statue of Coligny. The French today do honor to the man whom their ancestors murdered. The statue of Coligny from its pedestal faces directly the window in the Louvre from which, history records, Charles IX fired the shot which was the second signal for the massacre to begin. The first signal was the note of a bell from a church which still stands about two blocks from the place where Coligny stands in stone.

Virtually all the Huguenots in France were compelled to emigrate during the years which followed that St. Bartholomew's day. The revocation of the edict of Nantes which had given them protection was a signal for renewed persecution and for enforced emigration.

Many of the Huguenots came to America. New Rochelle, N. Y., was founded by a small colony of them. Others went to what is now New York city, and many others went to the Carolinas. There is a Huguenot church in Charleston, where the old-time services still are conducted. Some of the best South Carolina families are descendants of the Huguenots—the Laniers, the Gaillards, the de Rosets, the Ravenels and many others. Chancey M. Depew of New York, is a direct descendant of early Huguenot immigrants.

There is no Huguenot church, so-called, in France today. There is, however, a Prostestant church which is Presbyterian in its form of worship; it is the direct descendant, so to speak, of the Huguenot church of the older days.

In the suburb of Paris, where the American hospital is located, is a thriving French Protestant church under the pastorate of Doctor D'Aubigne, a direct descendant of the D'Aubigne who wrote the great history of the Reformation. This church is a thriving one, and with the Huguenot churches in Paris has the support of a considerable number of the bankers of that city, for curiously enough, many of the heads of the greatest banking institutions in Paris are Protestant descendants of the old Huguenots.

French Alpine Protestants.

Some of the Huguenots in the mountain regions of France managed to maintain their own against the endeavors of the state to get rid of them. So it is that today in the French Alpine section there is a considerable number of sturdy Protestant families. One of the most famous regiments which fought for France in the late war, one of the Alpine Chasseur commands, was composed almost entirely of Protestants. They were known as the "Blue Devils" and their achievements in the war make a remarkable chapter of recent French history.

Things have changed. France today naturally regrets that the religious bigotries of three centuries ago caused the government to act as it did for there is realization that the expelled subjects of the monarchy at that time were for the most part skilled artisans who, when they emigrated, carried their deftness and their inventive ingenuity to other lands. It took France a long time to recover in an industrial way from the effect of the enforced emigration.

Today in France there is no evidence of religious bigotry among the citizenry. The Frenchman of today is tolerant in religious matters, more tolerant perhaps than the people of any other country. It would seem, however, that Protestantism is not particularly fitted to the temperament of the French people. The great majority of them are Catholics and a considerable minority are of no church.

Careless of Time

It is said that in Korea the natives pay little or no attention to time. They get up when they have to, eat when they have something ready, and go to bed whenever they feel like it. There is no such thing as an eight-hour day. The people work when they must and quit as soon as they dare. They have no use for wrist watches in Korea.

THE REIGN OF SOLOMON

LESSON TEXT—II Chron. 1:7-12; I Kings 11:6-11.

GOLDEN TEXT—The fear of the Lord is the beginning of knowledge.—Prov. 1:7.

PRIMARY TOPIC—A Young King's Dream.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Solomon's Choice.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Solomon's Wisdom and Folly.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Lessons From Solomon's Reign.

Here again we must go outside of the particular text assigned and make a survey of Solomon's reign.

I. Solomon Anointed King (I Kings 1:35-40).

David had heretofore failed to show the people who should be king after him (v. 20). Through the combined appeals of Bathsheba and Nathan, he is now stirred to action. He immediately sent for the faithful three, Zadok, Nathan and Benaiah, and bade them to anoint Solomon king. They speedily executed their commission, and soon the people shouted, "God save King Solomon."

II. Solomon's Wise Choice (II Chron. 1:7-12).

1. God's Gracious Offer (v. 7). This offer followed Solomon's lavish sacrifice to the Lord. God said, "Ask what I shall give thee," thus placing very wide possibilities before the king. God, as it were, signed blank checks and turned them over to Solomon to fill in any amount that his heart desired. This offer to Solomon was no exceptional one, for opportunities equally limitless are placed before us. God is saying to every one of His children, "Ask, and it shall be given you." (John 15:7).

2. Solomon's Wise Choice (vv. 8-10). The Lord's gracious offer brought the king face to face with the responsibility of making his choice. Solomon did not ask for wisdom for vain display, but for the good of others. He desired inward worth, not outward show. In this choice, he asked for two particular things:

(1) That God's promise to his father, David, might be established.

(2) That wisdom would be given to him to perform his duties.

3. God's Unstinted Gift to Solomon (v. 11). Solomon's petition pleased the Lord. Because he put wisdom first God saw that he could be trusted with material goods also.

III. The Glory of Solomon's Reign.

1. His Extensive Kingdom (I Kings 4:21-25). He ruled over the kingdoms from the Euphrates river to the Mediterranean sea, except the Phoenicians, and they were in alliance with him.

2. His Great Wisdom (I Kings 4:29-34). It excelled that of the Chaldeans, Persians and Egyptians. He had a singularly comprehensive mind. He was:

(1) A moral philosopher. He spake three thousand proverbs.

(2) A poet. His songs were one thousand five.

(3) A botanist. He spake of trees from the cedar tree, which was in Lebanon, even unto the hyssop.

(4) A zoologist. He spake of beasts and of fowl, and of creeping things, and of fishes.

3. The Temple (I Kings 5-6). This was an exact reproduction of the tabernacle, double in size, executed in marble and gold. The amount of labor, skill and money expended on the building was exceedingly great (I Chron. 22:14-16).

4. His Royal Palaces Adjoining the Temple (I Kings 7). He was nearly twice as long in building these as in building the Lord's house.

5. His Commerce (I Kings 9:26-28. Compare II Chron. 9 and 10:21). His trading ships went east as far as the Indian ocean, perhaps even to India; and west as far as Spain.

6. His Army and Navy (I Kings 10:26-29). This was for more than display. He put his nation into a state of preparedness.

This greatness was associated with the name of the Lord. It was known that his fame was due to his relation with the living God.

IV. Solomon's Failure (I Kings 11:6-12).

Because Solomon did evil in the sight of the Lord, the Lord was angry with him and assured him that the kingdom would be rent from him and given to his servant. However, for the sake of David, he would not bring this humiliation upon Solomon while he lived. Solomon's chief offenses were alliances with foreign powers through marrying kings' daughters. This compromise weakened his moral nature and he soon followed his wives in the worship of false gods.

CHAPTER XII

At the Farmers' Institute.

Every Iowa county has its Farmers' stitute. Usually it is held in the unty seat, and is a gathering of rmers for the purpose of listening improving discussions and addresses th instructive and entertaining. The oodruff district was interested in e institute, however, because of the ct that a rural-school exhibit was e of its features that year, and that olonel Woodruff had secured an gent invitation to the school to take rt in it.

Such exhibits are now so common at it is not worth while for us to scribe it; but then, the sight of a ass of children testing and weighing lk, examining grains for viability d foul seeds, planning crop rotaons, judging grains and live stock s so new in that county as to be the al sensation of the institute.

Two persons were a good deal emrrassed by the success of the exbit. One was the county superinndent, who was constantly in receipt undeserved compliments upon her sdom in fostering really "practical ork in the schools." The other was m Irwin, who was becoming famous, d who felt he had done nothing to serve fame. Professor Withers, an tension lecturer from Ames, took m to dinner at the best hotel in the wn, for the purpose of talking over th him the needs of the rural hools.

"You've got to come down to our rmers' week next year, and tell us out these things," said he to Jim. an't you?"

Jim's brain reeled. He go to a gathing of real educators and tell his nde notions! How could he get the oney for his expenses? But he had nt gameness which goes with sueme confidence in the thing dealt th.

"I'll come," said he.

"Thank you," said the Ames man. There's a small honorarium attached, u know."

Jim was staggered. He tried to reember what an honorarium is. Was obliged to pay an honorarium for e chance to speak before the college thering? Well, he'd save money and y it.

"I—I'll try to take care of the honarium," said he. "I'll come."

The professor laughed. It was the st joke the gangling innovator had rpetrated.

"It won't bother you to take care of " said he, "but if you're not too exvagant it will pay your expenses d give you a few dollars over."

Jim breathed more freely. An honarium was paid to the person receivg the honor, then. What a relief!

"All right," he exclaimed. "I'll be ad to come!"

"Let's consider that settled," said e professor. "And now I must be ing back to the opera-house. My lk on soil sickness comes next. I ll you, the winter wheat crop has en—"

But Jim was not able to think much the winter wheat problem as they ent back to the auditorium. He was orth the appreciation of a college rofessor, trained to think on the very atters Jim had been so long mulling er in isolation and blindness!

Calista Simms thought she saw mething shining and saint-like about e comely face of her teacher as he me to her at her post in the room which the school exhibit was held.

"Come and Tell Us About Those Things."

alista was in charge of the little chilen whose work was to be demonrated that day, and was in a state exaltation to which her starved beg had hitherto been a stranger. Perps there was something similar in er condition of fervent happiness to at of Jim. She, too, was doing someing outside the sordid life of the mms cabin. She yearned over the ildren in her care, and would have en glad to die for them—and besides as not Newton Bronson in charge of e corn exhibit, and a member of the rn-judging team?

To the eyes of the town girls who ssed about among the exhibits, she as poorly dressed; but if they could ve seen the clothes she had worn on at evening when Jim Irwin first lled at their cabin they could perps have understood the sense of -being and happiness in Calista's soul at the feeling of her dress, and the "boughten" cloak she wore—and any of them, even without knowledge of this, might have understood Calista's joy at the knowledge that Newton Bronson's eyes were on her from his station by the big pillar

"Hello, Calista!" said Jim. "How are you enjoying it?"

"Oh!" said Calista, and drew a long, long breath. "Ah'm enjoying myse'f right much, Mr. Jim."

"Any of the home folks coming in to see?"

"Yes, seh," answered Calista. "All the school board have stopped by this morning."

Jim looked about him. There they were now, over in a corner, with their heads together. He went toward them, his face still beaming with that radiance which had shone so plainly to the eyes of Calista Simms, but they saw in it only a grin of exultation over his defeat of them at the hearing before Jennie Woodruff. When Jim had drawn so close as almost to call for the extended hand, he felt the repulsion of their attitudes and sheered off on some pretended errand to a dark corner across the room.

They resumed their talk.

"And as I was sayin'," went on Bonner, "I want to get this guy, Jim Irwin. An' bein' the cause of his gittin 'the school, I'd like to be on the board to kick him off; but if you fellers would like to have some one else, I won't run, and if the right feller is named, I'll line up what friends I got for him."

"You got no friend can git as many wotes as you can," said Peterson. "I tank you better run."

"What say, Ez?" asked Bonner.

"Suits me all right," said Bronson. "I guess we three have had our fight out and understand each other."

"I don't like the way Colonel Woodruff acts," said Bonner. "He rounded up that gang of kids that shot us all to pieces at that hearing, didn't he?"

"I tank not," replied Peterson. "I tank he was yust interested in how Yennie managed it."

"Well," said Bonner, "he seems to take a lot of interest in this exhibition here. I think we'd better watch the colonel. That decision of Jennie's was crooked."

"Vell," said Haakon Peterson, "talk of crookedness wit' Yennie Woodruff don't get wery fur wit' me."

"Oh, I don't mean anything bad, Haakon," replied Bonner, "but it wasn't an all-right decision. I think she's stuck on the guy."

The caucus broke up after making sure that the three members of the school board would be as one man in maintaining a hostile front to Jim Irwin and his tenure of office. It looked rather like a foregone conclusion, in a little district wherein there were scarcely twenty-five votes. The three members of the board with their immediate friends and dependents could muster two or three ballots each—and who was there to oppose them?

CHAPTER XIII

The Colonel Takes the Field.

Jim stood apart and alone with his thoughts after his rebuff by the caucusing members of the school board.

"I don't see," said a voice over against the cooking exhibit, "what there is in this to set people talking. Buttonholes! Cookies! Humph!"

It was Mrs. Bonner who had clearly come to scoff. With her was Mrs. Bronson, whose attitude was that of a person torn between conflicting influences. Her husband had indicated to the crafty Bonner and the subtle Peterson that he was still loyal to the school board, but while consorting with the censorious Mrs. Bonner she evinced restiveness when the school and its work was condemned. Was not her Newton in charge of a part of this show? Was he not an open and defiant champion of Jim Irwin, and a constant and enthusiastic attendant upon, not only his classes, but a variety of eyening and Saturday affairs? And had not Newton become a better boy—a wonderfully better boy?

Mrs. Bronson's heart was filled with resentment that she also could not be enrolled among Jim Irwin's supporters. And when Mrs. Bonner sneered at the buttonholes and cookies, Mrs. Bronson, knowing how the little fingers had puzzled themselves over the one, and young faces had become floury and red over the other, flared up a little.

"And I don't see," said she, "anything to laugh at. I'd like to help them."

Mrs. Bonner was far too good a diplomat to be cornered in the same enclosure with a rupture of relations.

"And quite right, too," said she. "The little things ought to be helped—at home and by their mothers."

"Well," said Mrs. Bronson, "take them Simms girls, now. They have to have help outside their home."

"Yes," agreed Mrs. Bonner, "and a lot more help than a farm-hand can give 'em in school. I shouldn't wonder if there was a lot we don't know about why they come north."

"As for that," replied Mrs. Bronson, "I don't know as it's any of my business so long as they behave themselves."

Again Mrs. Bonner felt the situation getting out of hand.

"Ain't it some of our business?" she queried. "I wonder now! By the way Newtie keeps his eye on that Simms girl, I shouldn't wonder if it might turn out your business."

"Pshaw!" scoffed Mrs. Bronson. "Puppy love!"

"You can't tell how far it'll go," persisted Mrs. Bonner. "I tell you these schools are getting to be nothing more than sparkin' bees, from the county superintendent down."

"Well, maybe," said Mrs. Bronson, "but I don't see sparkin' in everything boys and girls do as quick as some."

"I wonder," said Mrs. Bonner, "if Colonel Woodruff would be as friendly to Jim Irwin if he knew that everybody says Jennie decided he was to keep his certif-kit because she wants him to get along in the world, so he can marry her?"

"I don't know as she is so very friendly to him," replied Mrs. Bronson; "and Jim and Jennie are both of age, you know."

"I Have Invited Him to Make an Address."

"Yes, but how about our schools bein' ruined by a love affair?" interrogated Mrs. Bonner, as they moved away. "Ain't that your business and mine?"

Instead of desiring further knowledge of what they were discussing, Jim felt a dreadful disgust at the whole thing. Jennie was against him, he believed, and as for her being in love with him—to hear these women discuss it was intolerable. He felt his face redden as at the hearing of some horrible indecency. And while he was raging inwardly, paying the penalty of a publicity to which he was not yet hardened, he heard other voices. Professor Withers, County Superintendent Jennie and Colonel Woodruff were making an inspection of the rural-school exhibit.

"I hear he has been having some trouble with his school board," the professor was saying.

"Yes," said Jennie, "he has. Proceedings before me to revoke his certificate."

"On what grounds?"

"Incompetency," answered Jennie. "I found that his pupils were really going very well in the regular course of study—which he seems to be neglecting."

"I'm glad you supported him," said the professor. "I'm glad to find you helping him."

"Really," protested Jennie, "I don't think myself—"

"What do you think of his notions?" asked the colonel.

"Very advanced," replied Professor Withers, "Where did he imbibe them all?"

"He's a Brown Mouse," said the colonel. "A phenomenon in heredity—perhaps a genius."

"Ah, I see," replied the professor, "a Mendelian segregation, you mean?"

"Certainly," said the colonel. "The sort of mind that imbibes things from itself."

"Well, he's rather wonderful," declared the professor. "I had him to lunch today. He surprised me. I have invited him to make an address at Ames next winter during farmers' week."

"He?"

Jennie's tone showed her astonishment. Jim the underling. Jim the off ox. Jim the thorn in the county superintendent's side. Jim the country teacher! It was stupefying.

"Oh, you mustn't judge him by his looks," said the professor. "I really do hope he'll take some advice on the matter of clothes—put on a cravat and a different shirt and collar when he comes to Ames—but I have no doubt he will."

"He hasn't any other," said the colonel.

"Well, it won't signify, if he has the truth to tell us," said the professor.

"Has he?" asked Jennie.

During the Discussion.

"Bah, you have no religion." "Yes, I have a religion, but I don't get mad over it."

Looking back to "the happiest days," one remembers that quite frequently it was only part of a day.

Jacquette With Side-Tie Effect; Overblouses Dominate the Mode

HENCEFORTH when milady sallies forth on a shopping tour, she of the modern school who would purchase a knitted coat will write on her memorandum, in letters bold, such terms as jumper, jacquette or Oriental coat. 'Tis Fashion's decree, since the consensus of opinion votes "sweater" as proving inadequate to express the style scope of the season's knitted coats, jackets and slipons.

Now that knitted outerwear is styled for every occasion, formal and informal, we welcome the introduction in fashion's vocabulary, the names jacquette, jumper and Oriental coat, especially since we are assured that these three styles stand preeminently forth in the season's modes.

Jacquette With Turn-Back Collar.

Referring to the jacquette pictured here, its side-tie effect is a mark of style distinction. The graceful knitted sash streamers, heavily yarn-fringed, impart appealing grace to the entire costume. Another of the season's trends is for stripes in knitted garments. Sometimes they go up-and-down or, as in this case, round-and-round. Whatever their direction, stripes are the mode.

Girlish turn-back collars are greatly fancied, for their becomingness is assured. Notice also the plain knit binding and the long snug sleeves, each an item of latest vogue.

The jacquette also exploits the tailleur, in keeping with fashion's announced intention of emphasizing an era of tailored apparel. However there are also included in the season's modes wondrous knitted jacquette fantasies.

The latest is for knitted scarf to match the jacquette. Very prominent, too, is the monogram idea. Often the monogram appears interknit on pocket and scarf as well.

Practical shades such as Mexico, buff, navy, and especially black with white, vie with vivid new tones which include jade, blossom, lacquer red, and a blue called Chink.

Having settled the matter of the tailored suit, the next thing in the regular order of the business of spring outfitting is the blouse. It almost goes without saying that we are about to discuss the overblouse—other kinds are in such a small minority that we can pass them up for the present. The tuck-in may arrive later on, but just now it is conspicuous by its absence and the overblouse holds an undisputed sway.

The tailored overblouse is made of wash silk usually or of voile—silk is understood to include certain satins and silk broadcloth. It is simply designed with either long or short sleeves and a turndown collar. Link cuffs are favored on the long-sleeved blouses and hemstitching is a perfect means of decorating them, especially those made of voile. On silk broadcloth novelty braids make a neat finish used as a border for neck, sleeves and pockets. Radium silk is another good medium for tailored blouses. These and light woolen cloths are cut on straight lines and simply made. Silk alpaca and crepe de chine are favorites for the handsomest blouses.

There are plenty of fancier blouses among the new displays and some of these will be worn into the tailored street suits, serving to furnish a note of cheerful color in the costume. As a rule designs are simple. A pretty example is shown at the right of the two blouses pictured, in which a printed silk crepe reveals poppies and daisies in outline and solid color on a tan-colored background. Plain crepe is used for the fold at the left side supporting pendent silk balls. A white and black combination appears in the plaited blouse at the left, of crepe de chine. The hip band is decorated with strips of a material that resembles jet.

An Opportunity

There has come to the people of Shelby county an opportunity to get rid of one of the most pestiferous of all the pests with which which our people have ever had to contend. That is the cattle tick.

It would be impossible to say how much the cattle tick has already cost our county. In addition to the money that has been paid out, there is the loss each year of a large number of fine cattle because of tick fever. The county has been held back in its program for diversified farming more than any man knows, both because progressive farmers from other sections were held back from coming into our county to settle and because our own farmers could not go in for live stock as they wanted to do, because of the cattle tick.

In addition to all this loss, there has been bickering and strife among our people. Instead of being at work whole heartedly together to build Shelby county, we have been working apart, doing nothing along some lines, and in some respects doing worse than nothing. We have neglected our schools until it will take years for Shelby county to reach its true place among the counties of Alabama in educational development. We let ticks get into politics, and the bitterness engendered by the controversy caused us to elect men to office who in normal times would hardly have been chosen. Possibly the thing that in the long run will prove the most costly to Shelby county, some men seem to have been led to believe they were justified in evading the law and dodging its requirements.

As a result of all these unfortunate circumstances, Shelby county stands today, a black spot on the map of Alabama. Others counties. years ago got rid of the cattle tick, with much less cost than we are having to pay, and they are already getting ahead of us in the development made possible by this prompt action.

Surely the citizens of Shelby county have learned their lesson. The only way to settle the tick question is the only safe way in which to attempt to settle any question, just as the law provides. Any other way is full of danger, both now and in the years to come. Let us be done then, with attempts to evade and dodge the law in Shelby county. Let is prove to the world that in Shelby county the law, all law, is held sacred and and must be made supreme.

Columbiana Needs Organization—

The Reporter called attention last week to the opportunity for service that lies before the business men of Columbiana through some kind of civic organization. There are not many towns in Alabama the size and importance of Columbiana that are doing without such an organization and many towns not so long established and formerly of much less importance, have pushed ahead and outdistanced us in the work of community building, through the right kind of community organization.

We know already that it is impossible to do much without organization. Many times we do not even see, the opportunities for service that come to us. But the fine thing about getting organized is that our people will be looking for something to do, and if we but keep the right spirit, one thing accomplished will but make us more eager for the next opportunity.

The Reporter is publishing this week an account of some of the activities of the the Montevallo Exchange Club, and this record but goes to prove what we have been saying. The citizens of our neighbor town are just as capable and just as willing as those of any other community in Alabama, but there is little chance that this splendid development would have been made if the citizens of Montevallo had not had the leadership of the Exchange Club. Another thing, the men of Montevallo are just as practically minded and are just as good business men as any of the rest of us. If they did not find their Exchange club profitable they would not be spending their time and their money in keeping it going.

Attention is called to the program for the observance of State Wide Sunday School and Church Day on March 30 prepared by the Alabama Sunday School Council of Religious Education, and published in another column of this paper. It is hoped that in every church in Shelby county this day may be observed. Let a special united effort be made, a well organized effort, to get every man woman, and child to attend Sunday school and church on that day.

Alabama College Work At Vincent Great Success

What do you suppose the Log Cabin President" would have thought if some college professor had come to his home and proposed to send an A. M. degree man to his very door and put on college courses in his own home community at a total cost of a few dolhars? If George Washington could turn in his grave and hear school boys and rural teachers discussing the proposed college course to be offered in their little school house, he would think it a jest worthy of investigation.

Regardless of what our sleeping forefathers might think of such a thing, the pleasure and privilege is ours.

All people cannot go to college, but in our day, the college will come to all who welcome it.

At this time this is the way Vincent group feels about the course in polltical science given by our own home institution, the Alabama College, and under the direct supervision and instruction of Professor R. E. Parker, now principal of Shelby County High School

The teachers of this section seemed to appreciate this opportunity in the fullest sense, and we believe it will add much to their efficiency in all future service.

Another fact that adds appreciation on the part of the teachers of the county, is the fact that under the courtesy of the Alabama College, we had the privilege of working off a full text in political science under an A. M. degree man. Prof. R. E. Parker. Mr. Parker has won for himself a warm place in the hearts of his fellow teachers His high scholarship, tact, and enthusiasm made the success of the course a realized possibility. Prof. Parker is a strong believer in college preparation, and in his closing address he emphasised the importance of teachers doing college work, at least summer work, in making ready for professional service. And in this connection he did not neglect the opportunity to speak a good word for our Alabama College, and expressed full faith and confidence in the institution to give the teachers the very kind of training to assure them professional success.

We wish to express our thanks to the college for the provilege and opportunity of working off a college credit in political science. We also express our gratitude to Prof. Parker for his patient, faithful, and efficient service, as he came to us each time full to running over with his subject.

Hog Prices Will Be Sure To Come Back

(By A. A. Lauderdale, County Agent.)

This is a good time to buy pure-bred hogs. Too many people go into the live stock business when prices are high and then go out when a depression comes, which results in a great loss. While hogs are cheap, you can buy your foundation stock at reasonable figures; and we all know it pays to have pure bred hogs, for they have more quality and unformity, and are ready for the market from one to two months earlier than the scrub.

Pork production for the past two years has not been very attractive, due to the high price of feed and low price for the finished hog. Many sows have found their way to market, which will result in fewer hogs. In August, September and October of 1923, there were 1,500,000 sows on the market, with heavy sales of light weight weight hogs. Reports show a great decrease in the number of sows bred for spring litters in the corn belt. The pendulum is now due to swing back to lower production and higher prices.

Profit in the hog business, just as in the dairy business, depends upon economic production. By economical production we mean cheap feed, good pastures and forage crops, with some good crop to hog down and finish off in the fall, as corn and soy beans or peanuts. Right now is the time to make plans for your hog pasture.

As your farm adviser, I feel it my duty to give you my opinion of the hog situation, and insist that you consider seriously the proposition of raising a few hogs for the fall market, for I truly believe I will be in position to say, "I told you so.

An L & N Train 530 Miles Long

The distance, "as the crow flies", from Cincinnati to Montgomery is about 500 miles. If all the rolling stock equipment of the L. & N.—62,000 freight cars, 1,330 locomotives, 880 passenger cars, 724 cabooses and various units of work equipment—were coupled together they would form a solid train 530 miles long.

Try to visualize this huge train. Walking at the normal pace of 25 miles a day, it would require over 21 days for a man to travel from one end of it to the other.

Think of the tremendous money investment this equipment represents—about $115,000,000. Imagine the expenditure required to maintain and operate this equipment scattered all over the 5,000 miles of the L. & N. system, and to keep the roadway and tracks in good and safe condition—about $110,000,000 per year.

Let this picture help to keep clear and fresh in your mind the importance of the Louisville & Nashville Railroad to the South—serving the people of 13 states; paying $75,000,000 annually in wages to 52,000 employees; fostering industries of farm and factory and contributing to state, civic and educational institutions through the payment of over $6,000,000 in taxes. Preserve these thoughts in your memory and you will be able to appreciate more fully the individual as well as the public benefits that come from the undisturbed operation of this great transportation system.

"Miss Columbiana" To Be Chosen Next Week

Wednesday, March 26, has been named as Coronation Evening in Columbiana, and every one is look ing forward to it with much pleasure. An attractive program is being arranged by Mrs. Luck, Mrs. Wallace and Mrs. Middleton the main feature of which will be the crowning of "Miss Columbiana."

This movement is being fostered by the parent-teacher association and each vote will cost one cent. Several of Columbiana's lassies have already been entered in the contest. After Thursday, March 20, and until the evening March 26, the race will be between the two young ladies holding the highest number of votes, and at this time the winner will be crowned "Miss Columbiana." The exercises will be held at the high school auditorium.

The proceeds derived from the contest will be used for the improvement of the public school. This is a splendid cause, and those who contribute to it will have the opportunity to vote for their choice in selecting the "Queen of Columbiana."

THE HOME NEWSPAPER BOOSTS YOUR TOWN

What does your home newspaper mean to you?

It happened in the office of a small town newspaper. A business man of that town called and asked the price of some letter heads and when informed that a certain number would cost a certain price said "Gee Whiz, I can get that job done at the cut-price printery in another town for much less." Whereupon the paper man replied:

"All right; take it to the cut price printery, but let me tell you something before you do so. We are boosting this town 52 weeks in the year with our weekly newspaper. We have an overhead expense and we furnish employment to others; we are endeavoring to boost this town to make business better for you as well as ourselves; we are operating our newspaper so that we can pay a living wage and at the same time make a fair profit; we cannot operate below cost and neither can you. You make a profit and yet it seems you don't expect us to do so". Before he could go further the business man interrupted him and said: Wait a minute—I'm not kicking, go ahead and turn out the job."

Too many times the business man, the merchant and the professional man forget that a weekly newspaper does mean to his success in his home town and that such an institution is really entitled to every cent that can be thrown into the newspaper's hands —that many of the small papers run a printing office to supplement their income in order to make a living.—Ex.

Charged the Camera

Once during an African hunt, says Mr. E. M. Newman in the American Magazine, a charging rhinoceros gave us some trouble. Two camera men in my party were filming him, but being photographed seemed to bore him, and he headed directly for one of the cameras. The man, relying on the hunter who was with us, kept on turning; but the hunter did not fire quite soon enough. The rhinoceros crashed down dead on top of the camera. Fortunately, the camera man had jumped aside just in time.

The second man filmed the whole scene, and it made a great picture when we recovered the smashed camera from under the beast, saved that film and combined it with the other.

City of Capua

The city of Capua of ancient Italy opened its gates to Hannibal after the Battle of Cannae, 216 B. C., and the army there went into winter quarters. Capua was the most luxurious city in Italy, and Hannibal's army was greatly enervated as a result of its residence there. When the Romans regained possession of Capua, 211, B. C., they scourged and beheaded the surviving senators who had not poisoned themselves before the surrender of the city. Only two persons, it is said, escaped: one, a woman who had prayed for the success of the Roman arms, and the other a woman who had succored some prisoners. The word "Capua" became a synonym for luxury and self-indulgence.

Death of Sol D. Bloch

Sol D. Bloch of Camden, formany years a member of the board of trustees of Alabama College, died Monday in Mobile. Mr. Bloch as a member of the legislature from Wilcox county, introduced the bill for the establishment of The Girls Industrial Institute, now Alabama College, in 1892. The bill became a law in 1896, and Montevallo was selected for the home of the school.

Methodists to Raise Superannuate Fund

The Columbiana-Shelby Charge of the Methodist Church, South, Rev. W. A. Mays, pastor, has accepted $1,780 as a minimum quota to raise within five years for the cause of Superannuate Endowment of that denomination. The goal for the entire church of this movement is $10,000,000, the income from which is to be used for the support of the aged and infirm ministers and widows and orphans of ministers.

The campaign for the fund is being directed by the Board of Finance of the Southern Methodist church, St. Louis, Mo., Bishop W. F. McMurry, chairman, and Dr. Luther E. Todd, secretary. The latter has issued and sent to all pastors a booklet, "The Call of the Forgotten Man," which tells the pathetic story of the great need, asks the church to remember him with substantial giving and outlines plans for raising the sum sought.

According to reports received by the board, over 2,000 pastoral charges have up to this time accepted minimum quotas, asked of them and many of them have voluntarily increased the amounts. Several large individual gifts have already been announced and others are expected.

There are over 900 of the old preachers, many of them pioneer circuit riders who rode through storm and sunshine, winter and summer, day and night, to serve humanity and the church, 1,300 widows and 600 orphans, many of whom are living in little better than poverty. They never forgot a duty and the church for a single moment and there is now evidence on all sides that the church is at last thoroughly awake to its belated duty to its forgotten servants.

Ground Hog Holds On

At the time last weeks' article was written it was assumed that the ground hog had done his very worst, but not so. The demonstration described above was followed on Thursday by a genuine snow storm, that beginning about 9.30 in the morning continued until late into Thursday night. There was in Columbiana at least five inches of snow and if allowance is made for the melting there must have been a snowfall of at least seven inches. It was the heaviest snow in March in a long time, the Montgomery weather man says in fifty-two years.

NEW PROSPECT NO. 1

Health of our community has not been so good, but with the coming of spring we hope it will be better.

Mr. and Mrs. Elbert Miller visited her father E. L. Cooper at Mt. Chappel Saturday and Sunday.

Farmers are getting behind but as the writer from Harpersville says we have plenty of time if we make use of it.

We still have Sunday school but a faithful few have kept it going this winter. We know the Lord said "Where a few have gathered themselves together in my name I will be in their midst to own and to bless." But still it is disheartening to see how little interest the people take in the Lord's work. Isn't the Lord's work more important than man's? The Sunday school here has elected teachers and we especially invite and expect the church members to help us recruit up and keep our school going. The church has bought new song books and we are going to have a singing every first Sunday afternoonn, beginning the first Sunday in April. If you can't sing, come and listen to those that do.

Our pastor, Rev. A. J. Thomas, was absent last second Sunday. We learn he has been sick. We know that he is a strong gospel preacher, come and let him prove it to you.

Our Sunday school begins at ten o'clock a. m. We all know if a pupil is late going to school he or she will be counted tardy and continuous tardiness will keep them from being on the honor roll. No one wants to be left off of the Lord's honor roll. So be on time, friends.

Air Records for Army Made With Old Planes

In the last year the army air service set 11 world records, most of them with obsolescent craft brought up to date. Records for 500, 1,000, 1,500, 2,000, 2,500, 3,000, 3,500, 4,000, 5,000 and 5,300 kilometers were made at Dayton, O., and San Diego, Cal., and were made possible, for the longer distances, through refueling in full flight, a gas tank plane, the new supply being fed through a hose to the lower ship. A world's duration record of 36 hours, 4 minutes and 31 seconds was made over Dayton on April 16-17, by Lieuts. Oakley Kelly and J. A. Macready, which was later surpassed on August 27-28 by Lieuts. L. H. Smith and J. P. Richter at San Diego, with a record of 37 hours 15 minutes 43.8 seconds. This was made in an army observation plane, seven years old in design, refueling in flight.—United States Army Recruiting News.

Thrashing It Out

A group of workmen were holding a lively argument. Presently one of the men turned to a mate who had remained silent during the debate. "'Ere, Bill," he said, "you're pretty good at an argyment. Wot's your opinion?"

"I ain't goin' to say," said Bill. "I thrashed the matter out afore with Bob Jones."

"Ah!" said the other; "and what did you arrive at?"

"Well," said Bill, "Bob 'e arrived at the 'orspital an' I arrived at the police station."—London Telegraph.

Perfectly Simple

"Do you know," said Professor Brown to his bosom friend, "I cannot understand how people forget the ages of their children. I have no trouble. For example, I was born 2,800 years after Socrates; my wife, 1,800 years after the death of Tiberius Caesar; my son, John, 2,000 years after Tiberius Sempronius Gracchus was chosen tribune of the people, and our daughter, Amanda, 1,500 years after the beginning of the Folk wandering. It is perfectly simple, you see!"

The deadly tsetse fly of the jungles is said to have been given its double name from the short, sharp sound which it makes twice in quick succession.

She—Yes, it did. I got all warmed up after I got through chasin' him around the engine room with a poker.

Why Pay the Penalty of Lying Awake?

MANY people spend hours at night, restlessly tossing from side to side, waiting for sleep. All because they drink coffee with their evening meal.

If the caffeine in coffee irritates your nervous system and keeps you awake when you should be asleep, recuperating your energies, why not stop coffee and drink Postum?

Postum is a pure cereal beverage, absolutely free from caffeine or anything that can disturb health and comfort. Many prefer Postum for its delightful aroma and flavor.

If you want to know the truth, change to Postum for a month or so, and see how much better you will sleep and feel.

"There's a Reason"

Your grocer sells Postum in two forms: Instant Postum (in tins) prepared instantly in the cup by the addition of boiling water. Postum Cereal (in packages) for those who prefer the flavor brought out by boiling fully 20 minutes. The cost of either form is about one-half cent a cup.

MARY SUCCEEDS ON MAIN STREET

MOTHERING THAT PAYS DIVIDENDS

The profession of motherhood is not supposed to be a well-paid occupation. And foster mothers—who do for pay what real mothers gladly give from affection—are generally not highly regarded. Yet out in Phoenix lives a woman who mothers all the children in the state of Arizona, gets paid for doing it, and has been honored by nearly every organization in the state.

When Mrs. H. A. Guild was a girl she loved her younger brothers and sisters. When she grew up and taught, she loved her pupils—even in the huge machinelike system of the Chicago schools. And when marriage brought no babies of her own, she began to love and foster public movements for bettering humanity. Out of this last love grew her present mothering job. She was the first woman in Arizona to be appointed head of a department of state. Secretary of the Arizona child welfare board, she now has supervision of all child welfare measures, working through 65 county child welfare board members. And in addition she is a foster mother to a child for every day in the year, for there are 365 orphan children who live in foster homes or with widowed mothers, as wards of Arizona.

That's enough to keep any mother heart full to overflowing, isn't it? Even if the men and women of the state forget her, I imagine Mrs. Guild could keep happy. Furthermore, she's owner of a ten-acre ranch that has been turned from a sagebrush and cactus desert to a producer of roses and "long staple" cotton. The ranch owner organized the rural women of the state and brought them into association with their city sisters through district federations. Naturally the Federation of Women's Clubs made her state president.

Then Mrs. Guild decided that women who had the vote ought to use it politically. Not unnaturally she was the first Arizona woman sent to the national Republican convention in 1920. In 1922 she was nominated for representative to congress, and was defeated only because her whole party ticket was snowed under.

Knowing big city, small city, town and country intimately, Mrs. Guild declares that if a girl has ability there is always room on "Main Street" even though it may look crowded or empty of opportunity.

THE WOMAN PRO OFFICER

Back in 1873-4 when the first prohibition movement swept America, Mrs. Georgianna Hopley went out with the Bucyrus group to clean up that Ohio town. Her husband, John Hopley, was editor of the Bucyrus Journal. Of their children seven are now active newspaper men and women.

The eighth, Georgia Hopley, has graduated from newspaper work into a job that combines the ambitions of both mother and father. She writes on the letterhead of the United States Treasury department and signs "General Prohibition Agent, Constructive Information Bureau, Prohibition Unit," and with a flash of humor recently added, "That's all."

She is said to have been the first woman in Ohio to enter active newspaper work. In 1900 Governor Nash appointed her representative of Ohio women at the Paris exposition. She remained abroad for many months and has since made frequent trips to England and France. As women have become more and more active in politics she has given much of her time to political publicity campaigns.

Whatever else Miss Hopley's business cards say they always have in the lower left-hand corner, Home Address, Bucyrus, Ohio. "It isn't civic pride alone that makes up my loyalty to the old home town," she insists. "Bucyrus is always on the map!"

A large part of her work for the prohibition unit consists in public speaking. Reporters who have followed her meetings are astonished into commenting on the fact that she is broad-minded, with all her enthusiasm for prohibition. She comes with official power, they say, but she is content to let the question rest with the public. She is spending her time just "telling folks about it." She tells them what the enforcement forces are doing. She tells them what great obstacles have been thrown in the way. She pictures those which are used maliciously and those used by the uninformed and the unintelligent.

Controlling the malicious wet forces isn't the part of the job that this skilled newspaper woman is interested in. Education of those who are uninformed and indifferent carries to Georgia Hopley the thrill of being as practical as a shoe-selling campaign and as idealistic as the dreams of her mother.

Displacement Extraordinary.

Sausages and Creamed Potatoes.

Place a dish of creamed potatoes in the oven with enough small pork sausages to cover the top and bake.

Johnny Cake.

Take one cupful of sour milk, one-half teaspoonful of soda, one-half teaspoonful of salt, two well-beaten eggs, two tablespoonfuls each of sugar and shortening, one-fourth of a cupful of flour and three-fourths of a cupful of cornmeal. Mix and beat well, bake in a small dripping pan in a moderate oven.

Drop Doughnuts.

Beat two eggs well, add one-half cupful of sugar, one-half cupful of milk, a grating of lemon rind, a pinch of ginger, one and one-half cupfuls of flour sifted with a teaspoonful of baking powder. Drop by teaspoonfuls into hot fat. This recipe makes twenty-four. Roll in sugar when cold.

Cottage Pudding.

The sour cream cake left from Wednesday night may be used for the pudding. Cut in squares, steam and serve with the following sauce: One-half cupful of sugar, two tablespoonfuls each of flour and butter, a grating of nutmeg and half cupful of boiling water. Cook all together but the butter; when thick add two to three tablespoonfuls of vinegar and the butter. Serve poured hot over the pudding.

We ought not to get books too cheaply. No book, I believe, is ever worth half so much to its reader as one that has been coveted for a year, and bought out of saved halfpence, and perhaps a day or two's fasting. That's the way to get at the cream of a book.—Ruskin.

SOME NATIONAL DISHES

It is pleasant at times to partake of some of the dishes which have been and are famous in other countries.

Danish Apple Cake.—Prepare the following cooky mixture, using one egg, one-half cupful of shortening, one-half cupful of milk, one cupful of sugar, three-fourths of a cupful of flour, three teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one teaspoonful of salt, one teaspoonful of vanilla. Mix well and divide into six portions. This will make two cakes. Roll each of the portions to fit a layer cake tin, let stand in a cool place for half an hour, then bake. Spread the three layers with apple sauce and over the top place whipped cream sweetened and flavored. Dot with bits of jelly and serve. The rest of the mixture may be made into cookies or baked and kept for another cake.

Jewish Fish Dish.—Take two pounds of salmon, halibut, haddock or cod. Use the bones and head to make stock. Place one cupful of chopped, mixed soup vegetables in a kettle, lay on them the fish and pour over the stock; cover and let cook until the fish is done. Lift the fish carefully to a hot platter and pour over it hot lemon sauce made as follows: Beat two eggs, add one-third of a cupful of lemon juice, enough fish stock strained to make a cupful; cook in a double boiler until thickened. Add butter, a few bits at a time and pour the hot sauce over the fish. Serve when cold.

Belgium Potatoes.—Fry six slices of bacon until half done, remove from the pan and add one sliced onion. Cut three potatoes into one-inch cubes, add bacon, onion, two cupfuls of water, a bay leaf, a pinch of thyme and salt if needed. Cook uncovered until the potatoes are tender.

Peanut Straws.—Roll rich pastry to one-eighth of an inch in thickness, spread one-half with softened peanut butter, wet the edges of the crust, fold the remaining half over it. Roll lightly, prick here and there to prevent puffing, cut into strips half an inch wide and four inches long, brush with milk and bake in a quick oven. When done, sprinkle with paprika.

COLOMBIA

The Cauca Valley, Colombia, Near Cali.

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)

To show that ocean to Great Lakes traffic is possible, a newspaper headline declared not long ago that a ship had sailed from Bogota, Colombia, to Chicago. Doubtless not one person in a hundred who read the words recognized their absurdity in so far as the "port" of origin is concerned, such is the lack of knowledge in the United States in regard to the by no means far removed republic of Colombia. In reality the headline could be no more justified than one dubbing Reno, Nevada, a "port" because goods from that city, carried a hundred miles by rail, were shipped at Sacramento.

Bogota lies on a great plateau a mile and three quarters above sea level and thousands of feet above the rapids that mark the head of navigation for steamers on the Magdalena river, a hundred miles away. Because of this high location Bogota is one of the most delightful capitals of South America—a temperate zone city deep in the tropics, barely 300 miles from the equator. There, on a site dependent on mule-back transportation until a few years ago, has grown up a city comparable in size to New Haven, Conn., or Memphis, Tenn. It is a city of beautiful homes, colleges and schools, and has a club and social life that put it on a par with some European capitals.

It would be difficult to choose a more delightful setting for a city than the site of Bogota. To the east rise high mountains; to the north and south stretches an extensive, fertile upland plain; and at some distance to the west are hills and beyond more high mountains. Bogota's rather paradoxical situation in the shadow of the equator yet essentially in the temperature zone, is proved by a journey over its adjacent plains where the potatoes, corn and other grains and vegetables of our Middle West flourish.

The testimony of the thermometer is equally eloquent. The mean temperature is about 60 degrees Fahrenheit, the mercury seldom rising above 75 degrees or falling below 55 degrees. A reasonable amount of rain falls and altogether the city is blessed with a "white man's climate."

Colombia's Strong Points.

The republic of which Bogota is the capital may some day be one of the most important countries of South America because of its unique and convenient location, its vast resources, and its climatic assets. It is the only country of the southern continent that has a coast line on both the Atlantic and Pacific oceans. And both ocean outlets are extensive; the country borders the Atlantic for more than 600 miles, while its Pacific seaboard is only slightly less in extent. On both oceans are several good ports, and numerous others that engineering skill can make useful.

Colombia covers close to half a million square miles, a region about as great as all the southeastern section of the United States east of the Mississippi and south of the Ohio river and the southern line of Pennsylvania. And thanks to its great mountain masses and plateaus, its lowlands and valleys, it has a range of climatic conditions that could be approached in the United States only by journeying from the tip of Florida to the northern boundary of Maine.

The Andes, which are fairly compact in Ecuador, separate into three branches in Colombia, the western, central and eastern cordillera. The real heart of the country in population and development lies between the two outer cordilleras in the great Cauca valley to the west of the central ridge, and the greater Magdalena valley and the Bogota plateau on its other side. The steep Pacific slope on the westward side of the western cordillera is as yet little developed, largely, no doubt, because of its tremendous rainfall. There is no seasonal let-up in the precipitation in this strip of territory; the rain falls almost continuously, and at one station the annual total is more than 33 feet.

Largely because of saturated ground, floods and a rank jungle growth, it required 40 years to build 75 miles of railroad through the western strip of Colombia from the Pacific port, Buenaventura, to Cali. Riding along on this road through virtual tunnels of verdure, one gains the impression that it is only because trains continue to pass and to mash too venturesome roots and branches and tendrils that the jungle does not wholly overrun the right of way. Palms, bamboos, ferns, and an endless variety of vines and parasitic plants form almost impenetrable walls that line the track for miles. There is no dust, for the soil is never far below saturation, and the foliage always looks as though it had been freshly scrubbed.

As the traveler ascends the western Andes the effect of altitude and local barriers on his surroundings becomes fascinating. Topping an auxiliary ridge he leaves the dense tropical forest behind, for the ridge is a barrier to the heavy moisture-bearing clouds. Beyond it is grass land, only reasonably well watered. But once across the valley and on the climb again up the main mountain range beyond, he passes out of the "rain shadow" and finds that moisture has taken up its forest building again. This new forest zone, however, is no longer tropical. The reduced temperature due to altitude has made it into a semi-tropical land with plants and animals and birds as distinct as if it were a thousand miles instead of a dozen from the steamy forest that was first traversed. Then one tops the main ridge of the western Andes, and again the scene is shifted as suddenly as in a theater. To the east of the crest one is again in a "rain shadow" and the downward slopes are bare of trees, but covered with grass.

Cauca Valley Almost Ideal.

This is the beginning of one of Colombia's principal geographic divisions, the Cauca valley, approximately 40 miles wide, which extends for more than 500 miles between the tall walls of the western and central Andes. Granted that one wishes to live in a mildly tropical climate, the upper Cauca valley would seem to be one of the half-dozen best locations in all the world. Its floor near Cali, metropolis of the vale, has an altitude of 3,500 feet and a moderate rainfall which gives it an agreeable reasonably warm climate; and almost at arm's length on either side is whatever cooler temperature he may wish, at which to spend his vacations and holidays and even week-ends.

The soil's fertility seems beyond the possibility of exhaustion. On some plantations sugar cane has grown luxuriantly for a century and a quarter without fertilization; and grass, once established on the cattle ranges, goes on furnishing the raw material for good beef year in and year out. Since man does not live on sugar and beef alone, one other valuable factor in the Cauca valley's favor is worth noting: the beautiful scenery that meets the eye at every turn, whether in the crisp rays of the morning sun, the warm noonday, or the mellow afterglow of the mountain sunsets.

Down the valley flows the Cauca river whose steamers furnish a delightful means of transportation toward the outside world. As one steams down the stream the country takes on a more and more tropical aspect. Savannas give way to groves of bamboo and plantain and these to deep primeval forests with birds of brilliant plumage and interesting families of monkeys.

Over the central Andes and into the valley through which flows the country's greatest river, the Magdalena, one finds in a way a repetition of conditions in the Cauca valley. The Magdalena valley is deeper, however, and in it one finds real tropical heat. But the region between the central Andes and their eastern brothers is not all tropical valley. The distance between these two ranges of mountains is 100 miles or more, and much of it is occupied by the supremely important tableland of Bogota. This lies at an elevation of more than 8,000 feet, so high that the unpleasantness of the tropics is all extracted, leaving the North American to enjoy the sort of climate that his own country can show at its best. There is little wonder that the city built here hundreds of years ago, even if it is remote from the seacoast, has become the center of the national life.

China's Speeding Up

Many of Peking (China's) fleet-footed rickshaw men—some 40,000 in number—will be driving trolley cars down her narrow streets and ringing up fares and keeping up the tracks by the spring of 1924, if all goes well.

The world's Forbidden city has raised by popular subscription the capital for financing a tramway system and only the objections of the rickshaw men who would be forced to meet the competition of cheap electric transportation has to be overcome. This can be done, it is thought, by employing most of them on the trams.

One of the Things Mr. Royster Discovered About the Feeding of Crops

Cured Fertilizer Has Increased Farmers' Earnings

Haven't you heard about the more thorough and scientific feeding for plants—hastening maturity and helping to grow crops that bring higher prices? Everywhere you find farmers talking about the remarkable results through the use of Royster's Cured Fertilizer.

Why Cured Fertilizer Grows Better Crops

Mr. Royster discovered that by aging or curing fertilizer for four to six months he could increase its value as a plant-food. He found that this curing brought about a certain chemical action which prepared the fertilizer for the use of crops and made food elements available at the very time they are needed.

Why Mr. Royster can Cure his Fertilizer

Naturally it requires vast quantities of material in order to anticipate a season's supply, half a year before it is needed. (This half year representing the aging period). It also requires strong financial resources. Thus;—only a company like Royster's can offer this improved type of fertilizer.

Look for the Name on the Bag.

Don't guess about fertilizer. Look for the name "Royster's" and know that your crops will be well fed—for the sake of greater earnings.

What Farmers are saying:

"I have used other guano, but Royster's is the best for me."

"I have used no other brand of fertilizer for three years."

Royster's Fertilizers distribute better and retain their fertilizing power longer."

"——used your fertilizer for the past two years and have had the best crops I've had for many a year."

"——I shall continue to use Royster's as long as I farm."

"—— better results than I have ever gotten before from use of fertilizer."

ALABAMA COLLEGE

Montevallo, Alabama, Mch. 17.—The noted poet and lecturer, Vachel Lindsay, will deliver one lecture at Alabama College March 20th, under the auspices of the English department.

President Palmer has mailed his annual report to the trustees, who will meet in the College library at eleven o'clock, Thursday, March 20. The meeting was originally scheduled for May 16, during commencement, but on account of urgent matters demanding attention, the Executive Committee, Messrs. L. Sevier, Birmingham; W. T. Sheehan, Montgomery; and J. B. Ellis, Selma; upon the recommendation of the president, requested the Governor to change the time of the meeting. A full attendance is expected. Governor Brandon will preside. C. L. Meroney, Montevallo, is secretary.

Alabama College and Montevallo are preparing many social features for the meeting of the Alabama Federation of Women's Clubs, on April 8th and 11th.

The Studiosis Club will entertain the officers at luncheon immediately upon their arrival Tuesday afternoon, April 8th. After the luncheon has been served, the Montevallo Exchange Club will take the officials for a drive, visiting points of interest, among them the mines at Aldrich.

On Tuesday evening, after the close of the first general program, the faculty will hold a reception in the college drawing-room in honor of all the delegates in attendance.

Wednesday at noon, a luncheon by Home Economics Department, will be served to the Writer's club at which about one hundred will probably be present.

Thursday evening was kindly given by the program committee to the college for special features. The students will serve a stunt dinner in the large dining hall, and later in the evening the Music Art and Eurhythmic departments will present in the auditorium the operetta, "Egyptian Princess."

It will be interesting to all federated women to know that their accomplished president, Mrs. Val Taylor, was a student at Montevallo when the association met here some years ago. Mrs. Taylor as Miss Mary Terrell, was one of the most attractive students who has ever attended college. It is whispered that there was some romance connected with her college days. She was within one year of graduation, but Val Taylor, one of the most persuasive talker and ardent lovers among men, thought a whole year was too long to wait for a college diploma. Whereupon, he redoubled his energies and gentle lover's knee exercises, with the result that the beautiful Miss Terrell became the charming Mrs. Taylor before the opening of the next session. Now she returns to preside over the largest and most intellectual body of women in the state. The students are quite enthusiastic about her coming.

For the first time in the history of the college its Glee Club will make a visit to other colleges. On March 21, a concert will be given at Howard College and another the next day at the University of Alabama, under the auspices of their respective glee clubs. There are twenty-eight trained voices in the club and four instrumental assistants, and a most creditable program has been arranged. While there will be several humorous and popular songs, nothing of the rag or jazz order will be given. They are directed by Frank E. Marsh, Jr., head of the music school. All the members of the club, as well as all assistants, except the piano accompanist, are regular college students. Mrs. Palmer and Mrs. Marsh will accompany the club to both institutions.

Mrs. Guy L. Chamberlin will spend the week in Tuscaloosa with friends and will attend the concert. This is Mrs. Chamberlin's first visit to Tuscaloosa. She is an accomplished musician, having studied under the leading masters in America and Europe. She spent some time on the Canal Zone with her uncle, General W. L. Sibert, who is one of the most distinguished graduates of the University of Alabama.

A new custom has been established for Sunday dinners at the college by the presentation of excellent music by representatives of the music school. On last Sunday, Miss Mildred Vause, head of the violin department, played in a most artistic and effective manner, "Humoresque" by Devorak, and "The Swan" by Saen-Saens. Miss Janice Fuquay a member of the senior music class was accompanist. All who were present at the meal were delighted with this innovation and are happy to know this will be continued in the future.

A. and send 2-cent stamp for reply. Any teacher not yet enrolled in the A. E. A. may do so by sending $1.50 with the request for identification slip.

Culture Club Meets With Mrs. Duran

One of the most delightful meetings of the season was held Thursday afternoon of last week with Mrs. Lillie Duran. Vases of beautiful carnations and jonquils adorned the living and dining room. The nominating committee that was appointed at the business meeting that was held with Mrs. Lightcap, reported Mrs. J. T. Leeper, President for the coming year Mrs. D. S. Lightcap, vice-president Mrs. Frank Norris, secretary and treasurer, Mrs. L. B. Riddle, reporter.

After playing Six Hundred, delicious refreshments were enjoyed. Mrs. Riddle was awarded the club book. The next meeting will be announced later. Reporter.

"Charm School' Pleases Large Audience

Those taking part in the play were Lance Hubbard, Wilton, Newbern Vandiver, Montevallo; Grady Garner, Montevallo; Aubrey White, Montevallo; Milton Jeter, Montevallo Eunice Chism, Montevallo; Bobby Lipscombe, Demopolis; Sara Head, Montevallo; Virginia Cameron, Birmingham; Mae Nabors, Helena; Mabel McElroy, Woodstock; Margaret Reaves, Montevallo; Aimee Jack, Greensboro; Dorothy Baer, Calera; Charlotte Hilton, Birmingham; Susan Mabry, Birmingham; Lucile Martin, Dothan.

SHELBY COUNTY REPORTER

Subscription $1.50 a Year. COLUMBIANA, ALABAMA, MARCH 27. 1924 Vol. No. 81 No 11.

THIS PAPER TO AWARD $2,500.00 IN PRIZES IN BIG CIRCULATION DRIVE---TWO AUTOS HEAD THE LIST

Thousands of Dollars in Awards Given Away May 10, to Energetic Hustlers in This Community. Campaign Open to All. Costs Nothing to Try. Big Drive Starts Immediately. Nominate Yourself or Some Ambitious Person You Want to Win. Do It Today.

The largest circulation campaign ever attempted by a county newspaper in Alabama, or anywhere else that we know of, will be staged by the Shelby County Reporter. In this issue appears a comprehensive description of this monster Automobile and Premium Campaign, with rules, regulations and full information.

We propose to put the Shelby County Reporter in every home in this vicinity.

We are out for 2,500 subscribers for the Reporter. Are you with us While the Reporter already enjoys a large circulation its scope of usefulness can be greatly increased with a larger subscription list.

With this end in view, we have planned and today announce a big subscription campaign in which a fine, new luxurious Four-door Ford Sedan, worth $800.00, heads the list, and will be given as first prize.

Our slogan, EVERYBODY WINS, is one of the big features to be considered in this campaign. There will be no losers in the race, as ten per cent commission will be paid to all active non- prize winners.

This is not a something for nothing" scheme; in fact it is no scheme at all, neither is it a charitable undertaking on the part of this newspaper. It is a business proposition, pure and simple. Its object is to secure 2,500 fully paid up subscribers to the Reporter in the shortest time possible, and last, but not least, to win for this newspaper a welcome in every home in this whole trading territory, and give the ambitious a chance of a lifetime to reap a rich reward.

WILL IT PAY?

Will it pay? That is the question that will naturally arise to all who read this announcement. Yes, it will pay. Not so much, perhaps, in dollars and cents right at the present moment, but all dividends earned by this newspaper are not figured on a financial basis. During this campaign thousands of subscribers will be added to our list which will mean an immediate enhancement to the potency of the paper as an advertising medium—the principal source of revenue. A large number of hustlers will be happier and richer in purse as the result and there will be great satisfaction in all that, because the general good engendered and prestige gained by the Shelby County Reporter will be almost inestimable.

SHORT AND SNAPPY AFFAIR.

The campaign will not be a long drawn out affair, but will extend over a period of six short weeks. Think of what you are able to secure in this length of time. Prizes that would ordinarily require months, even years, of self-denial, to acquire, and here they are offered to you for spare time and interest during the next few weeks, in helping the Reporter to extend its sphere of usefulness for the benefit of the community. The campaign is something entirely new for this paper and this section and will be far-reaching in its influence. The prizes are not only rich in material value but are in keeping with the broad and liberal lines along which the enterprise has been drawn. Ambition and energy are the only requisites for success. Six short weeks and you may be riding in your own car or be the proud possessor of one of the other valuable prizes.

INFORMATION AND ASSISTANCE

In order to give every one who enters this campaign the greatest possible assistance, the Reporter has secured the services of B. O. Bowers, of the Bird Syndicate, of Madison, Wis., who is thoroughly experienced in this line of work, and who will give his entire time and attention to those who desire to participate. Come in and see him personally and secure first-hand information how to go about winning one of the prizes. Or, if you can't call, clip the "Nomination Blank" appearing in the big announcement on pages 4 and 5 of this issue, and mail to the campaign department of the Shelby County Reporter. The manager of the campaign will gladly see that you are informed of the entire plan.

SALESMANSHIP ABILITY WILL COUNT

"Salesmanship" is the biggest word in the dictionary today. We are all natural-born salesmen—some better than others, of course and it will depend upon the ability of the participants to know the knack of selling "things" as to just what prize they will win. For this reason we are going to call our campaign a "Salesmanship Club Campaign" and we promise to develop some real salesmen and saleswomen of those who enter the contest, the value of the salesmanship experience will be of untold value to them in years to come.

Every day people of this county come into the Reporter office to subscribe for the paper. It is getting more popular every day. The whole county wants it, and is waiting for you to just enter your name in the campaign and start out and see your friends and have them subscribe through you. It's going to be easy—just get in touch with your friends and see how interested they will be in helping you to be a winner. Go to the phone now and call the manager, and then call your friends and ask them to save their subscription and FREE VOTE coupons in the paper every week for you. Get the vote-getting fever and nothing can stop you from being a winner.

FAIRNESS INSURED ALL

To doubly insure fairness an Advisory Board of prominent citizens has been appointed and their names appear in the advertisement today. The campaign will be brought to a close with a sealed ballot box placed in a local bank. Not one, not even the campaign manager, can possibly know how many votes any club member has secured, thus absolutely precluding any possibility of unfairness or partiality. We ask you to glance over the list of names, and you will see that we have secured the best people that we could for the purpose of acting as judges. The Salesmanship club campaign will be on a high plane of business efficiency from start to finish. It cannot be compared to the ordinary campaign which some papers "try" out.

There are going to be enough prizes for all. There can't be too many entrants. We want one, two or several from each section of this county. There are prizes and commissions enough for 25 to 100 participants.

Boost this whole community and entire trade territory by nominating yourself, your daughter, your son, your wife or friend as a candidate, and start the ball rolling with your own subscription for one or more years.

Prizes will be given on May 10 Only six weeks.

LET'S GO! DO IT TODAY!

DON'T PUT IT OFF

PUT IT OVER.

Coker-Zuiderhoek Wedding

On last Tuesday evening Miss Alma Coker and Mr. Percy Zuider hoek were quietly married at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Fulton in Inglenook, Rev. J. P. Cotton performing the marriage ceremony

The bride never looked more lovely; she wore a suit of grey with accessories to match Her bouquet was bride s roses. Only the family and immediate friends witnessed the ceremony.

Miss Coker is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Coker of near Calera; Mr. Zuiderhoek's home is at Siiuria.

After receiving the congratulations of friends the happy couple left for a short wedding trip after which they will be at home at West End, Birmingham.

We wish for them a happy and prosperous life.

Special Program

A special program is being prepared for the Epworth League of Columbiana for Sunday, April 6th. Every member of the League is urged to be present. A big surprise awaits you; you can't afford to miss this meeting.

SILURIA REVIVAL CLOSED SUNDAY

The revival closed at the Methodist church Sunday night. Rev. R. M. Phifer was forced to go home because of an infected hand. Rev. Finley, pastor of Baptist church, preached at the Methodist church Sunday morning and Brother Phifer was to preach to the women at 3 o'clock in the afternoon and Bro Finley was to preach to the men at the community house at the same time. After Brother Phifer went home Saturday, Mr. Finley talked to both congregations at the community house. His subject was "Money," at the morning service, his subject was "Pure and Undefiled Religion."

The men's class of the Methodist church were fortunate in having Dr. Tyler of Helena as their teacher Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Strowd were week end visitors to Birmingham.

Cecil Cooper who was operated on for appendicitis in town last week, is much better and will come home last of the week.

C. C. Clark, of LaFayette, Ga., died Tuesday and was buried in that city. Ben Kremer attended the funeral. Mr. Clark was a former resident of Siluria, being connected with the Mill.

We are blessed with a street carnival this week. One good thing about this show, they are far enough out of town that they will not leave so much trash on the streets.

Saturday was such a fine day that several of the ball boys took advantage of the clear weather and warm sunshine and put in several hours of practice. The Mill expects to have a strong club made from the employes with no ringers nor hired players on the team.

Mr. and Mrs. Max Caton spent a few days in Bon Air with relatives this week.

G. W. Turnipseed, superintendent of Buck Creek Mills, was a visitor to Troy for the week end.

Messrs. Will Cooper, Fred Bryant and H. G. Steely went to Birmingham Thursday night to see Cecil Cooper, who underwent an operation for appendicitis at the Baptist hospital Wednesday. Cecil was resting very well, really better than was expected, considering his condition when he was sent to the hospital.

Quite a number of the mill operatives have taken small pox vaccination, a few cases of the disease in Taylor's camp near here scared some of them. From last reports from the camp no new cases have developed.

Len Walker was a visitor to Birmingham last Monday. We understand that Len wants to be a Shriner very much, and the trip to town with Robert Roy left him none the better after his initiation. It seems that something happened that night that made him physically unfit to lie down on a bed and he was aiso unable to sit down. As a consequence, Bob came home by himself that night and Len came in on the train next morning, claiming that a headache bothered him the night before. It is a little strange that a man with a headache is so affected in this strange way that he can't sit down.

The Buck Creek Theatre cancelled its shows during the week in order that the employees might attend the meeting at the Methodist church. The regular show was given on Saturday night.

J. W. McGiboney, the popular carrier for Route 1, Columbiana, had a narrow escape from serious injury one day last week when a part at the front of his carrier's wago broke, throwing him to the ground Though he sustained several painful injuries on his head and arm. Mr. McGiboiey borrowed a horse and buggy and finished his round.

AND LAST, BUT NOT LEAST, A bag of gold, containing $500.00, has been set aside to be liberally divided among the contestants in this campaign who not not win one of the ten prizes. You can have just as big a share of this $500.00 in gold as you want, by showing a little bit of pep, push and perseverance for the next six weeks.

Now could a more liberal offer be made by anybody? We don't want anyone to join who is not a friend of the paper, and who will not like the work and appreciate our efforts to give this community a paper which will not be equalled anywhere. So get back of this offer if you have the community spirit and put it over big.

Our Circulation Campaign.

The Shelby County Reporter this week carries the announncement of a big circulation campaign to start at once. This is the first campaign of its kind ever conducted in this immediate section.

We feel, however, that the campaign is timely and entirely in order because of the growing demand for this paper and the need for a real live county paper. The splendid support that has been given the Reporter since its first publication here causes us to feel enthusiastic about the outcome of the campaign. Everybody will benefit by it alike—the prize winners the advertisers and the management of the paper and campaign, and last but not least, the big list of readers.

The Reporter was fortunate to secure the service of Mr. B. O. Bowers, representing The Bird Syndicate, of Madison, Wisconsin, as manager of the campaign. Mr. Bowers comes to us highly recommended, and with a record in former campaigns as being highly efficient and capable, and was highly praised by contestants who worked with him in other campaigns—all contestants endorsing his honesty and impartiality. He is at the service of everybody interested in the campaign and will remain in Columbiana until the closng day, May 10. He can be found at the Reporter office at any time and will be glad to explain fully the details of the campaign without any obligation on the part of anyone. Telephone 55 for him, or address Campaign Manager, Shelby County Reporter, Box 22, Columbiana, Ala., and get an early start toward winning one of the fine automobiles.

Another word might be said for the company promoting this campaign. The Bird, Syndicate is one of the oldest and most reliable campaign organizations in America. Thirty years of service to the newspaper trade has builded this reliable company until it is now one of the leading and most progressive newspaper organizations anywhere, doing more business than all the others combined.

The Reporter asks the goodwill and support of the people in this county during this campaign, and in return it promises to give the people one of the best weekly papers anywhere in the south.

—O—

Mr. Cowart Suggests Poultry Show.—

Z. S. Cowart of the People's Drug Company, Calera, offers a suggestion that ought to receive careful consideration. He proposes that a Shelby County Poultry Show be held at some time during the coming fall. Mr. Cowart believes that even our own people will be surprised at the rapid progress that is being made in developing this important industry.

—O—

Plant More Food and Feed Crops

(By A. A. Lauderdale, County Agent.)

There is at present a great shortage of food and feed crops, and are we going to make the same mistake another year? This is planting time, and just the time to make preparation to take care of the demands along this line.

Can you produce cotton under present conditions, and buy corn, oats, hay and meat? In 1923, we produced in Shelby county 560,000bushels of corn. To allow 75 bushels of corn per horse and mule, 15 bushels per hog, would make the demand for animals, alone, 678,000 bushels, giving a shortage of 118,400 bushels of corn. What about the bread, chicken feed, etc.

In 1923, we produced 9,000 tons of hay; allowing 10 pounds per day for each horse and mule, 10 pounds for each cow for 4 months, would require 15,537 tons, leaving a shortage of over 6,000 tons of hay. There is a similar shortage of oats, meat and other food and feed stuff.

The outlook for dairying in Shelby county is good, but we cannot make a profit in the dairy business and buy feeds from the West.

With seasonable conditions uncertain, and boll weevil ravages very certain can you raise cotton at any price, and buy the feeds mentioned above?

I want to take this opportunity to urge you to plant ample crops for food and feed, and then plant as much cotton as you can fertilize properly, cultivate rapidly, and protect against the boll weevil.

Farm Levels Should Be Returned

The farm levels that have been purchased for use of the farmers in the county have been in great demand. These levels were purchased to give service to as many farmers as possible. We would like to ask that when you borrow the level you return same as promptly as possible as there are numbers of others waiting on you. We are glad to see so many pepole taking advantage of this opportunity, and are sure the farmers appreciate the co-operation of the banks and individuals in placing these farm levels at their service. As there is only a limited time left to build terraces this season, we hope a large number will have an opportunity to use the levels.

A. A. Lauderdale,

Some Prejudices of Ignorance Yet to Be Overcome

From their earliest history, the railroads of this country have been hampered in their development by the prejudices of the uninformed. It is recorded that in 1828 the school board of Lancaster, Ohio, refused to permit the schoolhouse to be used for a discussion as to whether railroads and telegraphs were practical.

"You are welcome to use the schoolhouse to debate all proper questions in, but such things as railroads and telegraphs are impossibilities and rank infidelity. There is nothing in the Word of God about them. If God had designed that his intelligent creatures should travel at the frightful speed of fifteen miles an hour, by steam, He would have clearly foretold it through His holy prophets. It is a device of Satan to lead immortal souls down to Hell."

It is further recorded that the citizens of Frederick, Maryland, actually organized a fund of $10,000 to pay a railroad to keep out of their town.

In spite of such foolish, religious hysteria, superstition and prejudice, this country now enjoys the finest railroad transportation system on the face of the globe.

But, there are still those who, thru ignorance of railroad operation and railroad problems, are deeply prejudiced; and who would hamper further the development of the railroads.

Intelligent and right-thinking men and women will not permit their transportation system to be sacrificed on the altar of ignorance and prejudice. Get the facts about the railroad situation.

—11—

"Miss Woodruff," replied the professor earnestly, "he has something that looks toward truth, and something we need. Just how far he will go, just what he will amount to, it is impossible to say. But something must be done for the rural schools—something along the lines he is trying to follow. He is a struggling soul, and he is worth helping. You won't make any mistake if you make the most of Mr. Irwin."

Jim slipped out of a side door and fled. He started home, on foot as he had come. A mile or so out he was overtaken by the colonel, driving briskly along with room in his buggy for Jim.

"Climb in, Jim!" said he. "Dan and Dolly didn't like to see you walk."

"They're looking fine," said Jim.

There is a good deal to say whenever two horse lovers get together. But when Jim had alighted at his own door, the colonel spoke of what had been in his mind all the time.

"I saw Bonner and Haakon and Ez doing some caucusing today," said he. "They expect to elect Bonner to the board again."

"Oh, I suppose so," replied Jim.

"Well, what shall we do about it?" asked the colonel.

Jim was silent. Here was a matter on which he really had no ideas except the broad and general one that truth is mighty and shall prevail—but that the speed of its forward march is problematical.

"I think," said the colonel, "that it's up to us to see that the people have a chance to decide. It's really Bonner against Jim Irwin."

"What you need is a man to take that office away from Bonner."

"Well, I'm free to say I don't know that any one can, but I'm willing to try. I think that in about a week I shall pass the word around that I'd like to serve my country on the school board."

Jim's face lighted up—and then darkened.

"Even then they'd be two to one, Colonel."

"Maybe," replied the colonel, "and maybe not. That would have to be figured on. A cracked log splits easy."

"Anyhow," Jim went on, "what's the use? I shan't be disturbed this year—and after that—what's the use?"

"Why, Jim," said the colonel, "you aren't getting short of breath are you? I thought you good for the mile, and you aren't turning out a quarter horse, are you? I don't know what all it is you want to do, but I don't believe you can do it in nine months, can you?"

"Not in nine years!" replied Jim.

"Well, then, let's plan for ten years," said the colonel. "I ain't going to become a reformer at my time of life as a temporary job. Will you stick if we can swing the thing for you?"

"I will," said Jim, in a manner of a person taking the vows in some solemn initiation.

"All right," said the colonel. "We'll keep quiet and see how many votes we can muster up at the election. How many can you speak for?"

Jim gave himself for a few minutes to thought. It was a new thing to him, this matter of mustering votes—and a thing which he had always looked upon as rather reprehensible. The citizen should go forth with no coercion, no persuasion, no suggestion, and vote his sentiments.

"How many can you round up?" persisted the colonel.

"I think," said Jim, "that I can speak for myself and Old Man Simms!"

The colonel laughed.

"Fine politician!" he repeated. "Fine politician! Well, Jim, you round up yourself and Old Man Simms and I'll see what I can do—I'll see what I can do!"

CHAPTER XIV

A Minor Casts Half a Vote.

March came in like neither a lion nor a lamb, but was scarcely a week old before the wild ducks had begun to score the sky above Bronson's slew looking for open water and badly-harvested cornfields. Wild geese, too, honked from on high as if in wonder that these great prairies on which their forefathers had been wont fearlessly to alight had been changed into a disgusting expanse of farms. Colonel Woodruff's hired man, Pete, stopped Newton Bronson and Raymond Simms as they tramped across the colonel's pasture, gun in hand, trying to make themselves believe that the shooting was good.

"This ain't no country to hunt in," said he. "Did either of you fellows ever have any real duck-shooting?"

"The mountings," said Raymond, "air poor places for ducks."

"Not big enough water," suggested Pete. "Some wood-ducks, I suppose?"

"Along the creeks and rivers, yes, seh," said Raymond, "but nothing to depend on."

"I've never been nowhere," said Newton, "except once to Minnesota—and—and that wasn't in the shooting season."

A year ago Newton would have boasted of having "bummed" his way to Faribault. His hesitant speech was a proof of the embarrassment his new respectability sometimes inflicted upon him.

"I used to shoot ducks for the market at Spirit Lake," said Pete. "I know Fred Gilbert just as well as I know you. But that's all over, now. You've got to go so far now to get decent shooting where the farmers won't drive you off, that it costs nine dollars to send a postcard home."

"I think we'll have fine shooting on the slew in a few days," said Newton.

"Humph!" scoffed Pete. "I give you my word, if I hadn't promised the colonel I'd stay with him another year, I'd take a side-door Pullman for the Sand Hills of Nebraska or the Devil's lake country tomorrow—if I had a gun."

"If it wasn't for a pasel of things that keep me hyeh," said Raymond, "I'd like to go, too."

"The colonel," said Pete, "needs me. He needs me in the election tomorrow. What's the matter of your ol' man, Newt? What for does he vote for that Bonner, and throw down an old neighbor?"

"I can't do anything with him!" exclaimed Newton irritably. "He's all tangled up with Peterson and Bonner."

"Well," said Pete, "if he'd just stay at home it would help some. If he votes for Bonner, it'll be just about a stand-off."

"He never misses a vote!" said Newton despairingly.

"Can't you cripple him some way?" asked Pete jocularly. "Darned funny when a boy o' your age can't control his father's vote! So long!"

"I wish I could vote!" grumbled Newton. "I wish I could! We know a lot more about the school, and Jim Irwin bein' a good teacher than dad does—and we can't vote. Why can't folks vote when they are interested in an election, and know about the issues. It's tyranny that you and I can't vote."

"I reckon," said Raymond, the conservative, "that the old-time people that fixed it thataway knowed best."

"Rats!" sneered Newton, the iconoclast. "Why, Calista knows more about the election of school director than dad knows."

"That don't seem reasonable," protested Raymond. "She's prejudyced, I reckon, in favor of Mr. Jim Irwin."

"Well, dad's prejudiced against him—er, no, he hain't either. He likes Jim. He's just prejudiced against giving up his old notions. No, he hain't neither—I guess he's only

"Heavens! He's Poisoned!"

prejudiced against seeming to give up some old notions he seemed to have once! And the kids in school would be prejudiced right, anyhow!"

"Paw says he'll be on hand prompt," said Raymond. "But he had to be p'swaded right much. Paw's proud—and he can't read."

"Sometimes I think the more people read the less sense they've got," said Newton. "I wish I could tie dad up! I wish I could get snakebit, and make him go for the doctor!"

The boys crossed the ridge to the wooded valley in which nestled the Simms cabin. They found Mrs. Simms greatly exercised in her mind because young McGeehee had been found playing with some blue vitriol used by Raymond in his school work on the treatment of seed potatoes for scab.

"His hands was all blue with it," said she. "Do you reckon, Mr. Newton, that it'll pizen him?"

"Did he swallow any of it?" asked Newton.

"Nah!" said McGeehee scornfully.

Newton reassured Mrs. Simms, and went away pensive. Jim Irwin's methods had already accomplished much in preparing Newton and Raymond for citizenship. He had shown them the fact that voting really has some relation to life. At present, however, the new wine in the old bottles was causing Newton to forget his filial duty, and his respect for his father. He wished he could lock him up in the barn so he couldn't go to the school election. He wished he could become ill—or poisoned with blue vitriol or something—so his father would be obliged to go for a doctor. He wished—well, why couldn't he get sick? Newton mended his pace, and looked happier.

"I'll fix him!" said he to himself.

"What time's the election, Ez?" asked Mrs. Bronson at breakfast.

"I'm goin' at four o'clock," said Ezra. "And I don't want to hear any more from any one"—looking at Newton—"about the election. It's none of the business of the women an' boys."

Newton took this reproof in an unexpectedly submissive spirit. In fact, he exhibited his very best side to the family that morning, like one going on a long journey, or about to be married off, or engaged in some deep dark plot.

"I s'pose you're off trampin' the slews at the sight of a flock of ducks four miles off as usual?" stated Mr. Bronson challengingly.

"I thought," said Newton, "that I'd get a lot of raisin bait ready for the pocket-gophers in the lower meadow. They'll be throwing up their mounds by the first of April."

"Not them," said Mr. Bronson, somewhat mollified, "not before May. Where'd you get the raisin idee?"

"We learned it in school," answered Newton. "Jim had me study a bulletin on the control and eradication of pocket-gophers. You use raisins with strychnine in 'em—and it tells how."

"Some fool notion, I s'pose," said Mr. Bronson, rising. "But go ahead if you're careful about handlin' the strychnine."

Newton spent the time from twelve-thirty to half after two in watching the clock; and twenty minutes to three found him in the woodshed, penknife in hand, a small vial of strychnine crystal before him, a saucer of raisins at his right hand, and another exactly like it, partially filled with gopher bait—raisins into which a minute crystal of strychnine had been inserted on the point of the knife.

At three-thirty Newton went into the house and lay down on the horsehair sofa, saying to his mother that he felt kind o' funny and thought he'd lie down a while. At three-forty he heard his father's voice in the kitchen and knew that his sire was preparing to start for the scene of battle.

A groan issued from Newton's lips—a gruesome groan. But his father's voice from the kitchen door betrayed no agitation. He was scolding the horses as they stood tied to the hitching-post, in tones that showed no knowledge of his son's distressed moans.

"What's the matter?"

It was Newton's little sister who asked the question. Even though regarded as a pure matter of make-believe, such sounds were terrible.

"Oh, sister, sister!" howled Newton, "run and tell 'em that brother's dying!"

Fanny disappeared in a manner which expressed her balanced feelings—she felt that her brother was making believe, but for all that, something awful was the matter. So she went rather slowly to the kitchen door, and casually remarked that Newton was dying on the sofa in the sitting-room.

"You little fraud!" said her father.

"Why, Fanny!" said her mother—and ran into the sitting-room—whence in a moment, with a cry that was almost a scream, she summoned her husband, who responded at the top of his speed.

Newton was groaning and in convulsions. Horrible grimaces contorted his face, his jaws were set, his arms and legs drawn up, and his muscles tense.

"What's the matter?" His father's voice was stern as well as full of anxiety. "What's the matter, boy?"

"Oh!" cried Newton. "Oh! Oh! Oh!"

"Newtie, Newtie!" cried his mother, "where are you in pain? Tell mother, Newtie!"

"Oh," groaned Newtie, relaxing, "I feel awful!"

"What you been eating?" interrogated his father.

"Nothing," replied Newton.

"I saw you eatin' dinner," said his father.

Again Newton was convulsed by strong spasms, and again his groans filled the hearts of his parents with terror.

"That's all I've eaten," said he when his spasms had passed, "except a few raisins. I was putting strychnine in 'em—"

"Oh, heavens!" cried his mother. "He's poisoned! Drive for the doctor, Ezra! Drive!"

Mr. Bronson forgot all about the election—forgot everything save antidotes and speed. He leaped toward the door. As he passed out, he shouted, "Give him an emetic!" He tore the hitching straps from the posts, jumped into the buggy, gave the spirited horses their heads, and fled toward town. Just at the town limits, he met the doctor in Sheriff Dilly's automobile, the sheriff himself at the steering wheel. Mr. Bronson signaled them to stop, ignoring the fact that they were making similar signs to him.

"We're just starting for your place," said the doctor. "Your wife got me on the phone."

"Thank God!" replied Bronson. "Don't fool any time away on me. Drive!"

"Get in here, Ez," said the sheriff. "Doc knows how to drive, and I'll come on with your team. They need a slow drive to cool 'em off."

"Why didn't you phone me?" asked the doctor.

Silenced.

A newly-married couple were entertaining their friends, and amongst the guests was one whose continued rudeness made him objectionable to the rest of the company. His conduct, although almost unbearable, was tolerated for some time, until at supper he held up on his fork a piece of white meat which had been served to him, and in a vein of intended humor remarked, "Is this pig?"

"To which end of the fork do you refer?" asked a quiet-looking man sitting at the other end of the table.

Why Men Wear Silk

We hear much about vanity in the well-known feminine sex, but there seems to be no limit of idiocy to which men folk will go in their effort to extend their personalities, as the new psychologist might put it, by means of costly garb. Shirts at $50 each in certain establishments have become too commonplace to elevate a single eyebrow. Perhaps the only reason men do not dress more gaudily than women is because they lack the courage of their desires and are too vain to admit their own sartorial weaknesses.—Nation's Business.

JOYS OF MOTHERHOOD

Often Prevented by Female Trouble

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound brings Joy to Homes by Removing Cause of Trouble

Brooklyn, N.Y.,—"I was working after I got married and the young lady who worked next to me asked me if I had any intentions of having a child. I told her I would be the happiest woman on earth if I could become a mother, but I always had terrible cramps, backaches and headaches. She then told me of a woman she knows who took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for the same troubles and it helped her greatly. I took about a half bottle and found that the following month I did not suffer any pain, so I kept on taking it. I have a wonderful baby boy six months old and he is as strong and fat as any one could wish a baby to be. I still take the Vegetable Compound regularly because I have looked fine all the time and felt fine and my mother told me that was the reason. I will be glad to have you publish my testimonial with my name and address."—Mrs. EDWARD WERBECK, 1824 Greene Avenue, Brooklyn, N.Y.

Free From Old Trouble

Auburn, Maine.—"I suffered with inward weakness for ten years and had doctored all this long time but never got any help. One day I saw my sister and she told me of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I went and got me a bottle of it. I took two bottles and a half and I was just as free from my old troubles as I could be. I had only one child and I was afraid that I could never have any more, for I had been told that I never could have a living child for I was not strong enough to carry one. But they were mistaken and I had a nice baby boy and now I have five children. I can't praise your medicine enough. My youngest sister has taken it, too, and praises it."—Mrs. G. L. WISWELL, 43 Mechanics Row, Auburn, Maine.

These cases are similar to many others reported to us. It is well for women to carefully consider such statements and to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial. It may bring great joy to your home.

Over 100,000 women have so far replied to our question, "Have you received benefit from taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?"

98 per cent of these replies are "Yes."

That means that 98 out of every 100 women who take this medicine for the ailments for which it is recommended are benefited by it.

This goes to prove that a medicine specialized for certain definite ailments—not a cure-all—can and does do good work. For fifty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been a medicine for women.

Era of Good Feeling

In American political history the two administrations of President Monroe, up to the time of the campaign for his successor, 1817-1824, was known as the era of good feeling. There were practically no issues and but one party, Monroe being unanimously re-elected in 1820 except for the personal whim of one elector.

Have you up to this time filled out and sent in that little blank which may mean the difference betwen "shoe-leather traveling" or "travel de luxe" in your motor car?

This blank referred to is the Nomination Blank which appears to the left, and which when clipped, filled out and sent to the Campaign Department, will enter you in the race with 5,000 free votes to your credit.

This is the time when the greatest advantage accrues to an entry, for if one will enlist in the campaign during this period they will be able to start out on an equal footing with every other candidate in the race.

The competition for the prizes starts at once and prospective candidates are earnestly urged to get their names into the list of entries with the least possible delay. For a day at this stage of the campaign is just as fraught with opportunity as a day at the close of the race. In fact the opportunities are probably greater now than they will be later, for it is inevitable that many of the friends of one candidate should also be the friends of another of the many candidates, and the first one who approaches them is the one who will get their support; and it is the readiness of friends to back a candidate which means so much to their success.

Experience as Nurse Causes Mrs. Fleming to Endorse Tanlac

Practical Nurse for 16 Years Tells of Recovery Thanks to Tanlac — Recommends It to Patients.

"I would never have believed any medicine on earth could help me like Tanlac did," is the precise statement of Mrs. Celia Fleming, 1015 Addison St., Berkeley, Calif., a practical nurse of sixteen years' experience.

"In 1904 a serious operation weakened my system so I never saw a real well day until I took Tanlac three years ago. I never seemed to be hungry, my stomach was so disordered I could scarcely retain a thing I ate, and I lost weight till I was almost a shadow. I was very anemic, and shattered nerves and sleepless nights contributed even more to my already miserable state.

"Tanlac built up my appetite and digestion wonderfully, and every single ailment went away. Then, with returning strength came a 32-pound increase in weight, and from that day three years ago my health has been splendid. I recommend Tanlac to many of my patients, for it is indeed a remarkable medicine."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Over 40 million bottles sold. Accept no substitutes.

A Wonderful Discovery

The remarkable herb "HOBO" as analyzed by "Schwartz" was found to contain, besides other principles, a variety of acid which he named Galitannic acid. He also found it to contain a peculiar acid discovered by Schwartz and Rochleder and named Ribichloric acid. This has been used in Dropsy congestion of the spleen, Scrofula and Leprosy with good results. In recent years this herb has been discovered growing in East Texas and Louisiana and further experiment has shown that its wonderfully purifying properties were due to its action on the kidneys.

The Hobo Medicine Company of Beaumont, Texas, make an effective balm from this herb and call it Hobo Kidney and Bladder Remedy, this balm being said to be a Diuretic Aperient and Anti-Scorbutic.

Machiavelli

Machiavelli was an Italian statesman, historian and man of letters (1469-1527). It is said the object of his book, "The Prince," is to show that all is fair in diplomacy. The term "Machiavellism" has come to mean political cunning and duplicity, the art of tricking and overreaching by diplomacy.

Guard Against "Flu" With Musterole

Influenza, Grippe and Pneumonia usually start with a cold. The moment you get those warning aches, get busy with good old Musterole.

Musterole is a counter-irritant that relieves congestion (which is what a cold really is) and stimulates circulation.

It has all the good qualities of the old-fashioned mustard plaster without the blister.

Just rub it on with your finger-tips. First you will feel a warm tingle as the healing ointment penetrates the pores, then a soothing, cooling sensation and quick relief.

Have Musterole handy for emergency use. It may prevent serious illness.

THAT LITTLE COLD MAY START A BIG TROUBLE

Stop It Now With Cheney's Expectorant and Save Needless Suffering.

That little cold you took yesterday may seem a small matter to you now; but if you don't do something to check it and get it out of your system there's no telling how it will end. Many a severe, if not fatal, case of pneumonia or tuberculosis began in just the same way.

How foolish then to take any sort of risk by neglecting that cold till it fastens itself on your vitals, and becomes so deep-seated that nothing but the most severe treatment will serve to get you back to health.

You can stop it now with Cheney's Expectorant. A dose every few hours will knock it right out and end the trouble almost before it has begun. It expels the germs from your system and you feel fresher and stronger and better.

Three generations of people have been brought up on Cheney's Expectorant and have an abiding faith in its efficiency because they know what it will do.

At the Place of Wailing

The "Place of Wailing" is a small quadrangular area near the mosque of Omar in Jerusalem, inclosed by ordinary dwellings on the west and by the ancient wall of Haram on the east.

This wall, consisting of several courses of huge stones, is believed by the Jews to be a portion of the court of Solomon's temple, and the only part of that structure now remaining.

For centuries the descendants of Abraham have repaired to this spot to mourn over the calamities that have befallen Israel, and to pray for the coming of the Messiah. In former years they were forced to pay a large sum for this melancholy privilege.—Detroit News.

"SURE AM GLAD I TRIED CARDUI"

Louisiana Lady Says That She Was in a Condition of Serious Debility, But Now Feels Good as Ever.

Shreveport, La.—Mrs. William Ranft, of 303 Baker St., this city, says she never known what ill health was until last year. Then she began having smothering spells.

"I would awake in the morning," relates Mrs. Ranft, "feeling weak and just no account. I couldn't get up and stir about like I had always done. I was nervous, too, for I didn't mind to stand the shortness of breath but would try to do my work but would have to sit or lie down."

Mr. Ranft then took matters into his own hands and, on the suggestion of his druggist, brought home a bottle of Cardui for his wife.

"After taking one bottle," continues Mrs. Ranft, "I felt stronger. By the morning my husband would say, 'Take your medicine.' I did, and after my second bottle I felt good as ever. I know Cardui did me worlds of good and I sure am glad I tried it."

Mrs. Ranft found, as have many other women, that Cardui, with its gentle, building-up, tonic qualities was just what she needed to put her on her feet again. Cardui is purely vegetable, mild and harmless.

Cardui may be bought at any druggist's. Get a bottle today.

Sunday school at this place was well attended Sunday.

W. R. Gardner, who has been sick for sometime is slowly improving.

Mrs. J. M. Spearman has been ill for the past week.

T. A. Blackerby and W. I. Fancher are repairing the bridge across Muddy Creek, near the Strother crossing.

Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Rasco has been very sick the past week. We hope for them a speedy recovery.

We noticed in last week's Reporter that Mr. D. Gardner had subscribed for the Reporter. It will be remembered that Mr. Gardner was tried in the spring term of Judge Spearman's Court, for breach of promise. It was only a mock trial, but the girl's say it sure bluffed him.

The farmers in this section will be badly behind with their work when Spring comes.

J. W. Shaw transacted business in Chelsea Monday.

Rev. W. G. McDaniel will preach at this place next Sunday.

Dr. McDaniel is president of the Methodist Protestant annual conference of Alabama.

W. R. Gardner went to Vincent Sunday.

D. Cornbrun the man that purchased the Oden and Elliott land had a car load of cattle shipped to Westover this week. We learn that the cattle were shipped from Tennessee. I don't see why Alabama or even Shelby county couldn't raise cattle for the market when the quarantine is lifted. Let's comply with the law and get through with this expensive and unpleasant task of dipping cows this year if possible. The state men say we can do this if we will only comply with the law and co-operate with them in the work.

Wilsonville Pastor Gives Strong Sermon

Wilsonville, Alabama, Mch. 24.—The pastor of the Wilsonville Baptist church preached the first of a series of sermons on "The Christian Life," at the morning service last Sunday.

The subject of his sermon was, "How Christians Grieve the Spirit."

Christians grieve the Spirit by neglecting public worship. By turning their backs upon the Sunday church services. When we go to a consecrated public service we should expect to find there a rich blessing, different from all the other blessings. It is hard work for a live coal to keep warm and remain a live coal outside the grate. It is hard work for a warm-hearted Christian to remain a spiritual "live coal" unless he continually lives in close contact with other Christians.

Jesus found it necessary, during his earthly life, to go to Jerusalem to attend the feasts, and again and again go into the synagogues to worship and pray. If it was necessary for Jesus it is for us.

And then again the Christian grieves the Spirit by neglecting secret prayer. By neglecting to have a place where he can meet God and talk over his plans, and hopes and joys and sorrows and problems. It is necessary for a true Christian to have a place where he can pray in private There are times when God wants us to be alone with Him. He wants us to come to Him with the faith of a little child. We grow in Christian character and Christian usefulness by keeping in touch with God through prayer.

Another way that the Christian grieves the Spirit is by neglecting God's Word. How are you going to find out God's will and God's plan of salvation unless you read His Word? Paul said to Timothy: "Preach the Word." I want to say to you, "Study the Word." Study it in the Sunday school, in the church and in the home. Read the Bible every day of your life. Read it because God commands you to read it. Read it because your deeper spiritual life depends on your reading it. Study it and continue to study it because when you read and study the Bible, God is talking to you, as when you pray you are talking to God.

And still another way that the Christian grieves the Spirit is by neglecting the family altar. The husband and father of the home hurriedly arises in the morning, eats his breakfast and rushes off to work. The wife and mother of the home gets busy about household duties. The children are not gathered about for family worship. Sometimes not even a blessing is offered at the morning meal. We must, if we would live right, not only consecrate our own lives to Christ, but pray to God with our children and for our children that they may consecrate their lives to the Master.

And the Christian may grieve the Spirit by going to places where he ought not to go. And saying things that he ought not to say, and doing things that he ought not to do and in many other ways.

Our Junior Bible Class of our Sunday school is on a boom. The young people are taking a great deal of interest in their class work. The class is growing. The young people are out after every young man and young lady in town to go to Sunday school. If you live within two or three miles of Wilsonville you had better get ready to go to Sunday school. Get up early Sunday morning and put on your best 'duds" and be ready for the committee when they call for you.

BIG CIRCULATION CAMPAIGN GAINING MOMENTUM

VERYBODY WINS, BUT BIGGEST PRIZE GOES TO HARDEST WORKER—$150 WEEK FOR WORK

ST OF CANDIDATES WILL BE PUBLISHED IN PAPER NEXT THURSDAY—MANY BEING NOMINATED EVERY DAY—CREDITS MUCH HIGHER DURING NEXT TWO AND A HALF WEEKS.

EAD THE $20.00 EXTRA GOLD PRIZE OFFER ELSEWHERE ON THIS PAGE—THEN WORK FAST

RIZES AND CASH CAMMISSIONS TOTALING APPROXIMATELY $2,700.00 WILL BE DISTRIBUTED MAY 10, TO CANDIDATES—NEW MEMBERS HAVE FINE CHANCE TO WIN AS CAMPAIGN IS JUST OPENING.

With candidates being nominated every day for the Shelby County Reporter's Salesmanhip Club Campaign, the event that has caused so much talk and speculation as to who will be first at the conclusion of the race May 10th. got away to a good start the first week.

In connection with the Salesmanship Club Campaign there are two things the management of the Reporter wishes to lay stress upon.

The first is that there are still several communities and towns in this and surrounding counties where no person has yet announced their candidacy from, and that there is still opportunity for energetic persons to get into the contest and win. Even the earliest starters are just beginning. The second fact is that the credits positively will depreciate in the two periods following. We want it clearly understood that there will be no time when bigger credits will be given than now. Also that the extra $20.00 gold cash offer we are making for the next two week only, will be the last chance to doubly benefit by your work in securing subscriptions to this paper. It would be manifestly unfair to the club member who gets out and hustles early in the game for the management to allow more credits later. Early workers are assured that credits at no future time will be as great as during the first period (first three weeks) of the contest.

One week is almost gone. The next two weeks will truly be filled with golden moments for the hustlers, for the biggest winner in the campaign will receive a prize that represents more than $150.00 a week for the entire six weeks of the campaign, while winner of the second prize will get a return of more than $70 for each of the 6 weeks.

Everyone will receive a prize or fair compensation for his or her work.

USE NOMINATION BLANK ELSEWHERE ON THIS PAGE AND ENTER YOURSELF OR FRIEND TODAY.

SUBSCRIBERS, IMPORTANT!

People subscribing for the Reporter from contestants during the circulation campaign are requested to please preserve the receipts given them by candidates, as this will be the only way of adjusting the term of subscription in case of error on the Reporter's part.

S. A. Walton of Birmingham, was over Sunday to visit frineds and relatives.

J. W. Shaw, member of the board of revenue, was a visitor in Columbiana Monday.

ANNOUNCEMENT, EXTRAORDINARY!

$20.00 in Gold Additional

Today the Shelby County Reporter announces an additional Gold Cash Prize to be awarded to the candidate securing the greatest number of "points" in subscriptions during the remainder of the "first period" of the Reporter's Great $2,700.00 Prize and Commission Campaign. The first period closes Saturday night, April 19, at 10 o'clock. All subscriptions turned in from 8 o'clock today (Thursday) until the remainder of the first period, counts for points according to the schedule appearing on this page.

This offer becomes effective at 8 o'clock Thursday morning, April 3rd. Every subscription secured on this special extra gold cash prize offer, also counts for votes and applies toward the winning of the other ten regular prizes, and ten per cent commissions. Subscriptions turned in up to 10 o'clock Saturday night, April 19th, really have a double prize value. You have a chance at the $20.00 gold piece and the two automobiles, as well as the rest of the prizes.

NOTE—An entirely new candidate will have this same and equal opportunity to enter today and compete for this extra prize offer. It is an unparalleled opportunity for any candidate now entered as well as those who start today. Any candidate, entered or prospective, can win this special prize offer, for a few days' effort. This is another opportunity staring you in the face. Will you reach out and grasp it?

HOW THE $20.00 WILL BE AWARDED

The winner of this $20.00 gold extra offer will be presented with same Monday morning, April 21st.

To any candidate in the Shelby County Reporter's Greater Circulation Campaign turning in the greatest number of points in subscriptions to the Reporter during the remainder of the first period, which is now in progress, and closes April 19th, at 10 o'clock, will be given this bright new $20.00 gold piece. Points on subscriptions turned in this "first period" will be given as follows:

Each 1-year Subscription	1 Point
Each 2-year Subscription	10 points
Each 3-year Subscription	50 Points
Each 4-year Subscription	200 Points
Each 5-year Subscription	5,000 Points

Regular votes to apply on larger prizes to be credited as usual. This offer is extra and separate from the big list first announced, and does not affect it at all, except that the more work you do toward winning the $20.00 gold piece the more votes automatically piles up toward winning the $800.00 Ford Sedan, so you see subscriptions secured during the remainder of the first period really have a double prize value. Only subscriptions turned in during the remainder of the first period—from 8 a. m. April 3rd, to 10 p. m. April 19th, counts points toward winning the $20.00 gold piece.

As mentioned before new candidates have the same chance of winning as those already entered. If you have been thinking of entering this campaign, do it now. Never again will you have such a two-fold opportunity of making real money in just your spare time.

NOTE—This offer is entirely extra and separate from the $2,700.00 prize list first announced. All Grand Prizes will be awarded May 10th.

EVERYONE STARTS ON AN EQUAL BASIS ON THIS SPECIAL ADDITIONAL CASH PRIZE OFFER. SEND IN YOUR NOMINATION TODAY—BEFORE IT'S TOO LATE.

INTENSE INTEREST ALL OVER SHELBY COUNTY

COLUMBIANA TO HAVE AN EXCHANGE CLUB

Business and professional men of Columbiana are organizing an Exchange Club. A number of those interested met at Roper's Cafe Friday night of last week to consider the matter and it was their privilege to have with them C. G. Smith, president, and O. C. Carmichael, secretary of the Montevallo Exchange club, both of whom are enthusiastic Exchangeites.

Mr. Carmichael spoke of the National organization of Exchange clubs and told something of its history and its record of achievement. Mr. Smith spoke of the work of the Montevallo club, organized a little over a year ago, and told in an interesting way of the things that the citizens of Montevallo had accomplished thru this organization for the building of their community.

Following the addresses of Mr. Carmichael and Mr. Smith, it was voted unanimously by those present to organize an Exchange club in Columbiana, and temporary officers were elected. On Saturday a petition bearing 16 names and asking the privilege of organizing was mailed to national headquarters.

ORATORS CONTEST TO BE HELD APRIL 18TH

On Friday, April 18th, representatives of high schools from the Fourth Congressional district of Alabama will meet at Columbiana to engage in an oratorical contest that is part of a nation wide contest carried on under the auspices of 250 of the leading newspapers of the country, as a contribution to "Raise the Standard of American Citizenship."

The winner of this contest will receive a gold medal and will go as a representative of the district to compete for the state championship honors in a contest to be held in Birmingham on Friday, April 25th. Three scholarships to leading colleges in Alabama will be given to the winners and the champion will on May 16th go as the representative of Alabama to meet representatives from other Southern states to determine the speaker who will represent the South in a final national meeting at Washington on June 6, wher awards of $3,500, $1,000 and $500 will be given to the winners.

Every oration prepared for the contest will be written about the Constitution of the United States in some way, and will be based on a craeful study of that document. The representative of Shelby County High School in the district contest will be Ezra Crumpton, whose subject is "The Constitution and its Makers. Other schools to be represented are: Marion Junction, Selma High, Dallas County High and Cleburne High.

Sunday Services Were Well Attended

The church services in Columbiana were well attended Sunday. At the morning service a large congregation heard Rev. Wm Neil at the Methodist church. At the evening hour Rev. J. C. Alexander of Bessemer preached to another good congregation at the Baptist church.

Fordson Tractors In Good Demand

The E. M. Jones Auto Company delivered a Fordson tractor to W. H. Shrader this week for use on his farm near Shelby. Last week a Fordson went out to A. J. Harts field and recently an order was filled for the Shelby Iron Company for a Fordson tractor with locomotive attachments.

Booming along on the wings of popularity, and with the stamp of of public approval already placed upon it, it is fast becoming the chief topic of conversation in Columbiana and the great territory surrounding us.

And no wonder! Think of winning a brand new Four-Door Sedan, valued at $800.00; a Ford Touring Car; a $125.00 Columbia Grafonola, or one of the other prizes in exchange for a little of your spare time between now and the close of the campaign, May 10th.

Hundreds of people skimp and save all their lives, and never accumulate an amount equal to the sum that can be earned by getting started in the campaign now and annexing the luxurous Ford Sedan.

CANDIDATES ANNOUNCED NEXT WEEK.

Next week's insue of the Reporter will contain the names of the candidates who have up to that time entered the campaign, or nominated by some friend. Saturday of next week a count will be made at the Reporter office and a standing will be published in the paper every week thereafter. Counts will be twice a week, on Wednesday nights and Saturday nights. The count on Wednesday night will be published in Thursday's paper following, and the Saturday night count will be sent out by bulletin Monday morning to candidates and friends.

TIME IS LIMITED—GET BUSY!

But a little over two weeks in which to secure the maximum number of credits for subscriptions—only TWO WEEKS TO WIN OR LOSE—that is exactly what it means. After April 19th there is a material decrease in the schedule of credits and after May 3rd there is even a greater decline—in fact the schedule is almost cut in half.

Our sincere advice to those who wish to win the beautiful and serviceable first prize, the Ford Sedan, is to hurry every available subscription to Campaign Headquarters NOW, while the BIG VOTES are still in effect. Not to do so means that you are throwing away golden opportunities, opportunities that may bring you the prize Ford Sedan, or the Touring Car. The first count in Salesmanship Club will take place Saturday April 12, at 9 o'clock at Campaign Headquarters. The number of votes polled for each member up till 8 o'clock that evening will be counted.

WHO WILL LEAD

The first announcement of the co-operative strength of the various nominees will create intense interest. Who will top the list? Who will have shown the greatest speed during the opening days? These questions will be answered next week.

NOT TOO LATE—START NOW!

Nominations for membership will be received by the campaign manager all this week and next. We hope to have a very representative list of hustlers, men and women, boys and girls, in this county, who are interested in sharing in the wonderful $2,700.00 prize distribution, by the time the paper is issued next Thursday. Send in your name today or that of a friend. Someone is going to be driving a new $800.00 four-door Ford Sedan, and besides the grand prize, goes a Ford Touring Car and 8 other prizes. Also the special $20.00 gold prize offer to be given at the end of the first period.

NO TIME FOR DOUBT, CANDIDATES

As to where you will stand in the first count will depend entirely upon the amount of votes you gather, and to get votes you must get subscriptions. You may surprise yourself by heading the list of short, but enthusiastic workers next week. See what you can do. Now GO!

HOME FOLKS STRONG FOR JUDGE LYMAN

Montevallo, Alabama, Mar 29—An enthusiastic meeting of the citizens of Montevallo was held in the Wadesomen Theatre March 28, The purpose of the meeting was to organize a Boosters Club" for E. S. Lyman, who is a candidate for judge of the 18th Judicial Circuit.

C. L. Meroney called the meeting to order and appointed R. A. Reid temporary chairman and J. R. Johnson temporary secretary.

Good cheer prevailed throughout the meeting. After many expression of loyalty and friendship for the beloved citizen and candidate, the Judge himself was called upon for a speech.

His remarks constituted the outstanding feeture of the meeting. In his usual modest way, he outlined his reasons for asking for election. He suggested that the people usually justify the appointment of the Governor by electing the appointee to fiill the unexpired term. He was appointed by Governor Brandon at the death of the late Judge Lackey

The meeting adjourned after the appointment of a finance and publicity committee consisting of the president and secretary and the following members: P. J. Kroell, C. T. Acker, O. C. Carmichael.

Pigeons Most Reliable Carriers of Army Orders

From time immemorial pigeons have been used to carry messages, especially in war. In spite of the vast advances in means of communication, feathered messengers still remain one of the most reliable means of bringing word from exposed places, and the United States army has a special training branch of the signal corps.

Some idea of how valuable pigeons are in war may be had when it is realized that the United States signal corps sent 370,000 birds overseas in the recent war and detailed 8,800 men to care for them. Many of the veteran birds—some of them actually battle scarred—are still in service. Down at Fort Vail in New Jersey, not far from New York, four hundred homers are housed and in training for use in an emergency.

"Never thought of it," replied Bronson. "I hain't had the phone only a few years. Drive faster!"

"I want to get there, or I would," answered the doctor. "Don't worry. From what your wife told me over the phone I don't believe the boy's eaten any more strychnine than I have—and probably not so much."

"He was alive, then?"

"Alive and making an argument against taking the emetic," replied the doctor. "But I guess she got it down him."

Thus reassured, Mr. Bronson was calm, even if somewhat tragic in calmness, when he entered the death chamber with the doctor. Newton was sitting up, his eyes wet, and his face pale. His mother had won the argument, and Newton had lost his dinner. Haakon Peterson occupied an arm chair.

"What's all this?" asked the doctor. "How are you feeling, Newt? Any pain?"

"I'm all right," said Newton. "Don't give me any more o' that nasty stuff!"

"No," said the doctor, "but if you don't tell me just what you've been eating, and doing, and pulling off on us, I'll use this"—and the doctor exhibited a huge stomach pump.

"What'll you do with that?" asked Newton faintly.

"I'll put this down into your hold, and unload you, that's what I'll do."

"Is the election over, Mr. Peterson?" asked Newton.

"Yes," answered Mr. Peterson, "and the votes counted."

"Who's elected?" asked Newton.

"Colonel Woodruff," answered Mr. Peterson. "The vote was twelve to eleven."

"Well, dad," said Newton, "I s'pose you'll be sore, but the only way I could see to get in half a vote for Colonel Woodruff was to get poisoned and send you after the doctor. If you'd gone, it would 'a' been a tie, anyhow, and probably you'd 'a' persuaded somebody to change to Bonner. That's what's the matter with me. I killed your vote. Now, you can do whatever you like to me—but I'm sorry I scared mother."

Ezra Bronson seized Newton by the throat, but his fingers failed to close. "Don't pinch, dad," said Newton. "I've been using that neck an' it's tired." Mr. Bronson dropped his hands to his sides, glared at his son for a moment and breathed a sigh of relief.

"Why, you darned infernal little fool," said he. "I've a notion to take a hamestrap to you! If I'd been there the vote would have been eleven to thirteen!"

"There was plenty wotes there for the colonel, if he needed 'em," said Haakon, whose politician's mind was already fully adjusted to the changed conditions. "Ay tank the Woodruff district will have a junanimous school board from dis time on once more. Colonel Woodruff is yust the man we have needed."

"I'm with you there," said Bronson. "And as for you, young man, if one or both of them horses is hurt by the run I give them, I'll lick you within an inch of your life— Here comes Dilly driving 'em now— I guess they're all right. I wouldn't want to drive a good team to death for any young hoodlum like him— All right, how much do I owe you, Doc?"

CHAPTER XV

The Glorious Fourth.

A good deal of water ran under the Woodruff district bridges in the weeks between the school election and the Fourth of July picnic at Eight-Mile grove. But few surface indications there were of any change in the little community in this annual gathering of friends and neighbors. Wilbur Smythe made the annual address, and was in rather finer fettle than usual as he paid his fervid tribute to the starry flag, and to this very place as the most favored spot in the best county of the greatest state in the most powerful, intellectual, freest and most progressive nation in the best possible of worlds.

Jim Irwin read the Declaration rather well, Jennie Woodruff thought, as she sat on the platform between Deacon Avery, the oldest settler in the district, and Mrs. Columbus Brown, the sole local representative of the Daughters of the American Revolution. Colonel Woodruff presided in his Grand Army of the Republic uniform.

The fresh northwest breeze made free with the oaks, elms, hickories and box elders of Eight-Mile grove, and the waters of Pickerel creek glimmered a hundred yards away, beyond the flitting figures of the boys who preferred to shoot off their own firecrackers and torpedoes and nigger-chasers, rather than to listen to those of Wilbur Smythe. Still farther off could be heard the voice of a lone lemonade vender as he advertised ice-cold lemonade, made in the shade, with a brand-new spade, by an old maid, as a guaranty that it was the blamedest, coldest lemonade ever sold.

Under the shadiest trees a few incorrigible Marthas were spreading the snowy table-cloths on which would soon be placed the bountiful repasts stored in ponderous wicker baskets and hampers. It was a lovely day, in a lovely spot—a good example of the miniature forests which grew naturally from time immemorial in favored locations on the Iowa prairies—half a square mile of woodland, all about which the green corn rows stood aslant in the cool breeze, waist-high and laid by.

They were passing down the rough board steps from the platform after the exercises had terminated in a rousing rendition of "America," when Jennie Woodruff, having slipped by everybody else to reach him, tapped Jim Irwin on the arm. He looked back at her over his shoulder with his slow gentle smile.

"Isn't your mother here, Jim?" she asked. "I've been looking all over the crowd and can't see her."

"She isn't here," answered Jim. "I was in hopes that when she broke loose and went to your Christmas dinner she would stay loose—but she went home and settled back into her rut."

"Too bad," said Jennie. "She'd have had a nice time if she had come."

"Yes," said Jim, "I believe she would."

"I want help," said Jennie. "Our hamper is terribly heavy. Please!"

It was rather obvious to Mrs. Bonner that Jennie was throwing herself at Jim's head, but that was an article of the Bonner family creed since the decision which closed the hearing at the court house. It must be admitted that the young county superintendent found tasks which kept the schoolmaster very close to her side.

"Sit down, Jim," said Mrs. Woodruff, "you've earned a bite of what we've got. It's good enough, what there is of it, and there's enough of it, such as it is!"

"I'm Sorry," said Jim, "but I've a Prior Engagement."

"I'm sorry," said Jim, "but I've a prior engagement."

"Why, Jim!" protested Jennie. "I've been counting on you. Don't desert me!"

"I'm awfully sorry," said Jim, "but I promised. I'll see you later."

One might have thought, judging by the colonel's quizzical smile, that he was pleased at Jennie's loss of her former swain.

"We'll have to invite him longer ahead of time," said he. "He's getting to be in demand."

Jim seemed to be in demand—a fact that Jennie confirmed by observation. He received a dozen invitations as he passed the groups seated on the grass—one of them from Mrs. Cornelius Bonner, who saw no particular point in advertising disgruntlement. The children ran to him and clung to his hands; young girls gave him sisterly smiles and such trifles as chicken drumsticks, pieces of cake and like tidbits. His passage to the numerous group at a square table under a big burr oak was quite an ovation—an ovation of the significance of which he was himself quite unaware.

But Jennie—the daughter of a politician and a promising one herself—Jennie sensed the fact that Jim Irwin had won something from the people of the Woodruff district in the way of deference. Still he was the gangling, Lincolnian, ill-dressed, over-stricken Jim Irwin of old, but Jennie had no longer the feeling that one's standing was somewhat compromised by association with him.

He had begun to put on something more significant than clothes, something which he had possessed all the time, but which became valid only as it was publicly apprehended. He was clearly the central figure of his group, in which she recognized the Bronsons those queer children from Tennessee, the Simmses, the Talcotts, the Hansens, the Hamms and Colonel Woodruff's hired man, Pete, whose other name is not recorded.

Jim sat down between Bettina Hansen, a flaxen-haired young Brunhilde of seventeen, and Calista Simms—Jennie saw him do it, while listening to Wilbur Smythe's account of the exacting nature of the big law practice he was building up—and would have been glad to exchange places with Bettina.

The repast drew to a close; and over by the burr oak the crowd had grown to a circle surrounding Jim Irwin.

"He seems to be making an address," said Wilbur Smythe.

"Well, Wilbur," replied the colonel, 'you had the first shot at us. Suppose we move over and see what's under discussion."

As they approached the group, they heard Jim Irwin answering something which Ezra Bronson had said.

"You think so, Ezra," said he, "and it seems reasonable that big creameries like those at Omaha, Sioux City, Des Moines and the other centralizer points can make butter cheaper than we would do here—but we've the figures that show that they aren't economical."

"They can't make good butter, for one thing," said Newton Bronson cockily.

"Why can't they?" asked Olaf Hansen, the father of Bettina.

"Well," said Newton, "they have to have so much cream that they've got to ship it so far that it gets rotten on the way, and they have to renovate it with lime and other ingredients before they can churn it."

"Well," said Raymond Simms, "I reckon they sell their butter fo' all it's wuth; an' they cain't get within from foah to seven cents a pound as much fo' it as the farmers' creameries in Wisconsin and Minnesota get fo' theirs."

"That's a fact, Olaf," said Jim.

"How do you kids know so darned much about it?" queried Pete.

"Huh!" sniffed Bettina. "We've been reading about it, and writing letters about it, and figuring percentages on it in school all winter. We've done arithmetic and geography and grammar and I don't know what else on it."

"Well, I'm agin' any schoolin'," said Pete, "that makes kids smarter in farmin' than their parents and their parents' hired men. Gi' me another swig o' that lemonade, Jim!"

"You see," said Jim to his audience, meanwhile pouring the lemonade, "the centralizer creamery is uneconomic in several ways. It has to pay excessive transportation charges. It has to pay excessive commissions to its cream buyers. It has to accept cream without proper inspection, and mixes the good with the bad. It makes such long shipments that the cream spoils in transit and lowers the quality of the butter. It can't make the best use of the buttermilk. All these losses and leaks the farmers have to stand. I can prove—and so can the six or eight pupils in the Woodruff school who have been working on the cream question this winter—that we could make at least six cents a pound on our butter if we had a co-operative creamery and all sent our cream to it."

"Well," said Ezra Bronson, "let's start one."

"I'll go in," said Olaf Hansen.

"Me, too," said Con Bonner.

There was a general chorus of assent. Jim had convinced his audience.

"He's got the jury," said Wilbur Smythe to Colonel Woodruff.

"Yes," said the colonel, "and right here is where he runs into danger. Can he handle the crowd when it's with him?"

"Well," said Jim, "I think we ought to organize one, but I've another proposition first. Let's get together and pool our cream. By that, I mean that we'll all sell to the same creamery, and get the best we can out of the centralizers by the co-operative method. We can save two cents a pound in that way, and we'll learn to co-operate. When we have found just how well we can hang together, we'll be able to take up the co-operative creamery, with less danger of falling apart and failing."

"Who'll handle the pool?" inquired Mr. Hansen.

"We'll handle it in the school," answered Jim.

"School's about done," objected Mr. Bronson.

"Won't the cream pool pretty near pay the expenses of running the school all summer?" asked Bonner.

"We ought to run the school plant all the time," said Jim. "It's the only way to get full value of the investment. And we've corn-club work, pig-club work, poultry work and canning-club work which make it very desirable to keep in session with only a week's vacation. If you'll add the cream pool, it will make the school the hardest working crowd in the district and doing actual farm work, too. I like Mr. Bonner's suggestion."

"Well," said Haakon Peterson, who had joined the group, "Ay tank we better have a meeting of the board and discuss it."

"Well, darn it," said Columbus Brown, "I want in on this cream pool—and I live outside the district!"

"We'll let you in, Clumb," said the colonel.

It was remarked that a shrewd manufacturer of mechanical devices took six poultry journals and read them assiduously.

"Isn't that sort of thing a little out of your line, John?" asked a friend one day.

"Not at all. Helps me in my sales."

"As to how?"

"As soon as I learn a man has gone into the chicken business I call to see him about a tabulating machine."

Land Granted to Lafayette

In 1803 Lafayette was given ten different grants of land along the Mississippi river, and in 1824 he was granted one township which comprised 11,520 acres of land in west Florida. Tallahassee is now located on this site. It is impossible to give the locations of the other grants, as the land was not surveyed at that time except by special surveys, which were indicated by special landmarks.

The dog meat which enters into the dietary of the Chinese is obtained from a special race, raised for the purpose, of which the characteristic is the color of the tongue. Shall We Have A Poultry Show?—

Mr. Z. S. Cowart of Calera has suggested to County Agent Lauderdale that arrangements be made for holding a Shelby county Poultry Show some time during the coming fall. Mr. Cowart believes that there is nothing else that could be done that would so stimulate the poultry industry and the county agent agrees with him.

They would like to know what the people of the county think of the plan and at their suggestion the Reporter is again calling attention to it, and asking those who are interested to write to Mr. Lauderdale at once, a postal will do, and tell him what they think of it.

Timely Suggestions By Your County Agent

If you are interested in getting a good price on Calcium Arsenate, I would advise that you take advantage of the price offered by the Alabama Farm Bureau. You will note that the price is advancing, judging from this and the price quoted in February. I would like to urge that you place your order at once. By ordering individually inclosing deposit of 1 cent per pound, you can have your Calcium Arsenate delivered at your nearest railroad point. The following is a recent letter from Mr. O'Neal, President of the Alabame Farm Bureau:

"Effective April 1st, and for April shipments, price of Calcium Arsenate will be as follows:

"Carload lots, minimum 36,000 pounds, 11½c per pound delivered.

Less than 5 tons, 12½c delivered.

Cash deposit of 1c per pound is required with your order. If you wish to order some of this material, please do it through this office, sending us deposit on same. We are sending this information out to you as we get it. You will note this is a little higher than the price quoted in our circular letter of February 21."

I have had a number of inquiries from farmers in regard to fertilizer mixtures. Since it is impossible for me to see every farmer individually before planting, I am taking advantage of the press to give you the following mixtures for certain crops, as recommended by the Experiment Station, Auburn. Where you have speciel problems, if you will write me, I will see you personally in regard to same.

COTTON

Minimum: 200 lbs acid phosphate, 100 lbs. nitrate of soda, 25 lbs muriate of potash, or 100 lbs kainit. Apply all acid and potash at planting time, with ½of the soda; the remainder of the soda at first plowing after chopping.

CORN

On upland, where corn rotates with cotton or other fertilized crops, use 100 to 150 lbs of soda when plants are about knee high. On bottom land where corn grows continuously, or on fresh new ground, apply 200 pounds of acid phosphate at planting time, and soda as above.

SUGAR CANE

400 lbs. Acid, 200 lbs Soda, 100 lbs. Muriate. Apply phosphate and potash at planting time; ½ soda when plants are 12 inches nigh, and remainder when knee high; do not put soda on after this date. Soda applied early does not make syrup salty, it is the late application that has this effect.

SWEET POTATOES

100-200 lbs Soda (depending on natural fertility of the soil)

400 lbs Acid, 50 lbs Muriate.

Put the acid and potash under at planting time, soda when vines are one foot long

PEAS, BEANS, ETC.

Use 200 lbs of acid alone at planting time.

A few boll weevils have already been found; so the cotton farmer may expect to get ready to fight. The farmer should fertilize his cotton heavily and try to get on a good crop before the heavy infestation of the boll weevil.

OUR

CANDIDATES' COLUMN

Conducted By

B. O. BOWERS, Campaign Manager

Campaign members residing in the rural districts or nearby towns should mail their reports each day as they collect for subscriptions, using a bank draft of money order.

All reports should be addressed to B. O. Bowers, Campaign Manager, Box 22, Columbiana, Alabama.

(This column will be a regular feature every week during the Reporter's Salesmanship Club Campaign, and will have news that will be purely for the benefit of candidates. Don't fail to look for it every week.)

Candidates wishing to have their photographs printed in the Reporter will please send in a good kodak picture, or a photo, to the campaign manager, together with an appeal to your friends for their support, the article not to exceed over fifty words. No charge will be made for this service, as we aim to co-operate with candidates to the fullest extent.

DON'T BE A "YES, BUT'ER"

Bonehead University has an able faculty BUT "They Say" every student has a flask on his hip. The scenery between Columbiana and Birmingham is pretty but you encounter a few bad detours. I would go toc hurch every Sunday BUT I don't see the use of it. Josephine is a sweet girl BUT all the Joneses are given to violent fits of temper.

That is the way the "yes-but'er" reasons. He gives you a "yes" for tonic and a BUT as an antidote to keep it from having any effect.

"You can win one of the automobiles that the Reporter will award in a few weeks in its Salesmanship Campaign, "but"—

BUT you will have to work.

The yes-butter always sees the obstacle in the way, more plainly than the goal to be accomplished. And he doesn't think it worth while to try. The yes-but'er is never guilty of causing any progress in the world. The candidates already entered in this campaign cannot afford to listen to the yes, but'er, and neither can those who are going to enter later. The biggest winners in this contest will be those who are inspired by Mr. "Absolutely," who says "sure thing, go to it, "you know I can, and "H-no!"

Can you win? Sure thing! Is there a chance to lose? H—no! Go to it!

Candidates, you can secure the following supplies any time by writing in for them: Receipt books report blanks, self-addressed envelopes, sample copies of the Reporter; list of subscribers' names in your section who are in arrears. There has also been printed a bunch of letters for each individual candidate for the purpose of mailing out to relatives and friends who live at a distance, and whom it is not convenient to see. These are neatly arranged letters asking for a subscription to the Reporter, and has the vote table printed thereon, and a place for your printed name and address. In writing for them state how many you will need. Candidates will please use all supplies economically, as they are quite expensive.

Will you be the candidate to claim that bright, shining $20.00 gold piece, the added prize offer, on Monday morning, April 21st? If you want it, just hustle a little harder. Read full details about it on page 1.

Canndidates, the difference between a 1-year subscription and a 5-year subscription during the first period is exactly 38,500 votes. In other words, a 5-year subscription gives you as many votes as 27 1-year subscriptions. Had you thought of this before? Take advantage of it from now on.

Suggestion—Let the other fellow become discouraged over the rumors floating around, while you go ahead and pass him by. Remember the fable of the tortoise and the hare? Remember how that race ended, don't you? All right then, keep plodding on.

H. L. D. PHILLIPS DIES IN ARIZONA

The following account of the death of H. L. D. Phillips, a former citizen of Shelby County, is taken from the Prescot, (Arizona) Journal of March 24.

"While performing his duties in front of the store he has conducted the last 10 years, H. L. D. Phillips collapsed to the sidewalk at 10:30 o'clock yesterday morning. A physician was called, pronouncing him dead from heart failure.

Death was entirely unexpected. Mr. Phillips, who was 55 years old, was feeling in the best of health earlier in the morning. He was washing the windows of his store at Willis and Cortez streets when he reeled, as if dizzy, staggered a few steps and fell.

A widow and five children survive: Mrs. Lena Phillips, Misses Lois and Alice and Thomas, J. L. and Melvin the last mentioned residing in Pheonix."

Mr. Phillips formerly made his home in the Kingdom community. He was at one time supervisor of roads of Shelby county and is remembered as a useful and good citizen. He left Shelby county in 1914 because of failing health.

Frederick Koenig, Jr., brought in three subscriptions last week and received as a premium a fountain pen.

At the Methodist Sunday school in Columbiana last Sunday 122 members and 7 visitors were present. Thirty four members were absent and the collection was $8.66

"Hoppin' the Freight"

Statistics show that the safest way to travel is on the modern railroad train—the percentage of injuries from accidents being the lowest.

More than 83,000 people are killed in the United States every year by accidents. Of this number less than 8½% are killed by the railroads.

"Hoppin' the freight" is a contributing factor to these accidents; one of the dangerous practices that the L. & N. Railroad is endeavoring to correct; one of many obstacles that the Road is striving to overcome in its unceasing fight for public safety. Every L. & N. station master—and train employee as well—is charged with the special duty of watching boys around the stations, to keep them from "hoppin' the freight", and other such hazardous pastimes. And it is a hard job.

Some accidents cannot be prevented; they are unavoidable. But "hoppin' the freight" and many other seemingly petty violations of railroad rules are unnecessary and preventable; and can be reduced to a minimum only by intelligent co-operation on the part of the public.

The traveler who boards the moving train; the man who can't wait until the car stops before he alights, and the motorist who neither stops, looks, nor listens at railroad crossings—each is needlessly imperiling his life, as much as is the boy who "steals a ride" on a freight. They, like the youth, too often disregard the warnings of safety until serious injury or death makes it impossible to continue these risky habits.

The L. & N. is constantly installing new and modern devices for the safety of its passengers. Therefore, if you yourself will be careful and take no unnecessary chances when on or near railroad property, you will help to reduce the number of accidents and injuries.

MY DAUGHTER WOULD CRY AT EVERYTHING

Nervous and Irritable. By Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Became Entirely Normal

Clinton, Wisconsin.—"My daughter was in a very run-down condition, and was irritable, and would cry at every little thing she was so weak and nervous. As Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had helped me when I was a girl I gave it to her to build her up, and the results were all that we could wish for. I wish that every mother with growing girls would try it for these troubles girls often have. I had taken it myself before my girl was born, and she was one of the nicest babies any one could wish to have. I recommend the Vegetable Compound to women and girls and cannot praise it too highly."—Mrs. I. A. HOLFORD, Box 48, Clinton, Wisconsin.

Mothers can depend upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to relieve their daughters of those troubles they so often have. They know from experience the value of the Vegetable Compound in the treatment of these complaints and many, like Mrs. Holford, give it to their daughters.

Zebu for Farms

The outlandish-looking zebu, reminiscent of zoological gardens and the circus, soon may be seen in many American farmyards. It has been found that by crossing the zebu with our familiar breeds of cattle an animal is produced which is immune to the diseases and plagues to which cows are heir. The milk yield is equal to that of a normal Holstein.

The zebu is a native of India, and has lived for centuries under conditions which would prove fatal to ordinary cattle. It is immune to the most intense heat, and thrives when ordinary American cattle quickly would succumb. It will withstand long periods of drought and consequent lack of fodder.

Many a man's veracity is unimpeachable until he acquires the fishing habit.

Telephone Voice

Tests prove that the human voice can be transmitted by telephone clearly only when the speaker's mouth is close to the transmitter. To speak four inches from the instrument is equivalent to lengthening the line more than 200 miles; two inches away, 128 miles. Lower-pitched tones are transmitted better than those of a high pitch.

CHENEY'S A "FIRST AID" TO MOTHERS

Old-Time Cough Remedy Can Always Be Relied on When Cold Winds Blow

Where there are children in the home mother needs a "first aid" ready at hand, because the little ones are so liable to trouble of some kind, especially when the weather is bad and cold winds are blowing. Coughs and colds are common; croup, quinsy and other affections of the throat suddenly lay hold of one or more of them; when whooping cough appears they will all have it, and you never can tell when one or the other of these children's maladies is going to strike your family.

Therefore the wisest policy is to be forearmed so as to ward off the attack at the very first sign of its coming. Cheney's Expectorant has long been known as mother's "First Aid," for if given in time it checks the trouble and saves many hours of anxious care on mother's part, as well as unnecessary suffering on the part of the little ones.

Away back in grandma's day mothers saved their little ones from many a hard attack by promptly giving them Cheney's Expectorant, and for more than sixty years it has been a blessing to the little folks.

Sold by all druggists and in smaller towns by general merchants in 30c and 60c bottles.—Advertisement.

For Doors That Stick

If you would avoid in your home the nuisance of doors that stick in moist weather, paint or varnish the tops and bottoms—places that are usually neglected because they don't show. These hidden edges, if not painted, are vulnerable points where the wood absorbs or loses moisture rapidly. Special danger points are the ends of the outside uprights, where the wood grain is exposed.—Popular Science Monthly.

If Worms or Tapeworm persist in your system, use the real vermifuge, Dr. Peery's "Dead Shot." Only 50 cents at your druggist or 372 Pearl St., N. Y. Adv.

Lesson for April 6

THE KINGDOM RENT ASUNDER

LESSON TEXT—I Kings 12:1-33.

GOLDEN TEXT—"Pride goeth before destruction, and an haughty spirit before a fall."—Prov. 16:18.

PRIMARY TOPIC—The Story of a Foolish King.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Rehoboam's Folly.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Division of the Kingdom.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Why the Kingdom Was Divided.

The kingdom so gloriously administered in David's time reached its climax in the time of Solomon. Solomon was led astray through the influence of his heathen wives, and the kingdom had begun to wane. God had expressed his indignation toward him and made known the fact that the kingdom was to be rent from him, yet not in his time, but in the time of Rehoboam (I Kings 11:9-13).

I. The Demand of the People (vv. 1-4).

This was occasioned by the burden of excessive taxation and enforced labor, which was required by Solomon in order to build costly houses and temples for his heathen wives. Owing to the multiplicity of his wives, this became very burdensome. They promised loyalty to him on the condition of lightened burdens.

II. Rehoboam's Foolish Decision (vv. 5-15).

1. Rehoboam Consulted With the Old Men (vv. 5-7). These were men of experience who had been Solomon's advisers. They advised that the people's request be granted.

2. Rehoboam Consulted the Young Men (vv. 8-11). These young men had grown up with him, possibly were his half-brothers, sons of Solomon's many wives. Being thus brought up in the luxury of the harem, they were ignorant of the legal right of the people. Therefore, they advised even that the burdens be increased.

3. Rehoboam Followed the Advice of the Young Men (vv. 12-15). At the appointed time he announced his purpose to the people. He even answered them roughly, asserting his purpose to increase their burdens and sorrows.

III. The Revolt of the Ten Tribes (vv. 16-24).

Upon Rehoboam's announcement of his rash purpose, all Israel cried out, "What portion have we in David? . . . to your tents, O Israel."

1. Rehoboam's Attempt to Collect Tribute (vv. 18, 19). Adoram, his tribute gatherer, was stoned to death. So violent was the opposition on the part of the people that Rehoboam had to flee to Jerusalem to save his life.

2. Jeroboam Made King Over Israel (v. 20). They seemed to have lost no time in selecting a head so as to be strong in their opposition to Rehoboam.

3. Rehoboam's Attempt to Compel the Ten Tribes to Return to David (vv. 21-24). To effect this, he assembled his army of 180,000 men. Through the prophecy of Shemaiah, which forbade them to go against their brethren they were persuaded to return.

IV. Jeroboam's Scheme to Unify the Ten Tribes (vv. 25-33).

1. He Established Calf Worship (vv. 25-30). His pretext for this worship was his fear lest the religious unity should heal the political separation. His fear was that the people would go back to Jerusalem to worship and therefore would gradually be led to acknowledge allegiance to Rehoboam and his own life would be taken. He was too shrewd a politician to do away with religion. He knew that religion was a powerful factor in man's life. The prevailing religion of the world today is a political one. It is used as a sort of cement to hold together people and political interests.

2. His Scheme of Worship (vv. 31-33).

(1) He built houses and high places (v. 31). This was against the direct command of God. God had directed His people to destroy the high places, to break down the idolatrous centers.

(2) He made priests of the lowest of the people (v. 31). God had set aside the tribe of Levi to fill the office of priesthood. In this again he disobeyed God.

(3) He changed the day of the Feast of the Tabernacle (v. 32). The time of this feast was set by the Lord (Lev. 23:33, 34). Jeroboam argued that the change in the time would be better suited to their northern climate, but God who made the climate ordained the time of the feast. It was his business, therefore, to obey God.

(4) Jeroboam himself intrudes into the priest's office. This act of presumption on his part was the climax of his godless acts, which all grew out of his wicked heart.

A Good Policy

For this is my maxim. I hold that the party receiving an obligation should ever remember it, the party conferring it should forget it immediately, if one is to act with honesty, the other without meanness.—Demosthenes.

Are Found Together

Propriety of thought, and propriety of diction are commonly found together. Obscurity and affectation are the two great faults of style.—Macaulay.

BACK ACHY?

Lame and achy in the morning? Tortured with backache all day long? No wonder you feel worn out and discouraged! But have you given any thought to your kidneys? Weak kidneys cause just such troubles; and you are likely to have headaches, too, with dizziness, stabbing pains and bladder irregularities. Don't risk neglect! Use Doan's Pills. Doan's have helped thousands. They should help you. Ask your neighbor!

An Alabama Case

Mrs. C. J. Brown, Elm St., Tuskegee, Ala., says: "Sharp, stabbing pains came in the small of my back. When I stooped the pains became more intense and I could hardly get up or down. I had dizzy spells and headaches, too. My kidneys acted irregularly. I used Doan's Pills and they drove the trouble away. Backache left me, too."

Jars Sell for $2,600

Kano Oshima's collection of Japanese pewter tea jars, dating from the Thirteenth century, brought $2,600 for 56 pieces at the final session of the Oshima sale in the galleries of the American Art association in New York. J. Wood was the buyer. The session yielded $12,647 and the entire sales $38,102.

Miss Lucy Aldrich paid $260 for a cloth of gold altar cover, Seventeenth century. A Chinese rug woven in designs of animal figures, Eighteenth century, went to E. A. Bigelow for $200. K. Saito got a pair of bronze offering vessels of the Ming period for $300.

The Black Swamp

The Black swamp, extending from the Sandusky to the Maumee river, and covering an area of over 120 miles in length and an average of forty in width, was entirely avoided by early settlers in northern Ohio.

By an Indian treaty the United States government acquired a strip of land to make a road through the swamp, but nothing further than the preliminary surveys being accomplished, the land was later transferred to the state, and the first road was completed in 1827.

In accordance with a state law passed in 1859, a system of public ditches was introduced, which rapidly drained the swamp and transformed it into a fertile agricultural region.—Detroit News.

Great speed can be attained by experts on skis. It is possible for such persons to travel at the rate of a mile in a minute and a half. Leaps of seventy-five feet are no longer unusual. One of the greatest leaps ever made was by Regnar Omtvedt of Chicago in 1916—a distance of 192 feet 9 inches.

Don't Let That Cold Turn Into "Flu"

Rub on Good Old Musterole

That cold may turn into "Flu," Grippe or, even worse, Pneumonia, unless you take care of it at once.

Rub good old Musterole on the congested parts and see how quickly it brings relief.

Colds are merely congestion. Musterole, made from pure oil of mustard, camphor, menthol and other simple ingredients, is a counter-irritant which stimulates circulation and helps break up the cold.

As effective as the messy old mustard plaster, does the work without blister.

Just rub it on with your finger-tips. You will feel a warm tingle as it enters the pores, then a cooling sensation that brings welcome relief.

To Mothers: Musterole is now made in milder form for babies and small children. Ask for Children's Musterole.

35c and 65c, in jars and tubes.

MUSTEROLE WILL NOT BLISTER

Better than a mustard plaster

Beware of Alcohol!

Any man or woman who suffers with kidney trouble should not take medicines that contain alcohol.

There is an herb balm called Hobo Kidney and Bladder Remedy, famous through the Southwest for its healing properties—it is made from an herb plant that grows in parts of East Texas and Louisiana. It contains no alcohol, opiates, or habit-forming drugs, but does carry a powerful purifying property that has been used for years in the treatment of serious organic ailments.

It gives relief when other remedies fail. A treatment of six bottles costs $6.00 and is guaranteed to give satisfaction even in the most serious cases. If your druggist does not have it write Hobo Medicine Company, Beaumont, Texas.

Where Speed Makes Beauty

Wherever crystals form rapidly the shapes will be more beautiful in likelihood than when they form slowly. When they form rapidly they assume fantastic branching forms in some instances, but where they take a leisurely course of freezing or solidifying they tend to become more solid. That is one explanation of the beauty of the snowflake, which is a form of crystal.

Had a Tough Hide

The play was "Julius Caesar" and no expense had been spared in the production. But the effect of the assassination scene was spoiled when the trick dagger refused to work. As Brutus frantically jabbed the unfortunate Caesar with the obdurate weapon a boy in the galley remarked in a calm, interested voice:

"My word, 'e's tough!"

WHEN DIZZY--- BLACK-DRAUGHT

Arkansas Lady, Learning From Parents, Says Black-Draught "So Easily" Corrected Her Constipated Condition.

Farmington, Ark.—"I have been keeping house for nineteen years," says Mrs. O. J. Guilliams, of near here, "and since I began housekeeping I can't remember a time when we haven't used Black-Draught, for my parents used it before me.

"I had suffered so much from constipation and, finding that Black-Draught corrected this condition so easily, I just keep it and use it. When I get dizzy and everything goes round, I know then that I must take Black-Draught. It regulates me, my head doesn't feel so heavy and I get all right.

"My husband has found it so beneficial for sick headaches."

Poisons which may cause great pain and much danger to your general health are re-absorbed by your blood when not properly eliminated. Don't neglect your health.

Thedford's Black Draught acts on the liver and stomach, bringing on elimination, and, by regulating the action of the liver, when it is torpid, helps to drive out the poisons and tends to leave the digestive organs in a condition of healthy activity.

Keep Thedford's Black-Draught in the house. Take it at the first sign of constipation or liver trouble.

Millions use it. You should.

INSPIRING MEETING OF BIBLE STUDY CLASS

An enthusiastic meeting of the Community Bible Study Class was held at the Baptist church Thursday night of last week with practically all members present and a large number of visitors. Following a brief devotional service members of the class were called on for short talks in which they gave their impressions of the benefits derived from the work of the class. They were unanimous in saying that the work had been very helpful and that they counted it a privilege to have had part in it.

Following a brief intermission during which refreshments were served by a committee under the direction of Mrs. John Smith, the class heard Rev. R. L. Durant, the leader, give plans for the next series of lessons to be begun tonight.

A feature of the meeting that was greatly enjoyed was the musical program arranged by Mrs. R. L. Durant and given by an orchestra composed of Mrs. L. L. Saxon. Mrs. W. T. Taylor, Louis Averyt and Charles Horsley, accompanied by Mrs. J. L. Davis

In Memory of Lafayette Joiner

On the morning of March 5th the spirit of Lafayette Joiner took its flight. He had been sick for several weeks and his death was not unexpected.

In his early youth he was married to Laura Jane Davis, who preceded him to the Beyond about 12 years ago. To his wife he was a devoted husband during their stay together.

To this union ten children were born of whom one daughter and eight sons are left to mourn their loss. They are: Mrs. Carrie Davis, R 2 Columbiana and Hiram, Jack, Ruffin, Charlie, Obe, Duke, Dewey and Henry Joiner, Columbiana R 3. Besides these 15 grand children, many other relatives and a host of friends.

The example of Mr. Joiner's pure noble life was such that all who follow it may hope to meet him again. He walked the ways of the Christiann life and set a good example for his children and his neighbors to follow.

About 30 years ago he united with the Missionary Baptist church and for many years served a deacon of his church. He lived a devoted Christian life and had a smile and a kind word for every one.

In the death of Mr. Joiner our community has lost one of its Christian workers and a most beloved neighbor and friend. But he will not be forgotten; his kind acts and deeds will continue to live in the hearts of those who knew and loved him. At the resurrection morning when the Lord shall come to bear his jewels home, I do believe that Mr. Joiner will be numbered among those jewels.

In his last illness kind friends and children did everything in their power to relieve his sufferings, but in vain; his spirit took its flight back to the God who gave it. He had run his race, he had fought the fight and he had kept the faith. Our bright hope should be to meet him on the Golden Shore.

His funeral service was conducted by Rev. W. P. Hale, of Shelby, and his remains were laid to rest in the Davis cemetery. We extend heart felt sympathy to the bereeved family and relatives.

Nothing left but the inventory

Frequently farms are destroyed by fire so that nothing is left but the record of the farm's value and all too frequently no record exists. There is no way for you to prove the extent of your loss by fire to the insurance company and many unfortunate delays occur before you can make out the necessary proof of loss. If you do not have a good inventory of your farm values, send for the free booklet, "My Property". It is an easy way to make a record of everything of value on your farm—the buildings, their contents, live stock, your furniture, clothing, tools, machinery—everything.

Nothing left but the inventory

Frequently farms are destroyed by fire so that nothing is left but the record of the farm's value and all too frequently no record exists. There is no way for you to prove the extent of your loss by fire to the insurance company and many unfortunate delays occur before you can make out the necessary proof of loss. If you do not have a good inventory of your farm values, send for the free booklet, "My Property". J. O. Moore Met Tragic Death Last Sunday

J. O. Moore, of Westover, special agent of the L. & N. railroad, died Sunday morning of injuries received while on duty in the company's yards in Birmingham. He was struck by a string of cars, and dragged several feet. His skull was fractured and his right leg was broken.

Funeral services, held at Mt. Tabor church, near Westover, Monday were conducted by Rev. T. K. Roberts, of Columbiana. The Masonic fraternity of which he was a member, had charge of the services.

Mr. Moore lived in Columbiana for four years while he served as deputy under Sheriff J. A. Jackson. He had many friends throughout the county who regret his untimely death.

MR. DURANT RESIGNS BAPTIST PASTORATE

At the monthly conference of the Baptist church Sunday, Rev. R. L. Durant submitted his resignation as pastor to take effect not later than June 1. He gave as his reason for asking to be relieved of his work, the necessity for a change on account of the condition of his health.

In accepting the pastor's resignation, expressions of genuine regret were made by members of the congregation. John F. Averyt, a deacon of the church, spoke briefly, stating that he felt the church and community are sustaining a great loss in Mr. Durant's giving up his work as pastor of the Baptist church. He expressed his appreciation for the service Mr. Durant has rendered to the church and community during his pastorate, and pledged lasting remembrance of his faithfulness.

Unanimous endorsement by a rising vote was given Mr. Averyt's remarks.

Mr. Durant, came to Columbiana, his "old home town," more than two years ago. During that time he has served also the churches at Shelby and Wilton. In addition to his service as pastor, he has been a most useful citizen, taking active part in every movement of whatever kind that promised to promote the best interests of Shelby county and her people.

J. G. HENDRICK FOR BOARD OF EDUCATION

J. G. Hendrick of Shelby this week makes announcement of his candidacy for member of the board of education.

Mr. Hendrick has every qualification for this important place and if chosen to it, will, the Reporter believes, devote himself unselfishly to the work of building a better system of schools for Sheiby county.

J. A. McGiboney of Ebenezer community, spent Wednesday night with his son, J. E. McGiboney. He was returning from Childersburg where he attended the district conference.

NOMINATIONS COME POURING IN GREAT AUTO CAMPAIGN IS ON

Many Are Anxious to Help Their Friends to Win If They Will But Help Themselves—Now Is the Time To Get in the Game and Stick on the Job—Not One Cent to Invest—Just Your Spare Time and Energy—That's All.

(By B. O. Bowers, Circulation Campaign Manager)

If you were going to enter a race you wouldn't want to wait a second to "get away." You would want to get an even start with your competitor. You would be entitled to it. And you are just es much deserving of an even start in this great Automobile Prize-Winning Campaign. THIS IS THE DAY TO ENTER IF YOU ARE NOT ALREADY IN. It may be possible for you to enter a week later and still win, but your chances are much better if you start NOW.

One candidete in this great campaign will be awarded on May 10th at the rate of $150.00 a week—all for spare time end effort.

The easiest thing to do that you can think of is to take subscriptions to the Shelby County Reporter in this territory, because it is the ONLY and LEADING paper. You can take renewals or get new subscriptons. They count the same number of credits.

OPEN TO EVERY ONE

This great "Salesmanship Campaign" is open to every ambitious man or woman, married or single old or young, in this county. We say "Salesmanship Campaign" because that is exactly what it is. In fact, just about everything today that is worth while is salesmanship in some way or other. Potentially we ere all star salesmen, lacking only the big opportunity to turn this natural gift into profits. You may have latent powers within you, which when developed, will lead to heights of achievement and affluence.

Without investing one cent this newspaper offers you, for your spare time, the opportunity of earning a big material award and a reputation among your friends in the community as one who has the determination and the energy to do things. Experience is not necessary. All that is required is a little well directed energy.

PRIZE LIST A BIG ONE

On an inside page of this paper will be found the big prize list. A beautiful four-door Ford Sedan, fully equipped; a five-passenger Ford; a Columbia Phonograph; a high-class Radio Set; $50 in merchandise; that $40 gold bracelet watch; the $35 art spuare; $30 in merchandise; $25 in gold, and the $20 in gold, which is the 10th prize. The least prize you can possibly win—and that's big. Then comes the $500 in gold to be divided as commissions on a ten per cent basis. We have all read in history about the grand 'gold rush" to California in '49—but right here in Columbiana today is something that offers more than that. You don't have to drive the "Covered Wagon" across the continent to get here, and you do not risk your life with the pesky redskins, and the rewards are sure and big, and you don't have to dig one-thousandth as hard or as long.

For exampie, if you cannot give a great deal of time to the proposition you would be paid one dollar out of every ten you collected anyway, and in gold too; there is $500 of that, then the $25 and $20, and the extra $20 gold piece makes a total of $590 in gold to be liberally presented on May 10th to the energetic workers.

What more could have Mr. Fowler, the publisher of this newspaper, have done in the way of assembling big and valuable prizes? What more could he offer those who are willing to help for a few short weeks to build a bigger and better circulation on his splendid weekly newspaper? What more could he do for the community than to build a newspaper here that reflects the progressive spirit of this splendid community and that goes into the homes in every nook and corner of this trading territory? This is a community proposition pure and simple, and a proposition that everyone should encourage and lend a helping hand. It is a proposition on the part of the publisher to build a great circulation quickly, and at the same time pay those who help a greater wage by far than they could possibly earn in any other way.

GET IN RIGHT NOW

This is a special invitation for you to participate in this campaign. It is of such short duration that immediate action is necessary. Remember this is not a "beauty" or "popularity" contest. It is a straightforward business proposition. Someone in Shelby county will win these two automobiles and other prizes. This someone may just as well be you. In any event you can't lose by trying, as every candidate will be paid for their time.

SEND IN YOUR NAME AT ONCE

Participants ere expected and urged to send in their own nomination blanks. This is not a "please vote for me" proposition. It is SALESMANSHIP to the 'nth degree, and the best salespeople, men and women of determination hustle and stick-to-it-iveness will be paid for their time as they never dreamed of being paid before.

Call at the Reporter office, phone or write today—NOW—right at the beginning of the campaign. If you are 15 or 20 siles away, don't hesitate for one minute to telephone the Reporter office, 55, and call for B. O. Bowers, Campaign manager. Tell central to charge the call to this paper. Say that you are interested in this campaign and we will see that you are properly started. AN EARLY START IS AN EASY FINISH.

MR. PARKER WILL LEAVE SHELBY HIGH

Ralph E. Parker, principal of Shelby County High School for the past year, has submitted his resignation to the County Board of Education, effective at the end of the school year. It is understood that Mr. Parker has accepted a position with Simpson High school of Birmingham, where he taught before coming to Columbiana.

Mr. Parker has had a very successful year with the high school and has made many friends in Shelby county, who will regret his decision not to continue his connection with the school.

Mrs. Jones Will Again Write From Calera

The Reporter is very fortunate to have Mrs. Mary McKibbon Jones resume her work as correspondent for the paper at Calera. She is authorized also to accept orders for advertising, job printing and subscriptions.

It will be a kindness to Mrs. Jones and to the Reporter if the people of Calera will lend their hearty co-operation to her in this work.

A Correction

In a part of the issue of last week's Reporter there was an error in the advertisement of The Columbiana Leader. The price of Genuine Panama Hats should have been $5.50 instead of $4.50.

Mrs. C. P. Smith and Mrs. John Smith attended the district conference at Childersburg Tuesday.

If you were going to enter a race you wouldn't want to wait a second to "get away." You would want to get an even start with your competitor. You would be entitled to it. And you are just es much deserving of an even start in this great Automobile Prize-Winning Campaign. THIS IS THE DAY TO ENTER IF YOU ARE NOT ALREADY IN. It may be possible for you to enter a week later and still win, but your chances are much better if you start NOW.

One candidete in this great campaign will be awarded on May 10th at the rate of $150.00 a week —all for spare time end effort.

The easiest thing to do that you can think of is to take subscriptions to the Shelby County Reporter in this territory, because it is the ONLY and LEADING paper. You can take renewals or get new subscriptons. They count the same number of credits.

OPEN TO EVERY ONE

This great "Salesmanship Campaign" is open to every ambitious man or woman, married or single old or young, in this county. We say "Salesmanship Campaign" because that is exactly what it is. In fact, just about everything today that is worth while is salesmanship in some way or other. Potentialiy we ere all star salesmen, lacking only the big opportunity to turn this natural gift into profits. You may have latent powers within you, which when developed, will lead to heights of achievement and affluence.

Without investing one cent this newspaper offers you, for your spare time, the opportunity of earning a big material award and a reputation among your friends in the community as one who has the determination and the energy to do things. Experience is not necessary. All that is required is a little well directed energy.

PRIZE LIST A BIG ONE

On an inside page of this paper will be found the big prize list. A beautiful four-door Ford Sedan, fully equipped; a five passenger Ford; a Columbia Phonograph; a high-class Radio Set; $50 in merchandise; that $40 gold bracelet watch; the $35 art spuare; $30 in merchandise; $25 in gold, and the $20 in gold, which is the 10th prize. The least prize you can possibly win—and that's big. Then comes the $500 in gold to be divided as commissions on a ten per cent basis. We have all read in history about the grand 'gold rush" to California in '49—but right here in Columbiana today is something that offers more than that. You don't have to drive the "Covered Wagon" across the continent to get here, and you do not risk your life with the pesky redskins, and the rewards are sure and big, and you don't have to dig one-thousandth as hard or as long.

For exampie, if you cannot give a great deal of time to the proposition you would be paid one dollar out of every ten you collected anyway, and in gold too; there is $500 of that, then the $25 and $20, and the extra $20 gold piece makes a total of $590 in gold to be liberally presented on May 10th to the energetic workers.

What more could have Mr. Fowler, the publisher of this newspaper, have done in the way of assembling big and valuable prizes? What more could he offer those who are willing to help for a few short weeks to build a bigger and better circulation on his splendid weekly newspaper? What more could he do for the community than to build a newspaper here that reflects the progressive spirit of this splendid community and that goes into the homes in every nook and corner of this trading territory? This is a community proposition pure and simple, and a proposition that everyone should encourage and lend a helping hand. It is a proposition on the part of the publisher to build a great circulation quickly, and at the same time pay those who help a greater wage by far than they could possibly earn in any other way.

GET IN RIGHT NOW

This is a special invitation for you to participate in this campaign. It is of such short duration that immediate action is necessary. Remember this is not a "beauty" or "popularity" contest. It is a straightforward business proposition. Someone in Shelby county will win these two automobiles and other prizes. This someone may just as well be you. In any event you can't lose by trying, as every candidate will be paid for their time.

SEND IN YOUR NAME AT ONCE

Participants ere expected and urged to send in their own nomination blanks. This is not a "please vote for me" proposition. It is SALESMANSHIP to the 'nth degree, and the best salespeople, men and women of determination hustle and stick-to-it-iveness will be paid for their time as they never dreamed of being paid before.

Call at the Reporter office, phone or write today—NOW—right at the beginning of the campaign. If you are 15 or 20 siles away, don't hesitate for one minute to telephone the Reporter office, 55, and call for B. O. Bowers, Campaign manager. Tell central to charge the call to this paper. Say that you are interested in this campaign and we will see that you are properly started. AN EARLY START IS AN EASY FINISH.

MR. PARKER WILL LEAVE SHELBY HIGH

Ralph E. Parker, principal of Shelby County High School for the past year, has submitted his resignation to the County Board of Education, effective at the end of the school year. It is understood that Mr. Parker has accepted a position with Simpson High school of Birmingham, where he taught before coming to Columbiana.

Mr. Parker has had a very successful year with the high school and has made many friends in Shelby county, who will regret his decision not to continue his connection with the school.

Mrs. Jones Will Again Write From Calera

The Reporter is very fortunate to have Mrs. Mary McKibbon Jones resume her work as correspondent for the paper at Calera. She is authorized also to accept orders for advertising, job printing and subscriptions.

It will be a kindness to Mrs. Jones and to the Reporter if the people of Calera will lend their hearty co-operation to her in this work.

A Correction

In a part of the issue of last week's Reporter there was an error in the advertisement of The Columbiana Leader. The price of Genuine Panama Hats should have been $5.50 instead of $4.50.

Mrs. C. P. Smith and Mrs. John Smith attended the district conference at Childersburg Tuesday.

DR. ABERCROMBIE ON EDUCATION

SCORES EXISTING REVENUE SOURCES AND PREDICTS STAGNATION

SUGGESTS OTHER REVENUE SOURCES

Says Alabama Will Be Unable To Keep Up With Other States Under Present Conditions.

Montgomery.—Continued reliance upon existing sources of revenue for education will probably result in stagnation and retrogression in Alabama along educational lines, Dr. John W. Abercrombie, state superintendent of education, declared in his address before the opening session of the Alabama Education association. Dr. Abercrombie suggested and discussed several possible new sources of revenue for education, among them corporation, water power, severance, income, and inheritance taxes and an unearned increment tax, and appropriations from the federal government. No state depending solely upon such sources as Alabama now has to provide educational funds has been able to develop an efficient public school system, the speaker said.

While giving credit to the educational accomplishments of Alabama, Dr. Abercrombie brought out also the low rank occupied by the state educationally in many respects. The per capita expenditure for education in all states in 1920 ranged from $4.36 to $24.46, with Alabama's figure $4.55, only two states spending less, while the average was $11.43. "It is deplorable that Alabama still occupies a low educational status when compared with the other states, even the other southern states," Superintendent Abercrombie said. "This is true for the reason that while we have been making notable progress, every other state has achieved almost equal if not greater progress."

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF

City health officials, headed by Dr. J. L. Perdue, have opened a strenuous campaign against mosquitoes and flies in Greenville, and have issued orders for every property owner or lessor to remove from their premises any and all kinds of debris and weeds. The order will be rigidly enforced by the police, it is announced.

"Leila shot me" were the words uttered to him by Lucius B. Humber, declared Dr. R. F. Elrod, physician, while on the stand as main witness for the state in the second trial of Mrs. Leila C. Humber, charged with murder in connection with the fatal shooting of her husband near Girard in 1922.

Prospects that Alabama's delegation to the republican national convention in Cleveland in June will go uninstructed loomed strong as leaders of the so-called O. D. Street and Pope M. Long factions opened a spirited fight for control of the state convention which assembles in Birmingham on or about May 20.

A large trunk filled with quart bottles of imported whisky was seized at the L. & N. passenger station in Mobile just half an hour before it was being sent to Birmingham. C. A. Lewis, of Toulminville, Ala., who was caught checking the trunk, was taken into custody by the police and charged with violating the prohibition law.

Nomination of a Birmingham postmaster will be deferred by President Coolidge until after the republicans of Alabama stage their state convention in May, and, maybe until after the national convention which assembles in Cleveland in June, according to information given out by party leaders in close touch with Washington.

Ten thousand Birmingham school children have been vaccinated in the past two months and out of that number there has not been a single serious arm and only something like 30 of the vaccinations tailed to take, according to the announcement of Dr. J. D. Dowling.

John A. Rogers, chairman of the highway commission, was served with notice of injunction granted by Judge Roger W. Snyder of Birmingham, restraining him from letting the contract for construction of a road from Gainesville to Eutaw.

The Alabama Power company filed a certificate in the probate office of Etowah county showing that it had voted an increase of its capital by 300,000 shares of preferred stock, or $30,000,000. The recording fee and the state tax totaled $30,000.

Construction of a waterworks system at Auburn capable of furnishing approximately 360,000 gallons a day will be started in the Summer and is expected to be in operation by Fall.

Farmers in Cleburne county have made good progress preparing their land during the last week, the open weather having sent many plow hands afield.

The installation of machinery in the new hosiery mill at Tuscaloosa will begin April 21, and it is expected to have the plant in operation on May 1.

Tests are being made at Albany-Decatur of the new asphalt being laid by the Independent Paving company, of Birmingham. A large chemical house of Pittsburgh, Pa., has two representatives on the job. Engineers are greatly interested in the tests as the makeup of the asphalt and also the foundations of stone and concrete under it is a new invention credited to City Engineer M. S. Bingham. The final coat of asphalt is being called "Binghamite" in recognition of Mr. Bingham's service in inventing it.

Women moonshiners use the same methods in satisfying revenge as the modern housewife, according to federal prohibition agents who found their automobile hors du combat, after a raid in Gentry's Gap, Shelby county. Safety pins were stuck in the tires and other items of milady's apparel, such as combs and hat pins were entangled in the engine and other parts of the raiders' machine, the agents declared.

One of the leading features of the Alabama Educational association's convention which was held at Montgomery was the formation of the Alabama Academy of Science. This academy, similar to one formed several years ago, was organized primarily to promote individual research work in the state. It will meet once a year in conjunction with the annual convention of the A. E. A.

F. A. Davis, Federal highway engineer, has inspected both routes proposed for the Greene-Sumpter county highway and recommended in a report to the government that federal aid be denied if Highway Commissioners Rogers and Suttle carry out their plan to build in through Gainesville, Rogers' home town, instead of by way of Epes and Boligee.

Alabama produced 231,763 tons of pig iron in March, the record for the year so far, going above February by 12,405 tons, production being steady for 31 days in March, while February showed two days less. The January production in the state, with the same number of blast furnaces and the same number of days as March, is given at 225,556 tons.

According to news received in Jasper the Bankhead Coal company, of Jasper, has sunk a slope about one mile north of the Bankhead mines and four of five miles south of Jasper that will more than double the output of the Bankhead mines.

March set a new high mark for the state's production of pig iron, passing January by 6,207 tons and February, which had two less working days, by 12,405 tons. The total production for the month was 231,763 tons.

The government has appropriated $150,000 for vegetables and produce for the Summer training period at Camp McClellan, Capt. Walter R. Graham, camp commander, has announced.

The teacher training department of the Alabama Educational association at its annual meeting elected B. W. Frasier of Jacksonville Normal school, president, and R. H. Southerland, Livingston Normal school, secretary.

Talladega's long-sought water supply is now a reality. Water has been pumped into the new plant on the mountain by the new pumps, and in a few days will be turned into the city mains.

Receipts of the Birmingham post office for the first quarter of 1924 were $323,610.20, a gain of $47,227.14, or more than 17 per cent over the first three months of 1923, Postmaster R. B. Smyer announced.

Claiming that he lost $20 in money after being searched while in custody of Police Captain Luttrell of Attalla, Charlie Gentry is suing that officer and his bondsmen for $2,000 damages, alleging false and malicious arrest.

The police of Attalla made 54 arrests during March, according to a report made by Chief Burk. Every defendant was convicted by Mayor Erwin. Fines for the month totaled $1,449.50. A total of $986.79 was paid.

Different fertilizers will be compared and the value of poisoning boll weevils with calcium arsenate will be demonstrated on seven farms in Shelby county this year, according to A. A. Lauderdale, county agent.

Hideo Yoshioka, a Japanese subject, who created a stir among government authorities three weeks ago when he bobbed up in Birmingham without credentials, was started on a return trip to Nippon.

March was the quietest month that has been experienced in Huntsville in more than a year, according to the report of activities of the police department compiled for the month by Chief Hackworth.

Approximately 14,000 men of the regular army soldiers, national guard and civilians will be at Camp McClellan during the period between May 15 and Sept. 1

Madison county's jail is being given a thorough renovating, along with other clean-up campaigns in the city. The appearance of the building is being greatly improved.

The value of pruning and spraying fruit trees will be demonstrated in an effective manner in Tallapoosa county this year, according to F. G. Wrenn, county demonstration agent.

Only seven persons in Madison county subject to the income tax for 1923 failed to pay the amount due by March 15.

U. S. WAR FORCES TO BE MOBILIZED

DEMONSTRATION OF PREPAREDNESS SEPT. 12, DAY BEFORE GEN. PERSHING RETIRES.

By EDWARD B. CLARK

Washington.—This year on September 13 Gen. John J. Pershing retires from active service in the army. On the day before his retirement, September 12, which happens to be the anniversary of the battle of St. Mihiel in which the American troops wrenched the salient of that name from the grasp of the Germans, there will be mobilization of the military organizations of the United States.

General Pershing will return to Washington from Europe in April and then he will be asked to give final approval to the tentative plan of the mobilization which already has been given the sanction of John W. Weeks, secretary of war.

The plan for the mobilization of the troops, regulars, National Guard and organized reserves, was one of Pershing's own, for he suggested it some time ago as a means of demonstrating the practicability of the new military system as provided for in the National Defense act which was passed by congress three years ago.

The adjutant generals of all the states already have been notified of the plan and have been given instructions concerning the part in which the National Guard shall play. The arrangements for the mobilization already are well advanced. Under the law providing for national defense the service peace establishment of the United States includes the regular army, the National Guard of each state, and the organized reserves. Together these form the basis for a complete and immediate mobilization for the defense of the country in a national emergency.

Will Move as if Called to War.

Next September it is proposed that these three branches of the army shall move as if they had been called to service by a declaration of war by the United States congress. It is possible that the units of the American Red Cross will be brought into the scheme of mobilization. It also is possible that the members of the various draft boards that operated during the World war will be asked to meet just as they would if actual war had descended on the land.

There is a further suggestion, but it is somewhat doubtful as yet as to whether it will be accepted. It may be that the various posts of the American Legion will be asked to take part in the demonstration which is expected to prove that such active and reserve forces as we have quickly can be reinforced by former service men in time of the nation's need. Regular army troops will take part in those activities at the camps and posts where they are stationed which they would be called upon to engage in if an order for war mobilization had gone out. The whole thing will be done exactly as it would be done if war had come and the mustering of the defense forces were necessary.

The National Guard troops and the organized reserves will mobilize at their home stations and will prepare themselves as if in readiness for an actual call to war. The whole scheme is to test the efficiency of the plans of the general staff for action in case of threatened hostilities.

Military Parades Suggested.

It is more than possible, in order to give additional interest to the operation, that after the mobilization proper has been completed there will be military parades in the various cities and towns of the country which are in contact with the troops. It is not known whether or not there can be a demonstration of the industrial preparedness of the United States for war at the time of the mobilization of the troops. The War department has prepared a complete plan for the directing of industry into the paths of service to the country in time of war. It readily can be understood, however, that a demonstration of this kind of preparedness is much more difficult than one which is purely military.

Plans for industrial mobilization have been drawn and the industrial chieftains of the country already understand the situation and know what is expected of industry in case war shall come. It is the hope of the government authorities that if another national emergency shall arise the delays and the mistakes of 1917 can be avoided.

The whole plan is to have the country in all its ramifications of military man-power and industrial man-power prepared to give itself instantly to the service of the government. It is fully expected in Washington that as soon as the peace societies, the I. W. W.'s, and the communists catch sight of the uniforms on September 12, a wail will go up that the United States is preparing to become militaristic in endeavor and in practice. This of course is expected and has been discounted in advance.

The entire work of the government authorities has been simply to make it certain that if war is forced on Uncle Sam, he shall have proper means at hand to protect himself from invasion and to save his land and his properties from the enemy.

Convention Gossip.

Politicians here seem to think that the nomination of Calvin Coolidge is assured beyond the peradventure of a doubt. There are some others who say that these Coolidge optimists are reckoning without their Johnson, and mayhap they are right, but nevertheless the hard fact is that Washington generally thinks the President has the nomination cinched.

Frankly speaking, the interest in the Republican nomination is at ebb tide because of the seeming assurance that everything is to go through in a Coolidge way. The Democratic situation, however, is utterly different. The national convention of the present minority party is only three months in the future, and yet today there isn't enough assurance of the success of any one candidate to warrant men so inclined to lay bets even at great odds on the likely victory of any man thus far named in the high nomination connection.

The Democratic national committee is extraordinarily busy with its printing press and its typewriter, but it is refraining from the production of anything which even by indirection can be construed as propaganda in behalf of any specific candidate for convention honors. The committee has found what it seems to think is material enough for party profit in the investigations which are now being made into the doings within certain of the departments under the direction of cabinet officers who are accused of indiscretions and worse.

No Republican here seems to care to deny that the Democratic prospects of victory in the next campaign have been increased somewhat by the atmosphere of suspicion which has been created and still is encompassing one or two departments of government, but every Republican also insists that so far as all matters are concerned, Democratic prominent ones have been implicated to a degree only slightly less than that which seemingly has marked the doings of certain Republican chieftains.

It is an old story now, but the oil disclosures seemingly have eliminated one chief Democratic candidate for the presidential nomination from the field of probable or even possible success. The elimination of one, however, counts for little except for the fact that the eliminated is the man who seemed at one time most likely to secure the nomination. There are plenty of candidates left to give the guessers and the "I am certain" ones opportunity to pick and to proclaim their favorites.

In the field today, with the situation concerning each one of them just about what it was two weeks ago are Oscar W. Underwood of Alabama, who has just captured the delegation of his state without the least trouble, although trouble was predicted for him; James M. Cox of Ohio, the defeated candidate of 1920; Alfred E. Smith of New York, whose stock recently has been looking up a bit; John W. Davis of West Virginia, one time ambassador to the Court of St. James; Carter Glass of Virginia, one time secretary of the treasury; Josephus Daniels of North Carolina, one time secretary of the navy, who says he doesn't want the nomination, and last, and for a long time least, Senator Samuel M. Ralston of Indiana.

Ralston Stock Going Up.

Nobody knows anything about it, but for some reason or other the Ralston stock has been mounting recently. Some Democrats seem to be looking to Ralston with approval because of the fact that he is declared to have no entanglements and that he will not have to make any factional explanations, and because also, as they say, he is a man who knows when to talk and when to keep his mouth shut, an accomplishment which is of high value in days like these.

Newton D. Baker of Cleveland, former secretary of war, has been mentioned occasionally as a proper Democratic candidate for nomination. Mr. Baker has shown reluctance, but there is some gossip today connecting his name with the vice presidential nomination. Mr. Baker, like his fellow statesman, James M. Cox, is an exceedingly strong advocate of American membership in the League of Nations.

There is a good deal of curiosity in Washington today as to what the Democratic national convention, in expressing its views on international affairs, will have to say concerning the league. Naturally, it is said that the league matter will not be treated as definitely affirmatively as it would have been if Woodrow Wilson had lived and had continued to be a dominant mind, factor in the situation.

Today there are evidences of renewed activities on the part of the league advocates. Recently the league, as it is at present constituted, has shown that it is a running concern and this fact probably will be used to strengthen the hands and voices of the delegates to the convention who are of Wilson thought on the whole international proposition.

Its Bad Habit

Passenger—Say, mister, what is the average life of a locomotive?

Engineer—Oh, about twenty-five years.

Passenger—I should think that such a tough-looking thing would last longer.

Engineer—Well, perhaps it would, sir, if it didn't smoke so much.

A Willing Helper

A burglar who had entered a minister's house at midnight was disturbed by the waking of the occupant of the room he was in. Drawing his knife, he said, "If you stir you are a dead man. I'm hunting for money."

"Let me get up and strike a light," said the minister, "and I'll hunt with you."—Midland Druggist

ELIJAH AND THE STRUGGLE WITH BAAL

LESSON TEXT—I Kings 18:17-46.

GOLDEN TEXT—"No man can serve two masters * * * Ye cannot serve God and mammon."—Matt. 6:24.

PRIMARY TOPIC—God Hears Elijah's Prayer.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Elijah on Mt. Carmel.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Conflict between Jezebel and Elijah.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—How Elijah Won the Victory.

I. Elijah's Message to Ahab (vv. 17-18).

When Jezebel became the wife of King Ahab, she waged a savage warfare against God's prophets, killing all she could find, thus seeking to abolish the true religion and set up idolatry instead. Elijah suddenly appeared, announcing the suspension of moisture (I Kings 17:1) as a judgment upon the people for their idolatry. He sounded three striking notes in his message:

(1) "As the Lord God of Israel liveth"—He knew that he represented the living God, therefore did not fear.

(2) "Before whom I stand"—Because Elijah stood before God, he could stand before Ahab.

(3) "There shall not be dew nor rain these years, but according to my word."—Drought was the punishment for idolatry (Deut. 11:16, 17).

II. A Challenge to Baal Worship (I Kings 18:17-46).

As soon as Elijah had delivered his message concerning the drought, he retired from the king's sight, while the penalty of the king's sins should be visited upon the land.

1. Elijah Shows Himself to Ahab (vv. 17, 18).

(1) Ahab's question (v. 17). His aim in this question was no doubt to intimidate Elijah, to awe him into submission. The devil goes about as a roaring lion (I Pet. 5:8).

(2) Elijah's answer (v. 18). He denied the charge and boldly declared that the calamity which had befallen the nation was caused by the idolatry of Ahab and his family.

2. The Bold Challenge (vv. 19-24).

(1) The people assemble (vv. 19, 20). At the urgent request of Elijah the king convened the people.

(2) The ringing call to decision (vv. 21-24).

a. The question asked (v. 21). Many of the people had not wholly forsaken God. They attempted to worship both God and Baal.

b. The silence of the people (v. 21). This may have been because of fear of the king, or ignorance, for many were of the opinion that to be religious was the only thing necessary, irrespective of the being worshiped.

c. The method of decision (vv. 22-24). Two sacrifices were to be provided, one to be offered to Baal, the other to God. The one who answered by fire was to be the God.

3. The Test Applied (vv. 25-39).

(1) Offering by the prophets of Baal (vv. 25-29). Elijah gave the prophets of Baal the first opportunity to prove to the people as to whether Baal was a real god.

(2) The offering by Elijah (vv. 30-39).

a. People invited near (v. 30). There are no secrets in God's worship.

b. The altar repaired (vv. 30-32). Elijah took twelve stones representing the united nation.

c. The offering on the altar (vv. 33-35). After the bullock was in place he had four barrels of water three times emptied upon the sacrifice and the wood so as to fill the trench about the altar.

d. Elijah's prayer (vv. 36, 37). This was a model prayer.

(a) It was based upon covenants (v. 36). All real prayer rests upon covenant relationships.

(b) Its object was God's exaltation (v. 36). Elijah was jealous for God's glory, but the only thing that he asked for himself was to be known as God's servant.

(c) It was for the salvation of the people (v. 37). His heart yearned after Israel. He wanted them to come to know God.

e. The result (vv. 38, 39).

(a) The fire of the Lord fell and consumed, not only the sacrifice, but the wood, stones and dust, even licking up the water in the trenches.

(b) The people fell on their faces and confessed that the Lord was the God.

4. The Execution of Baal's Prophets (v. 40). Israel's government was a theocracy. God was their King. Idolatry was treason against the King.

Electricity Part of Diet

Physiologists have come forward with the announcement that every one eats a little electricity all the while. The cells of which the muscles of almost all animals are composed are veritable electric batteries and this is true to a degree of vegetables. The electricity in a very general way is held by scientists to be a part of every one's diet. Some maintain that food which is not electrically active has little or no nourishment.

"Sure!" said Pete. "We hain't no more sense than to let any one in, Clumb. Come in, the water's fine. We ain't proud!"

"Well," said Clumb, "if this feller is goin' to do school work of this kind, I want in the district, too."

"We'll come to that one of these days," said Jim. "The district is too small."

Wilbur Smythe's car stopped at the distant gate and honked for him—a signal which broke up the party. Haakon Peterson passed the word to the colonel and Mr. Bronson for a board meeting the next evening. The picnic broke up in a dispersion of staid married couples to their homes, and young folks in top buggies to dances and displays of fireworks in the surrounding villages.

Jim walked across the fields to his home—neither old nor young, having neither sweetheart with whom to dance nor farm to demand labor in its inexorable chores. He turned after crawling through a wire fence and looked longingly at Jennie as she was suavely assisted into the car by the frock-coated lawyer.

"You saw what he did?" said the colonel interrogatively, as he and his daughter sat on the Woodruff veranda that evening. "Who taught him the supreme wisdom of holding back his troops when they grew too wild for attack?"

"He may lose them," said Jennie.

"Not so," said the colonel. "Individuals of the Brown Mouse type always succeed when they find their environment. And I believe Jim has found his."

"Well," said Jennie, "I wish his environment would find him some clothes. It's a shame the way he has to go looking. He'd be nice-appearing if he was dressed anyway."

"Oh, then you haven't heard the news," said the colonel. "Jim's going to have his first made-to-measure suit for Ames. It's all fixed."

"Who's making it?" asked Jennie.

"Gustaf Paulsen, the Dane that's just opened a shop in town."

"A Dane?" queried Jennie. "Isn't he Bettina's uncle?"

"Ratherly," said the colonel jocularly, "seeing as how Bettina's Mrs. Hansen's daughter."

Clothes are rather important, but the difference between a suit made by Atkins, the tailor, and one built by Gustaf Paulsen, the new Danish craftsman, could not be supposed to be crucially important, even when designed for a very dear friend. And Jim was scarcely that—of course not! Why, then, did the county superintendent hastily run to her room, and cry? Why did she say to herself that the Hansens were very good people, and well-to-do, and it would be a fine thing for Jim and his mother—and then cry some more?

CHAPTER XVI

Jim Goes to Ames.

Jim had never felt more the upstart uneducated farm-hand than when he was introduced to that audience at Ames by Professor Withers, nor more completely disgraced than when he concluded his remarks. Even the applause was to him a kindly effort on the part of the audience to comfort him in his failure. His only solace was the look in Jennie's eyes.

"Young man," said an old farmer who wore thick glasses and looked like a Dutch burgomaster, "I want to have a little talk with you."

"This is Mr. Hofmyer of Pottawatomie county," said the dean of the college.

"I'm glad to meet you," said Jim. "I can talk to you now."

"No," said Jennie. "I know Mr. Hofmyer will excuse you until after dinner. We have a little party for Mr. Irwin, and we shall be late if we don't hurry."

"Where can I see you after supper?" asked Mr. Hofmyer.

Easy it was to satisfy Mr. Hofmyer; and Jim was carried off to a dinner given by County Superintendent Jennie to Jim, the dean, Professor Withers, and one or two others—and a wonderfully select and distinguished company it seemed to Jim. Jennie seizen a moment's opportunity to say, "You did beautifully, Jim; everybody says so."

"I failed!" said Jim. "You know I failed. I couldn't remember my speech. I can't stay here feasting. I want to get out in the snow."

"You made the best address of the meeting; and you did it because you forgot your speech," insisted Jennie.

"Does anybody else think so?"

"Why, Jim! You must learn to believe in what you have done. Even Con Bonner says it was the best. He says he didn't think you had it in ye!"

This advice from her to "believe in what you have done"—wasn't there something new in Jennie's attitude here? Wasn't his belief in what he was doing precisely the thing which had made him such a nuisance to the county superintendent? However, Jim couldn't stop to answer the question which popped up in his mind.

"What does Professor Withers say?" he asked.

"He's delighted—silly!"

"Silly!" How wonderful it was to be called "silly"—in that tone.

"I shouldn't have forgotten the speech if it hadn't been for this darned boiled shirt and collar, and for wearing a cravat," urged Jim in extenuation.

"You ought to 've worn them around the house for a week before coming," said Jennie. "Why didn't you ask my advice?"

"I will, next time, Jennie," said Jim. "I didn't suppose I needed a bitting-rig—but I guess I did!"

Jennie ran away then to ask Nils Hansen and Bettina to join their dinner party. She had a sudden access of friendliness for the Hansens. Nils refused because he was going out to see the college herds fed; but at Jennie's urgent request, reinforced by pats and hugs, Bettina consented. Jennie was very happy, and proved herself a beaming hostess. The dean devoted himself to Bettina—and Jim found out afterward that this inquiring gentleman was getting at the mental processes of a specimen pupil in one of the new kind of rural schools, in which he was only half inclined to believe. He thanked Jim for his speech, and said it was "most suggestive and thought-provoking," and as the party broke up slipped into Jim's hand a check for the honorarium. It was not until then that Jim felt quite sure that he was actually to be paid.

Mr. Hofmyer was waiting to give Jim the final convincing proof that he had produced an effect with his speech.

"Do you teach the kind of school you lay out in your talk?" he asked.

"I try to," said Jim, "and I believe I do."

"Well," said Mr. Hofmyer, "that's the kind of education I b'lieve in. I

"I Want to Have a Talk With You."

kep' school back in Pennsylvany fifty years ago, and I made the scholars measure things, and weigh things, and apply their studies as fur as I could."

"All good teachers have always done that," said Jim. "Froebel, Pestalozzi, Colonel Parker—they all had the idea which is at the bottom of my work; 'learn to do by doing,' and connecting up the school with life."

"M'h-m," grunted Mr. Hofmyer, "I hain't been able to see how Latin connects up with a high-school kid's life—unless he can find a Latin settlement som'eres and git a job clerkin' in a store."

"But it used to relate to life," said Jim, "the life of the people who made Greek and Latin a part of everybody else's education as well as their own. Latin and Greek were the only languages in which anything worth much was written, you know. But now"—Jim spread out his arms as if to take in the whole world—"science, the marvelous literature of our tongue in the last three centuries! And to make a child learn Latin with all that, a thousand times richer than all the literature of Latin, lying unused before him!"

"Know any Latin?" asked Mr. Hofmyer.

Jim blushed, as one caught in condemning what he knows nothing about.

"I—I have studied the grammar, and read 'Caesar,'" he faltered, "but that isn't much. I had no teacher, and I had to work pretty hard, and it didn't go very well."

"I've had all the Latin they gave in the colleges of my time," said Mr. Hofmyer, "if I do talk dialect; and I'll agree with you so far as to say that it would have been a crime for me to neglect the chemistry, bacteriology, physics, engineering and other sciences that pertain to farmin'—if there'd been any such sciences when I was gettin' my schoolin'."

"And yet," said Jim, "some people want us to guide ourselves by the courses of study made before these sciences existed."

"I don't, by hokey!" said Hofmyer. "I'll be dag-goned if you ain't right. I wouldn't 'a' said so before I heard that speech—but I say so now."

Jim's face lighted up at this, the first convincing evidence that he had scored.

"I b'lieve, too," went on Mr. Hofmyer, "that your idee would please our folks. I've been the standpatter in our parts—mostly on English and —say German. What d'ye say to comin' down and teachin' our school? We've got a two-room affair, and I was made a committee of one to find a teacher."

"I—I don't see how—" Jim stammered, all taken aback by this new breeze of recognition.

"We can't pay much," said Hofmyer. "You have charge of the dis-cip-line in the whole school, and teach in Number Two room. Seventy-five dollars a month. Does it appeal to ye?"

Appeal to him! And yet, how about the Simmses, Colonel Woodruff, the Hansens and Newton Bronson, now just getting a firm start on the upward path to usefulness and real happiness? How could he leave the little, crude, puny structure on which he had been working—on which he had been merely practicing—for a year, and remove to the new field?

"I'm afraid I can't," said Jim Irwin "but—"

"If you're only 'fraid you can't," said Mr. Hofmyer, "think it over. I've got your post office address on this program, and we'll write you a formal offer. We may spring them figures a little. Think it over."

"You mustn't think," said Jim, "that we've done all the things I mentioned in my talk, or that I haven't made any mistakes or failures."

"Your county superintendent didn't mention any failures," said Mr. Hofmyer.

"Did you talk with her about my work?" inquired Jim, suddenly very curious.

"M'h'm."

"Then I don't see why you want me," Jim went on.

"Why?" asked Mr. Hofmyer.

"I had not supposed," said Jim, "that she had a very high opinion of my work."

"I didn't ask her about that," said Mr. Hofmyer, "though I guess she thinks well of it. I asked her what you are tryin' to do, and what sort of a fellow you are. I was favorably impressed; but she didn't mention any failures."

"We haven't succeeded in adopting a successful system of selling our cream," said Jim. "I believe we can do it, but we haven't."

"Wal," said Mr. Hofmyer, "I d'know as I'd call that a failure. The fact that you're tryin' of it shows you've got the right idees. We'll write ye, and mebbe pay your way down to look us over. We're a pretty good crowd, the neighbors think."

CHAPTER XVII

Think of It.

Ames was an inspiration. Jim Irwin received from the great agricultural college more real education in this one trip than many students get from a four years' course in its halls; for he had spent ten years in getting ready for the experience. The great farm of hundreds of acres, all under the management of experts, the beautiful campus, the commodious classrooms and laboratories, and especially the barns, the greenhouses, gardens, herds and flocks filled him with a sort of apostolic joy.

"Every school," said he to Professor Withers, "ought to be doing a good deal of the work you have to do here."

"I'll admit," said the professor, "that much of our work in agriculture is pretty elementary."

"It's intermediate school work," said Jim. "It's wrong to force boys and girls to leave their homes and live in a college to get so much of what they should have before they're ten years old."

"There's something in what you say," said the professor, "but some experiment station men seem to think that agriculture in the common schools will take from the young men and women the felt need, and therefore the desire to come to the college."

"If you can't give them anything better than high-school work," said Jim, "that will be so; but if the science and art of agriculture is what I think it is, it would make them hungry for the advanced work that really can't be done at home. To make the children wait until they're twenty is to deny them more than half what the college ought to give them—and make them pay for what they don't get."

"I think you're right," said the professor.

"Give us the kind of schools I ask for," cried Jim, "and I'll fill a college like this in every congressional district in Iowa, or I'll force you to tear this down and build larger."

More nearly happy, and rather shorter of money than he had recently been, Jim journeyed home among the companions from his own neighborhood, in a frenzy of plans for the future. Mr. Hofmyer had dropped from his mind, until Con Bonner, his old enemy, drew him aside in the vestibule of the train and spoke to him in the mysterious manner peculiar to politicians.

"Yes," answered Mrs. Higgins. "When he starts to sing in the house now I can advise him not to tire his voice."

MARY SUCCEEDS ON MAIN STREET

By LAURA MILLER

MAHOMET AND THE MOUNTAIN IN MONTANA

Out between Plentywood and Panhandle was born the first vocational congress for girls. From Plentywood, 400 miles as the crow flies, to Montana State college, at Bozeman, girls make their way November after November, to satisfy the longing question: "What shall I do?" Others along the South Dakota line come 300 miles. Sometimes rail and auto bus connections are so poor that it takes three days each way for the trip, but they make it, these Montana high school girls, for what they find in the congress.

It may be just accident, but I don't happen to know of a single Montana girl drifting around the big cities hunting just any sort of a job. The first United States congresswoman, yes. The assistant director of a great bureau in the United States Department of Labor, yes. But drifters, no.

The personal story of Una B. Herrick may throw light on the willingness of Montana girls to make good in their own state. Widowed, left with a family and without money in New York, she decided first to leave New York. "Oh," she says, "I loved New York—I do yet! But my idea was and is that a woman can find a greater field of usefulness, more return in money, more friends and a saner sort of happiness in a small community."

Teaching, studying and "waiting my chance," she has come to be dean of women's work and social dean of the Montana Woman's college. The vocational congress came because Mrs. Herrick recognized the inspiration from knowledge of what other women are doing, that gets automatically pooled in big cities, and felt the shutoffness of Montana girls from this knowledge and inspiration. It was the old affair of bringing the mountain to Mahomet. Each fall distinguished business and professional women take their accumulated experience to the Montana girls. The impression one carries away, according to one of these visitors, is that all the value of the congress pales beside the value of the by-products now established—standards of dress, of conduct, of community recreation, and of democracy—shared by the girls themselves from year to year.

For herself—"No, I don't go back to New York every year now, like I used to. I'm more apt to go over to the west coast when I have a vacation. I look out across this country—anywhere this side of St. Paul—with a feeling of knowing every one I meet; of having the right to be a working woman; of being at home; of proprietorship. That's the feeling the West gives us."

PHARMACY COMPOUNDED WITH FRIENDSHIP

Wouldn't you expect the first woman in the United States who's become president of a state board of pharmacy to be a bit "hard boiled" and cynical? Or at least to hail from a city where she had a good acquaintance among other voting pharmacists?

Honors go to a citizen of New Prague, Minn. New Prague boasts of less than 5,000 citizens, of all ages and sizes. That has left plenty of room, apparently, for one citizen to spread—not cynicism, but enthusiasm.

Starting at fifteen, of necessity, Marie Piesinger, prescription druggist, put her heart into her work. "I have enjoyed every minute of it," she answers folks who want her formula for success in a new field for women. "I enjoy washing a showcase. I enjoy dusting a prescription bottle as much as I enjoy selling a phonograph in the gift shop annex for $295, cash in hand.

"You can make good anywhere. The small town offers the same opportunities the big city does—if you apply yourself and do your job well."

New Prague has received more than honor through her woman pharmacist. Marie Piesinger believes in her town, and puts the belief into practice. As member of the park board, and president of the Garden club, she sees to the planting of flowers in vacant lots where weeds grew heretofore. She holds a Red Cross medal for volunteer service rendered at home during the war.

But the real reasons for living and working in a town in preference to a city, are more personal, more vital to the philosophy of a friendly woman. They are, she holds, two. "First, personalities. You know the people, and they know you better in a small town.

"Second, your interest in the town is greater because it is your town. You are trying to build up, to see it grow and improve."

Rescued From Gutter

Leaves and debris in gutters are gathered by a new device on a street sweeper which throws them in the way of revolving brushes, these in turn dumping the matter into a box on the cart.

THE KITCHEN CABINET

WEEKLY MENU SUGGESTIONS

The planning of three meals a day for three hundred and sixty-five days takes some brain activity. To have the meals well balanced and avoid monotony takes study and thought.

SUNDAY—Breakfast: Scrambled eggs and bacon. Dinner: Sliced ham, baked. Supper: Rarebit with crackers.

MONDAY — Breakfast: Oatmeal, cream, French toast. Dinner: Meat with vegetables in casserole. Supper: Potato pancakes.

TUESDAY — Breakfast: Graham gems. Dinner: Cornish pastry. Supper: Baked potatoes with codfish gravy.

WEDNESDAY—Breakfact: Cornflakes with top milk. Dinner: Spareribs and sauer kraut. Supper: Waffles with maple sirup.

THURSDAY — Breakfast: Drop doughnuts. Dinner: Beefsteak with onions. Supper: French toast.

FRIDAY—Breakfast: Eggs and muffins. Dinner: Corn bread. Supper: Potato salad, sardines.

SATURDAY—Breakfast: Buttered toast, bacon. Dinner: Breaded veal chops. Supper: Baked pork and beans.

Slice of Ham, Baked.

Have a two-inch slice of the center cut of smoked ham, parboil it, turning until well-scalded through. Cover with brown sugar, five tablespoonfuls of sugar to one teaspoonful of mustard, add a very little water and bake in a deep granite pan, adding more water as needed. Some like milk poured over the ham prepared in this way.

Meat With Vegetables en Casserole.

Cut a slice of mutton into serving-sized pieces, brown in a little sweet fat, add a cupful of diced carrots, two or three onions and half a dozen potatoes. Place in a hot casserole, add enough water to keep from burning, cover and cook in a moderate over for several hours. Serve from the casserole. This is a nice dish for a busy day as it will be meat and vegetables all in one dish.

Cornish Pie.

Take a slice of round steak, cut in half-inch cubes, adding a generous amount of suet. Prepare sliced potatoes enough for the family and an onion or two thinly sliced. Prepare a rich biscuit, line the plate with the mixture rolled half an inch thick, place the meat in the bottom, vegetables on top, dot with bits of butter and add plenty of salt and pepper. Cover with top crust, leaving a vent, and bake slowly until the vegetables are tender. Remove from the oven, wrap in a cloth and steam ten minutes to soften and flavor the crust. Serve cut in pie-shaped pieces.

All kind things must be done on their own account, and for their own sake, and without the least reference to any gratitude.

A FEW SWEETS

A different pudding will be found in the following combination:

Butterscotch Pudding. — Melt one cupful of brown sugar and two tablespoonfuls of butter over the fire in a frying pan; when dark brown pour over the mixture two cupfuls of boiling milk and simmer until dissolved and smooth. Meanwhile soak a thick slice of bread in cold water until very soft. Squeeze out all the water and crumble into bits. Pour the milk and sugar mixture over the bread and add the beaten yolks of two eggs, a little salt and a teaspoonful of vanilla. Pour into a buttered baking dish and bake in a pan forty-five minutes. Beat the whites of the eggs until stiff, add two tablespoonfuls of powdered sugar and the juice of half a lemon. Spread over the top and brown in a moderate oven. Serve warm or cold.

A Sweet Sandwich Filling.—Chop three or four tablespoonfuls of pecan meats, add grated maple sugar of the same amount and just enough cream to make the mixture of the consistency to spread. Sprinkle with salt and serve as a filling for white bread sandwiches.

Eggless Nugget Cake.—Cream one-half cupful of shortening with two cupfuls of light-brown sugar. Sift together two cupfuls of pastry flour, one-half teaspoonful each of soda, salt, and one teaspoonful of baking powder; add one cupful of raisins, the same of nuts, mix all together and add two squares of melted chocolate, melted over hot water. Bake thirty-five minutes.

Persian Cake.—Cut a large round sponge cake into five equal round slices like layer cake. Spread the first slice with strawberry, the second with plum and the third with raspberry jam. Lay the four slices together in the original form and press lightly together. Now cut the center from the cake, leaving a three-inch border. Put the piece taken out in a bowl with fruit juices to thoroughly soak the cake. Replace in the cavity and place the last slice over all the top, and cover with a tinted pink icing; decorate with citron, almonds and candied rose leaves.

Three in School District

In a sparsely settled portion of Kansas there resides a man and his wife, with a son and daughter. This constitutes the entire population of the school district, and every year the man, his wife and son elect themselves as the three members of the school board. Then they vote a six months' term of school at $40 a month, and employ the daughter as teacher. Her only pupil is her brother, and he attends just when he feels like it. At least that was the procedure until the scheme was found out.

WHY THE REPORTER IS LATE

The Reporter comes out late this week because of circumstances which we could not control. The law requires that the list of qualified voters be published on or before April 15th. The list was not completed and given to us by the probate judge's office until Tuesday night of this week, and it had to get in this week's paper to meet the requirements of the law. It was not possible to complete the list and get the paper into the mails earler than we have done.

SHELBY COUNTY REPORTER.

Farm Bureau Organizes Poultry Marketing Assn.

A conference was called in Montgomery on April 1 and 2 for the purpose of organizing an egg marketing association.

This conference was composed of Farm Bureau officers, county and home demonstration agents extension specialists, county representatives, and others interested in better marketing of farm products.

This is the third marketing association organized by the Alabama Farm Bureau. The cotton and hay associations are now in their third year, and have been very successful from the very beginning. The egg marketing association will be similar to these, except it will be adjusted to meet the requirements of successful egg marketing.

Before the poultry industry in Alabama can succeed, it is necessary to produce a more uniform and better quality of eggs, and then market them systematically. This was the purpose of the recent meeting in Montgomery.

County representatives from 63 of the 67 counties were present at the meeting. A marketing contract was drawn up and signed by the poultry producing delegates. These delegates elected two directors from each district, as follows:

A. A. Jones, Cullman,
Randall Lynsky, Huntsville.
J. H. Parish, Headland.
J. J. Buell, Mobile.
J. D. Giles, Selma.
Mrs. R. M. Rawlinson, Millbrook
W. C. Batson, West Point.
J. W. King, Anniston.

The following officers were elected by the above directors:

E. A. O'Neal, President.
J. D. Giles, Vice-President.

The new association will be incorporated immediately, and will begin marketing eggs this fall.

Mrs. J. F. Pope, Wilsonville will represent Shelby county in the membership cempaign, which will be conducted June 1-July 15.

Let those interested in poultry give this proposition serious consideration between now and the time an opportunity will be given to become a member of the Association. We must put Shelby county in the front ranks where she belongs.

Pageant For S. S. Workers

An unusually strong program has been announced for the forty-first annual convention of Alabama Sunday school workers to be held in Montgomery, April 21-23. On the night of April 22 a wonderful pageant entitled "The Commonwealth of God" will be given under the direction of Prof. H. A. Smith who holds the chair of Fine Arts in Religion in Boston University and who is director of music at Lake Chautauqua, New York. Professor Smith directed a great pageant at Birmingham last year when it was estimated that at least 2,000 people were turned away.

There will be from 300 to 500 people taking part in the pageant at Montgomery including a chorus of more than 100 voices. Music leaders of the city are co-operating to make this the greatest pageant ever put on in the state.

Basis of Chewing Gum.

Chicle, the crude gum used as the base in the manufacture of chewing gum, is derived from the sapodilla trees which grow in the mahogany forests. The best quality of chicle is produced in the states of Yucatan and Campeche in Mexico, in Guatemala and in some parts of British Honduras.

Boys and Girls Club Is Doing Good Work

The Progress Boys' and Girls' Club held a very interesting meeting at the Progress school house, Friday afternoon, April 4th.

This club is composed of ten boys and six girls, who will carry on projects in corn, cotton, tomatoes and poultry.

The regular meeting was well carried out, including club songs, and yells, together with discussions of methods of fertilizing and planting their crops.

The boys and girls of this club are very enthusastic, and under the leadership of Prof. C. M. Nolen, will have a very successful club.

The club will meet again May 2, at 3 p. m.

Ticks Hinder Sale of Fine Cattle

Inquiry has recently been made concerning the purchase from Alabama College of one of the fine registered Holstein bull calves by a gentleman from Costa Rica, Central America. The ticks in the county, however, prevent the sale and this calf must be sold for a mere song as the college has no need for it.

Every cattle raiser in the county could have such calves but for the ticks. It is, therefore, quite pleasing to know that the people of the county are giving the question of tick eradication their hearty co-operation. Let us hope that in another twelve months this great county of ours will be tick free, and then we can ship fine stock to any part of the world.

Would You Destroy These?

Mining, Manufacturing and Agriculture are the basic industries of the nation. The progress and prosperity, yea the very existence of each and all of these, hinge on adequate transportation—of which the railroads furnish the greater part.

Those who thru ignorance and prejudice or from other motives, seek to further hamper the railroads by radical and destructive legislation, would at the same time undermine the very foundation of our basic industries. Destroy our railroad systems and you destroy Mining, Manufacturing, Agriculture. Impair the efficiency of the railroad systems and you retard the development and progress of these and all other sources of the country's economic well-being.

Study the facts and you will find that it is to your interest to give the railroads fair play.

Ford Proposal Versus Congressional Record

Chapter I.

A STATEMENT OF THE ALABAMA POWER COMPANY, SUPPORTED BY REMARKS FROM THE CONGRESSIONAL RECORD:

Senator Brookhart said in the Senate recently:

"I believe that if those voters knew how the figures of this Ford proposition a... gled in the majority report made in favor of the bill, they would all vote the other...

THE FACTS IN THE CASE.

Statements recently made by some of those interested in the Ford offer have criticised this company for having submitted its offer; for the part it has played or failed to play in the development of the State; the making by this company of a contract with the government during the war and other matters.

But it is becoming well understood by the public that behind the attacks on this company is the selfish ambitions of property owners at Muscle Shoals who will be directly benefited by the proposed Ford developments. They have from the first waged an industrious campaign of abuse, threats and villification against this company and against individuals in public or private life who dared to criticise the Ford offer in public or to oppose it as being contrary to the public interest.

There are some who believe that the Ford offer is best for the public, but very few have examined it or know just what it means to the public.

THE GORGAS CONTRACT.

The war-time contract of this company with the government made in 1918 gave the government the right to enter upon the company's land and construct an addition to its Gorgas plant and build a transmission line on its right of way 90 miles long to Muscle Shoals to supply power to the nitrate plants. In this the government expended $4,700,000.00 and the Power Company agreed to purchase the government's property after the war at its fair value. In due course this value was fixed by two government boards in 1923 at $3,473,487.25, and was paid to the government in cash by this company in September last. This was 75 per cent of the war cost, a greater percentage than the government received from any war-time expendture made by it so far as any records have been published. Statements made which question the fairness of that contract have heretofore been denounced by this company as false and untrue and made in reckless disregard of the facts, and that statement we now repeat.

Those interested in putting the Ford offer through Congress have for their own political and selfish motives attacked that contract, but that is merely a subterfuge to draw the public attention away from the real issue.

THOSE WHO ARE INFORMED SAY—

SECRETARY OF WAR.

"I think the Alabama Power Company, ... under the Public Service Commission of ... would be inclined to take a broad and gene... of any matter in which the government ... involved. Their record seems to indicate th... turned over property at Muscle Shoals to ... ernment at the beginning of the war, w... cost something like $500,000, and as far as ... been able to observe, I do not think they ... contentious about those matters."

MAJOR GENERAL WILLIAMS, CHIEF OF ORDNANCE:

"The government found itself very ... need of power. The Alabama Power Com... already projected this extension and all ... been drawn and they came to the assistan... government at a critical time, putting at ... sal their facilities and the plans which the... ready made." (All officials of the governm... had anything to do with the contract or ne... tiations with this company have never sp... erwise.)

REP. HILL, OF MARYLAND:

"A few years ago the secretary of war, Mr... considered the Alabama Power Company ... and public spirited.' Today it is attacked a... dy corporation by some of those who have a... the Ford offer. I wonder how Ford will be ... five years from now if you accept his offe... possible profit of 8 per cent on fertilizers a...

(Mr. Hill then read the letter from the ... Company to the government donating the ... Shoals dam site to the government on ... Power company had expended about $600,0...

"I never saw Mr. Martin before he ca... committee. I have never seen him except ... tion to hearings on Muscle Shoals. I do n... whether he claims to be a philanthropist o... here are the thanks of Secretary of War ... his company."

Official List of the Qualified Voters of Shelby County, Alabama

TO THE QUALIFIED ELECTORS OF SHELBY COUNTY

We have just finished the list of qualified voters of the County and it has been a very tedious, as well as responsible task. We have worked very diligently and have tried sincerely to give you a genuine bona fide list, but with all this, we expect to find a great many whose names do not appear on this, the original list, due to irregularities of the poll tax record. I wish to assure each one of you, however, that you have ten days in which to appear and show cause why you should be placed on the list, if you are not already there, and if you are found to be entitled to a place on this list, your name will appear in the Supplemental list, which will appear in this paper about the latter part of this month.

I am,
Sincerely yours,
L. B. RIDDLE.
Judge of Probate.
